BOXELDER BUGS THINK IT'S SPRING IN NORTH IOWA

Here's one for Mr. Ripley: Box Elder bugs came to life during the past week of warm weather in North Iowa! Quite a number were seen where the sun was shining on the south side of buildings.

North Iowa has sure had some warm weather the past week with temperatures well above the freezing mark for several days, and it was more like spring. But hold onto your hat, we now have plenty of winter in the making right now!

CAN FIND OUT HOW TO CONTROL BORERS

Hancock County farmers have an opportunity this winter to find out how to cope with two of their most serious crop pests, corn borer and weeds.

Paul Henderson, county extension director, today pointed out that a Pest Control Clinic will be held at Northwood, Iowa. These locations are within easy driving distance of Hancock County farmers, Henderson said. He thinks the effort to attend a pest control clinic will be well spent.

Clinics are half-day events. The formal program will be staged from 1:30 to 4 p. m. However, an informal question-answer period at each clinic will give the Hancock County farmers an opportunity to find out the answers to their specific questions.

The Pest Control Clinics are sponsored by the Iowa State College Extension Service in cooperation with local agencies. College exhibits will feature spraying, dusting, and residue destruction in corn borer control, the life cycle of the corn borer, a comparison of corn harvested from treated plots and untreated plots, and losses sustained by Iowa farmers because of borers. Weed control will include selective in-crop spraying, fencerow and roadside spraying and the foundation stones of any good weed control program--cultural practices that combat weeds.

NEW FREEZING BULLETIN

A new bulletin on "Freezing Meat, Poultry, and Dairy Products" is now available at the County Extension Office at Garner, according to Elsie Mae Van Wert, county extension home economist.

This new bulletin is published by the Agricultural Extension Service at Iowa State College. It gives information on wrapping, quick freezing, storing of meats, poultry, eggs, and dairy products.

The bulletin is free and available to anyone interested in freezing foods. Write or call at the office for it.

Mr. And Mrs. Ernest Helps Enjoying Sunny South

The Times received a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Helps, who are now located at Sarasota, Florida, where they expect to spend the remainder of the winter, as the salt air seems to be beneficial to Mr. Helps' health.

They enjoyed the trip going south and saw a lot of new scenery and now enjoy the climate of the gulf.

So that their many Klemme and Garner friends may write them, here is their address:

SEVERAL REASONS WHY EARS FELL OFF

Variety Doesn't Seem To Be As Important As Some Other Factors

Choosing a different variety of corn for planting in 1950 may not be the answer to avoiding excessive loss from dropped ears and broken stalks, according to Charles Hutchcroft, Iowa State College agronomist.

Tests in 1949 with 326 commercial varieties showed that not a single one was significantly better than the average of all varieties in any section when compared for dropped ears. There were noticeable differences between varieties, but the test indicates that date of planting, soil fertility, maturity of the hybrid and other factors are probably more important than the varietal differences in the number of ears dropped.

A farmer may be able to make some improvement over the variety he is now planning by choosing different varieties next year. But chances are the improvement will not be as striking as he might have expected from the appearances of varieties after the October 10 windstorm. For example, two fields of corn planted to the same variety sometimes showed a great difference in the number of dropped ears and broken stalks. These differences may have been due to factors other than variety.

Some Poorer

Between 3 and 4 percent of the varieties tested were significantly below average in their ability to hold ears. A farmer planting these poorer varieties could make an improvement by changing to a better variety in 1950. In other words, 99 out of 100 fields planted to these varieties would have more dropped ears than average.

There seemed to be more difference between varieties in broken stalks. In the same tests of these 326 commercial varieties, between 2 and 3 percent of the varieties were significantly above average in resistance to stalk lodging. Also in 99 out of 100 fields one could expect 4 to 5 percent of these 326 varieties to perform significantly worse than average in stalk lodging, Hutchcroft says.

Stalk Lodging Differs

The selection of a variety should, therefore, be of more importance for stalk lodging than for dropped ears. But, the tests show that differences are considerably smaller between varieties than one would expect by the appearance of the corn when walking through the field.

A large part of the stalk lodging and most dropped ear damage is due to the second brood of corn borers.

The ear shank is smaller than the stalk and the damage of one or two borers can be expected to be comparatively greater. This may mean that resistance to stalk lodging will be easier to develop than resistance to ear dropping.

Klemme Folks Interested In New Ohio Town, Their Former Home Town

Mrs. Harry Schuster sends an interesting and unusual item to The Times this week, as follows:

From the Walter Winchell's Column of December 30, 1949: "The most important "Baby" born on January 1 will be named Fairborn. It's America's newest town in Ohio, population 15,000. Two fine communities named Fairfield and Osborn consolidated. Fairborn, we are told, is the only town or place by that name in the whole world."

This new town is of special interest to the Klemme families. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Fuss came to Klemme from Osborn, and the Harry Schuster family came from Fairfield. Now their "old home towns" is Fairborn.

We Are Sorry, Don

Don Schaefer of Don's D-X ordered a new year greeting adv last week that somehow was lost in the scramble at The Times office. Sorry we missed you Don, but we know all your friends will except this explanation as your Happy New Year to all.

Has Been Resident Of Klemme Nearly Quarter Of A Century

It was exactly 24 years ago last Thursday, December 30th that Henry Jost came to Klemme from Lidderdale, north of Carroll, in Carroll County.

Then on January 1st Mr. Jost took over the mangement of the North Iowa Grain Co. here and was their manager here for 17½ years, when he retired from business.

During the nearly quarter of a century that Mr. Jost has been a resident of Klemme he has been active in the affairs of the community. He served several years on the school board and was president of that organization for a number of years. He was president of the school board at the time the new school building was being planned and built. Mr. Jost also served for several years on the Town Council and was a member of the Klemme Civic Club while he was in business. He is a veteran of the Spanish American War and is a member of the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Mr. Jost has always been a real booster for the betterment of this community.

LARGE CROWD ATTEND THE LEGION'S LAST DANCE NEW YEAR'S EVE

The Klemme American Legion gave their last dance at the Community Hall New Year's eve, as the building has been turned over for use of the school.

There was a big crowd present and all enjoyed dancing to the tunes of Earle's Orchestra. It was one of the best dances the Legion has held and was really a very successful closing of their activities.

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB MET

The Jolly Workers Club held their Christmas Party at the home of Luella Boelman Wednesday, December 14th.

All members were present and we enjoyed a lovely dinner at noon as each one of us furnished part of the dinner. We answered roll call by reciting a Christian verse. After the business meeting a social hour was enjoyed. We drew names for our new "Mystery Friend" and also for our co-hostess for the new year.

A gift was presented to Irene and Bessie Marshall as they are soon moving to their new home in Clear Lake.

We opened our Christmas gifts and we were all very much surprised to find out our "Mystery Friends" name.

The January meeting will be at the home of Nellie Ausborn, January 11 with Freda Lass as co-hostess.

NEW HAWKEYE SOYBEAN EXCEEDS EXPECTATIONS

Hawkeye soybeans exceeded expectations as to performance in Iowa in 1949, even the expectations of the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station men who developed the variety.

Hawkeye showed up better than expected on farms and in yield tests. In all tests Hawkeye averaged 31.9 bushels per acre compared to 31.4 bushels per acre for Lincoln. C. R. Weber, agronomist at Iowa State College and instrumental in the development of Hawkeye, says that in previous years, Lincoln slightly outyielded Hawkeye.

In northern Iowa where Lincoln normally is expected to equal Hawkeye in yield, the latter had a 1.1 bushel advantage in tests. In central Iowa, Hawkeye equalled Lincoln where it normally is expected to yield a little less. Even in southern Iowa where Lincoln is expected to top Hawkeye in yield, Hawkeye was only a half bushel behind. Hawkeye is a week earlier than Lincoln and stands up much better.

Hawkeye was well accepted by farmers, according to Weber. He estimates that it made 17 percent of the total bean acreage in Iowa in 1949. Hawkeye was first put in the hands of farmer in 1948. Weber estimates that Hawkeye acreage will be increased another 15 to 30 percent in 1950, possibly up to 40 percent.

Hawkeye is recommended to replace all of the acreage planted to Richland. "Anybody growing Richland can do better with Hawkeye," Weber says. On the average, it will outyield Richland by 5 bushels or more per acre and has more oil. Hawkeye matures the same as Richland, grows about 4 inches higher, and stands up as well. Pods set higher off the ground so there is less combine loss with Hawkeye.

Hawkeye is recommended for the northern one-half of Iowa and will replace some of the Lincoln acreage a little farther south, especially where prospects are for late planting.

The bride was attired in a floorlength dress of pale blue all-over lace. The bridesmaid, Mrs. Crosby of Des Moines wore a dress of all-over lace. Both bride and bridesmaid wore wreaths of rose-buds on their heads and had mixed corsages.

GAME OF THE SEASON HERE ON FRIDAY NIGHT

What is probably the toughest game on the Shamrock schedule this year will be the basket ball game here Friday night with the Ventura Vikings. This is a double header with a preliminary game between the Rockettes and the Ventura girls.

Ventura is rated as one of the strongest Class B teams in this part of the state this year and have a fine record. Klemme is also rated as one of the top B outfits in North Iowa, so this game should be a thriller.

Kanawha Here Tuesday Night

The Kanawha Bulldogs, another fast B team will play the Shamrocks here Tuesday night, Jan. 10th. The Bulldogs walloped the Shamrocks in an earlier season game and the Shamrocks are out for revenge.

WHEEL TOYS TEACH LESSONS IN SAFETY

Johnny's delight with a wheel toy, whether it's a 5-inch truck or a sidewalk bicycle, means an ideal chance for parents to give "safety education" at an early age.

Good advice is always easier to take in the form of fun, and this is true for children as well as adults. Mrs. Alma Jones, child development specialist at Iowa State College, points out that a game with a new toy can do a hundred times better job of teaching in an hour than days of "dos" and "dont's." She says the play hours of early formative years can stimulate interest in traffic rules and awaken pride in safe driving.

Toy models of automobiles, busses and trucks, tiny garage models, road repair sets with "stop and go" signals and "men working" signs can make the playroom a traffic scene which is a good setting for learning about safety.

But be sure to make safe driving a game, not a chore, Mrs. Jones says. Johnny will learn safety lessons better by "playing traffic" for fun; than if he is told its good for him or if adults order him to. He will take real pride in routing traffic according to official regulations if grown-ups are tactful about directing his play.

Holiday Fetes Basically Same

Food, Visits Common Mark of New Year

While New Year celebrations in all countries are basically similar, there are many interesting variations and special features. For example, the King's honor list provides great interest and excitement in England.

In France and Germany, the holiday is marked by festivities resembling those in the United States, and the great cities, such as Paris, take on a carnival atmosphere on New Year's Eve.

Poland, Lithuania, and Czechoslovakia observe New Year with a round of calls by the people, and with official receptions. In these countries, tables are piled high with food and drink and vast quantities of both are consumed on the eve of the new year as well as on New Year's Day. Gifts, too, are exchanged.

A gold coin is baked in a cake by New Year's celebrants in Greece. On New Year's morning the cake is cut into as many pieces as there are members of the family, and the one receiving the coin is considered to have much good luck in store for him.

Huge bonfires are built by peasants of Bulgaria as a New Year's greeting to their friends in near-by villages. It is on this day also that Bulgarians announce army promotions. Carol singing is an important feature of the Bulgarian celebrations.

In Sweden, one form of observance is that of high officials inscribing their names in a huge book at the palace of the king. This appears to be in lieu of an official reception. In this northern land it is the custom also to drive to church in sleighs early on New Year's morning. Torches are carried to light the way.

Scotch Unrestrained In New Year's Joy

The Scotch, who react with restrained enthusiasm to Christmas, welcome the New Year with all the joy and merry-making possible to their usually taciturn nature.

On New Year's Eve the wassail bowl goes round and round, filled with savory liquid, nostalgically fragrant.

Apples floating atop the wassail bowl stir memories of the "apple-howling" when boys switched the trunks of fruit trees petitioning a "good howling crop."

Somehow the "lamb's wool," as the decoration of the wassail bowl often is called, seems reminiscent of young folks rushing to the nearest spring at the stroke of 12 to drink the "cream of the well" because the first to do so could expect good luck for the ensuing year

Handsel Monday—the Monday after New Year's Day—is traditionally the "big day" for Scotch boys and girls.

CLOCK WATCHER . . . This is a typical Hollywood conception of what the New Year is like, but it probably won't make much difference to you in your celebration. And if you can't think of anything good about 1949, just remember that without it we wouldn't be having 1950.

Feasting Holds Important Place in Holiday Rites

Since both at home and abroad feasting is so much a part of the New Year observance, it is interesting to know something of the gastronomic trail of the seasonal dinners. For instance, the American in England on New Year's Day would find the chief dish a reminder of home, for it would be turkey, duck or goose. The chief difference would be the plum pudding.

THAT Lucky NEW YEAR

Omens of good and bad luck always have been associated with the New Year, all founded more or less on the supposition that supreme power was vested in an unseen deity who could bring good luck if properly appeased, and mete out punishments if offended.

Among the old superstitions are many quaint customs that have been observed for centuries and have come down almost to this day and age. They include:

To bring good luck, one must wear something new on the first day of the year. This is an old English belief.

In some parts of England and Scotland it is believed to be unlucky to leave the house on New Year's Day until some outsider has entered in.

There is also an old superstition concerning the weather told in an old legend as follows:

"If New Year night wind bloweth south,
It betokeneih warmth and growth;
If west, much milk, and fish in sea;
If north, much cold and storms there'll be;
If east, the tree will bear much fruit.
If northeast, flee it, man and brute."

It was considered unlucky also for one to make a present on New Year's until one had first been received.

Nations Have Own New Year Customs

Almost every nation on earth has welcomed the New Year with some form of ceremony, not, however, on the same date or in the same way.

The Druids celebrated the New Year on the shortest day of the year, the time, in their belief, when the sun which had turned away in winter then turned homeward, bringing with it light, warmth and good cheer.

The superstitions that cluster around the day began way back in the time of these sun worshippers when the priests led the people to the forests of the gods for small sprigs of mistletoe which would bring them health and prosperity for the year.

So important was the event the people marched in processions to the groves, led by the priests, and there the mistletoe was cut with sickles of gold.

U.S. Public Holidays All State-Proclaimed

New Year's Day always has been actively celebrated in the United States, and from Colonial times to the present it has been a day of great significance.

The Presidents have received the public at great receptions on that day, and the custom of visiting friends and relatives is one which has survived until the present.

In the "gay nineties" this visiting back and forth attained a tremendous vogue and the young blades of the city and town looked forward to the event with the keenest anticipation.

Still New Years' Day seems to be growing even more in popularity and the average American feels "lost" unless he has some plans to "go somewhere" and "do something" on New Year's Eve

Two-Faced Janus

The name January is derived from the two-faced god, January.

In mythology he was originally the god of light and day, but he gradually became regarded as the god of the beginning of things.

The beginning of the year was sacred to Janus and a festival in his honor, called Aginia, was celebrated. At the beginning of any important undertaking his advice and assistance were sought

Lincoln Held Significant Reception On New Year's

One of the most significant New Year's receptions ever to take place at the White House was held by President Lincoln in 1863. It was at noon, January 1, that secretary of state Seward carried the emancipation proclamation to the President for his signature.

"I have been shaking hands since 8 o'clock this morning and my right hand is almost paralyzed," the President said to Seward.

By BILLY ROSE

When Martin Quint, 71, married Ellie Reynolds, 34, their friends in Nyack didn't give the union much chance of success. Five years later, however, they were ready to admit they had been wrong—Ellie was doing a good job of taking care of Martin, and as for the old coot—well, he was a lot friendlier than anyone had ever thought possible.

On their fifth anniversary, Martin sent Ellie to New York on an errand, filled the parlor with gifts and paper curlicues, and invited a dozen neighbors in for a surprise party.

The plan was for a lookout at the railroad depot to phone when he saw Ellie get off the train, and then they would turn out the lights and hide. When Ellie walked in and turned them on again, everyone would yell, "Surprise!"

Billy Rose

Well, what happened was a surprise all right, but there was no yelling. As the front door opened, Quint and his guests heard Ellie whisper, "Sssh! He might be awake."

"I don't like this sneaking around," said the voice of a man. "Why don't you ask him for a divorce?"

"Think I'm crazy? He doesn't figure to live much longer, and I'm pretty sure to get the savings and insurance. Thanks for taking me home. See you Tuesday at the regular time."

Then Ellie closed the door and switched on the lights . . . .

AFTER THE embarrassed guests had left, she said to her husband, "I suppose you want me to pack."

"Why should I?" said Martin. "It's only human nature for you to take up with someone nearer your own age."

"Don't you want a divorce?"

"Not unless you insist on it. All I ask is that you stop seeing the young man as long as I'm alive. If you'll agree and put it in writing, I'll fix it so you'll get every cent I've got."

And that's how it was arranged. An agreement was signed and locked in the wall safe, and the couple went on living together.

Of course, the neighbors gossiped a lot, particularly when it was whispered around that Ellie was still seeing the young man, but their talk seemed to make no impression on Martin. Instead, he busied himself with a new hobby—the study of insects—and spent most of his waking hours in a spare room over the garage, mounting butterflies and beetles on small exhibit boards.

"I wouldn't mention this around," he told his wife. "As it is, people think I'm not quite all there."

One evening, just after Ellie had brought him the usual glass of warm milk, Martin began to have convulsions. Ellie phoned the doctor that her husband was having a heart attack, but by the time he arrived the old man was dead. The doctor examined the body, then called the coroner, and an hour later the corpse, together with the empty milk glass, was taken away.

EARLY THE following morning, a detective rang Ellie's doorbell.

"I have a warrant for your arrest," he said. "According to the coroner, your husband died of cyanide poisoning, and the drugstore in town reports that you bought a bottle of the stuff two weeks ago."

"That's right," said Ellie. "Martin used the cyanide to kill the insects he was studying. There are hundreds of specimens in the laboratory over the garage."

"I never heard of his being interested in bugs," said the detective. "Can I see this laboratory?"

Ellie led the way up the garage stairs and opened the door. There was nothing in the room but a few bits of junk and an old bicycle.

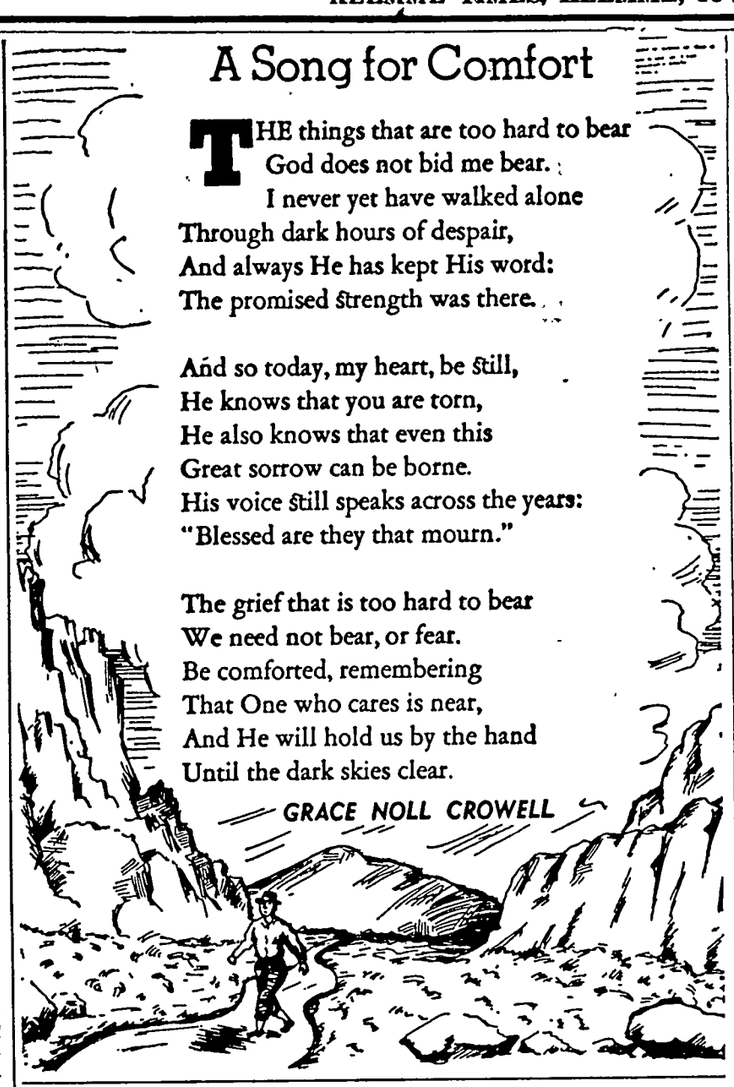
"I'm sorry, but you'll have to come along," said the detective. "You're the only person who figured to profit by Mr. Quint's death."

"I swear I didn't do it," said Ellie. "Both Martin and I knew he wouldn't live long, and we signed an agreement which explains everything. It's in his study."

She ran into the house, opened the wall safe and took out a brown envelope, but when she tore it open there was nothing inside but a piece of blank paper.

Blank, that is, except for one word penciled in a childish scrawl —"Surprise!"

A Song for Comfort



THE things that are too hard to bear
God does not bid me bear.
I never yet have walked alone
Through dark hours of despair,
And always He has kept His word:
The promised strength was there.

And so today, my heart, be still,
He knows that you are torn,
He also knows that even this
Great sorrow can be borne.
His voice still speaks across the years:
"Blessed are they that mourn."

The grief that is too hard to bear
We need not bear, or fear.
Be comforted, remembering
That One who cares is near,
And He will hold us by the hand
Until the dark skies clear.

The Church Dynamic

Lesson for January 8, 1950

THE CHURCH is not meant to be a club, a lecture-hall, a debating society, a rest home, a music hall, an entertainment bureau or a burial association. It has something to do along all these lines, of course. But the Church is meant to be a place and channel of power. One of the last things Jesus, the Founder of the Church, said to his friends was: "Ye shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you." Not—you shall receive comfort, or wealth, or other good thing, though all of them have their place. What Jesus highlights is power.

Dr. Foreman

Dr. W. M. Horton, in his little book on the Christian faith, asks: When is a church not a church? His answer is: When it has lost the Holy Spirit. That is a good New Testament answer.

The early Christians could not have imagined a church without the Holy Spirit, because in fact there had never been one without him. It was the coming of the Spirit on that summer day in Jerusalem that actually made the church, in the first place. True, it was not made out of nothing.

But suppose the Spirit had never come? What would have happened? Sooner or later the little band would have grown tired of waiting, would have given up faith in Jesus' promise, would have drifted off one by one, and the Christian church would have died after it was born.

Tongues of Fire

THERE SEEMS to be something mystic, mysterious and unreal about the Holy Spirit, to most people's minds. We read in Acts about the flaming tongues of fire, about the rushing mighty wind, about Christians talking in strange languages; and then we go to our own church and find there no fire, no wind; only ordinary English is spoken by everyday people, the same people we have been seeing all week.

We get to thinking the Holy Spirit is just something in the Bible, some experience they could have away back yonder, but not here and now. After all, looking over the church from that day to this, and around the world at the present day, how many cases, authentic genuine cases of fire-on-the-head or storm-in-the-church-house, do you find? Not many! Does that show the Holy Spirit is not here any more?

We must remember that St. Paul met with much the same questions. Did a man have to speak in strange tongues to be sure he had the Holy Spirit? Fortunately, Paul stated in so many words what the fruits of the Spirit are: Love, joy, peace . . . Look up the rest of it in Gal. 5:22-23.

You may take St. Paul's inspired word for it: If you ever see a church, a Christian group, that is notable for love, joy, peace . . . gentleness, goodness, faith . . . you may be sure the Holy Spirit is there. We do not gather grapes from thorns nor figs from thistles, Jesus says.

You don't have the fruits of the Spirit without having the Spirit. And that is Power. Said a great Australian preacher: Show me a church where the members treat one another with more real love than the people outside the church treat one another, and you will find men crowding the doors of that church to get in.

How Can We Get the Holy Spirit?

WE CANNOT GET the Spirit by wishing ourselves back in the first century. We can have the Holy Spirit now, on the same terms as always. There are no new conditions, no complicated rules, no application blanks to fill out. Jesus said: God will give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him; Paul said: Covet earnestly the best gifts.

In any church, if there is even a small group who want the power of God in their lives, who want his power for the church, that little group can change that church and change the community. Power passes through a wire when one end of it is attached to a dynamo and the other end to a machine that is doing some work.

Prayer—that is the touch with God. Service—that is the link with man. So power will flow through the Church when at one end it is in touch with God, and at the other end it is doing something real for human needs.

BENNY WISES UP

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

BENNY got a big kick out of eavesdropping on the sheriff. It smacked of adventure and the wild life he loved. He got a bigger kick when he heard Sheriff Conrad mention Slick Dearborn.

Slick Dearborn was the smartest outlaw with whom Conrad had ever had to contend. He was Benny's idol, for he represented the dangerous freedom of which the boy had always dreamed. One day three weeks ago Benny had seen Slick in the Faraway Saloon, and something about the worshipful look in the youngster's eyes had attracted the outlaw's attention. Benny had been almost speechless with gratitude when the outlaw spoke to him. They had a long conversation, and when it was over Benny knew a sense of importance that was almost the fulfillment of his dreams.

Ear glued to the side of the building, Benny held his breath while Sheriff Conrad and his deputy, Joe Hicks, carried on their low-voiced conversation.

At 4 o'clock that afternoon Benny drew rein in the secret canyon where Slick was hiding. He gave the secret whistle that he and the outlaw had agreed upon, then waited breathlessly.

Minutes passed and nothing happened. Benny moved down the canyon ways and whistled again. Suddenly two men emerged from behind a boulder. One of them was Slick Dearborn. Benny shouted at him:

"Slick, I just heard the sheriff and his deputy talkin'. They found out it was you who held up the stage last week, an' they know you're hidin' up here an' they're comin' to get yuh."

"You come with us," said Slick grimly.

"Nemmine keepin' guard," Slick called, and the other outlaw slid back to the ground. "We gotta get out of here and get fast. Kid, did anyone see you leave town?"

"No, sir. Not a soul. I done jest like you told me."

"Good. You're comin' with us."

The second outlaw came from behind a screen of bushes riding one horse and leading another. Slick swung aboard the extra animal.

There came the sound of a shot. The second outlaw uttered a scream, clutched at his breast and plunged from the saddle. A second shot followed, and Slick's mount went to its knees.

SLICK SWORE VIOLENTLY as Benny crawled up beside him.

"You damned little rat! Thought you said nobody followed you out of town?"

"Honest Slick—"

"Shut up!" Suddenly Slick seized him around the middle and leaped out of plain view of the two coming up the canyon. The pair reined in, holding their fire as the outlaw, using Benny as a shield, began shooting rapidly.

Sheriff Conrad and Joe Hicks, sensing the bandit's purpose, flung themselves from the saddle and scurried for shelter.

Benny suddenly understood the purpose he was serving, suddenly knew that Slick was using him as a means of protecting his own hide.

"Slick! Slick! Lemme go. They'll blast me down in cold blood!"

"Shut up, you rat" Slick brought the barrel of his gun down crushingly on the boy's head. Benny gasped, struggled feebly, then went limp . . .

When Benny opened his eyes he found Sheriff Conrad and Joe Hicks bending over him.

"Feeling better kid?"

"Ye-e-ss. I'm all right. Where's —Slick?"

"Taken care of." Sheriff Conrad eyed Benny intently. "Listen, Benny, you better get home before your maw begins to worry. You can say you helped us run down Slick Dearborn. Fact is, you did. When we saw you talkin' with him three weeks ago we figured somethin' like this, which is why we did some talkin' so you could lead us to where he was."

"Gosh!" said Benny. There were tears in his eyes. For the first time in his life he realized what a perfectly swell guy Sheriff Conrad was.

EVELYN KEYES bobbed up all over New York while on location for Columbia's "The Killer That Stalked New York"—during a traffic rush on west 47th street, in Pennsylvania station, in a tiny historic graveyard on the lower East Side. Just before fleeing through the graveyard to escape a detective, she had to scramble up and down a wobbly, rusty fire escape on a tenement. She did it over and over, for hours and hours, while bitter winds blew. Wound up with hands filthy and scraped and clothes unfit for further use. Meanwhile Paulette Goddard was urging her to come yachting in the Caribbean!

Jimmy Durante plays his first dual role in "The Great Rupert," the George Pal production in which he co-stars with Terry Moore and Tom Drake. But you may not recognize him. Jimmy always has yearned to drive a circus wagon, so he got his wish. At his own insistence, he was permitted not only to drive the wagon, but also to appear behind a luxuriant beard.

Mary Jane Higby also has been doing a stint in a dual role. The heroine of "When a Girl Marries," "Joan Davis," has been menaced by a tough waitress bent on blackmail. And the tough waitress—Mary Jane Higby.

Ever so often a radio or picture star is stopped by a policeman while speeding to an important engagement. The policeman recognizes the star—and doesn't give him a ticket. Anyway, that's the story. But Jay Jostyn, doing 45 miles an hour in New Jersey on the way to NBC, was stopped, recognized as "Mr. District Attorney"—and given a ticket!

A new cannine star is looming up—Chinook, who will be featured in Monogram's "The Courage of Captain Plum." Kirby Grant will star, and the picture, set to start January 11, will be filmed at Bart lett's Cedar Lake, Big Bear.

TIME TO START---

FIGURING TAXES

It's the first of the year and time to start figuring how much income tax your family must pay. Every homemaker will benefit by understanding how her family's tax money is calculated and where this tax money goes.

Perhaps no public affairs topic gets talked about more than taxes, and rightly so, says Fannie Gannon, extension home management specialist, Iowa State College. No one really enjoys paying taxes, but everyone benefits from the privileges they bring.

Homemakers should be interested in taxes for two reasons, says Miss Gannon. Often homemakers find that meeting the taxes requires careful management of family income and adjustments in family spending. They are often responsible for managing sizable estates.

Every time a homemaker buys groceries for her family, shops for cosmetics, buys gasoline for the family automobile, or takes the youngsters to the movies, she's contributing a little bit of her family's income to taxes. It's to her benefit to know the reasons behind the main taxes which her family pays and where the most of that tax money goes.

Public Service

At the present time a high proportion of our tax funds goes for protection. Much goes to the armed services for federal security, and a lesser proportion to the highway patrol and for local police services. Education, including library service, is a main benefit derived from taxes. Primary and farm-to-market road systems are maintained and improved at public expense. Tax money also goes for hospital and medical care, for welfare purposes, and for those services we expect of our government such as the postal service. Taxes also finance the farm price supports, federal and state agricultural research and other aids to farmers.

The three main types of taxes we pay are income, property and personal.

The sales tax is our everyday tax. Many states depend on it for an important source of their revenue. Points in its favor are that it is a good source of revenue and that it is easy and cheap to collect. On the other hand, the sales tax tends to burden lower income much more than higher income families.

Excise Tax

There also are federal excise taxes on cosmetics, furs, luggage, telephone, travel and certain other items. These excise taxes are sales taxes on a federal basis.

The general property tax is a main source for obtaining money to be used mostly for local benefits and improvements. The property taxes are levied by local governments. Iowa has not had a state property tax levy since before the war. Property taxes usually account for more than half of the state and local tax income. Since property values don't waver as much as personal income, the amount of money raised each year is fairly regular. This helps our government, but it may work a hardship to owner families in lower income years. Property is only one income-producing factor -- labor and management are also important.

Income Tax

Another source of federal and state revenue is the income tax, which reaches down into almost everyone's pocket. This tax is based on the idea that the amount of tax increase as the ability to pay increases—a point in its favor. Another good point is that it is shared by everyone. But, on the other hand, the income tax is sometimes a "fair weather" tax. In lower income years the government has to find other means for meeting expenses.

MORE FEEDER CATTLE GO TO IOWA FARMS IN '49

Light cattle slowed down on their move to Iowa farms after the big October wind. Feeders bought heavier cattle following the storm, observes Francis Kutish, farm economist at Iowa State College.

Although the late swing has been to heavier cattle, the number of calves that have gone to farms from the four major markets since July is up 35 percent over last year, Kutish reports.

He says that on a nationwide basis, feeder cattle numbers will be equal to last year's and may be slightly greater. Even though Corn Belt feeders slowed down on cattle buying in November, they set a new record this fall in the number of feeder cattle shipped in.

From July to Dec. 1, Iowa farmers have shipped in 42 percent more cattle than they did a year ago. The total number of feeder cattle shipped into the Midwest is up 24 percent over last year.

Kutish expects western feeder cattle operations to be big again this year, but not as large as in 1948. California feeders are cutting back some from last year, but they'll still be feeding more than in previous years.

HANCOCK DONATES $5,000 TO CROP

Donations in the Hancock County CROP campaign now total $4,929.58, according to a report released this week by Hilary Greiman, Garner, Hancock County CROP chairman. This is less than half of the county quota which is $12,600. Chaiman Greiman advises that the campaign will continue on through January and belives that the total will not be far short of the quota when all reports are in.

LIMIT CORN THAT YOU FEED TO COW

Down Corn And Large Supply May Tempt Dairymen To Feed Too Much

Experienctd Iowa dairymen are watching especially close winter to avoid too much corn in their cow's rations says Floyd Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

The cow that's turned in the field to clean up corn this winter or is being given a ration on the bumper supply of corn on hand may be getting more than the right amount of corn in her diet, Arnold says. He recommends not more than 50 percent corn in a dairy grain mix.

High supplement prices are another pitfall that dairymen need to watch closely this winter. High prices are a good excuse to feed less supplement, but a dairy cow has certain protein requirements that need to be met if she's going to pay for her board and keep.

Buy Cheapest Protein

Arnold suggests buying the supplement that contains the most protein for the money. He says a dairy cow can make use of one source of protein as well as another and lower feed costs mean less overhead.

The amount of high protein supplement needed varies with the quality and kind of roughage being fed, but it usually ranges somewhere between 100 and 300 pounds per 1,000 pounds of grain mixture.

A good winter ration for the dairy cows that are on low-protein roughages such as timothy or bromegrass is 500 pounds of corn-and-cob meal, 200 pounds of ground oats and 300 pounds of high-protein feed, such as soybean oilmeal or linseed oilmeal.

For high quality high-protein roughage such as alfalfa, corn-and-cob meal reaches its top limit of 600 pounds in 1,000 lbs. of grain mix. High-protein feed can be set at a minimum of 100 pounds, and 300 pounds of ground oats completes the mixture.

Other mixtures fall somewhere in between these rations, depending on the quality of the roughage.

Production Is Guide

Arnold says that roughage is the basis for winter dairy cattle feeding. If no silage is fed, hay requirements are from 2 to 3 pounds daily for each 100 lbs. liveweight. A cow that gets about 3 pounds of silage for each 100 pounds of liveweight will eat 1 to 2 pounds of hay daily for every 100 pounds of liveweight.

Grain can be fed according to milk production. A general rule that is suggested is 1 pound of grain for each 3 or 4 pounds of milk produced by Ayshires, Brown Swiss, Holsteins and Milking Shorthorns. He recommends 1 pound of grain for every 2½ to 3½ pounds of milk that Guernseys and Jersey produce. The amount of roughage a cow gets also affects the amount of grain to be fed and accounts for range in the grain-production ratio, Arnold explains.

Finishing An Attic

QUESTION: We are considering finishing off our attic. In each we placed louvres for cross-ventilation. These were put in to prevent the formation of condensation on the roof sheathing Should these be closed up before finishing the walls? We intend to insulate the roof.

ANSWER: Instead of closing the louvres permanently, have them fitted with doors which can be opened and closed by means of a long cord, and a catch for the opening and closing. In this way you can have the benefit of ventilation in the summertime and can close the louvres whenever you wish.

Toddlers' Election

Under the teaser headline: "Watch for political scoop of the decade!" The Eastwood Times, of East Syracuse, N. Y., launched one of the most interesting promotional programs ever conducted in that area. It turned out to be an election to determine the winner in a contest to name a baby "mayor," with the "Babycrats" versus the "Cribicans" in the balloting. Shown at right is Syracuse Mayor Frank J. Costello conferring with the winner, "Mayor" Elaine Potts of Eastwood.

weekly Picture story

● That "Mayor" Potts plans to keep alert to things which go on in her town is indicated by the keen interest with which she scans the issue of the paper which carried news of her election and other Eastwood doings. If an air of modest pride shines through her otherwise business-like mien as she looks over the situation with Mrs. Ann Halstead, publisher of the News, that's understandable, too.

● Freddy Ellis, 2, at right is the "president" of the common council in the municipal cabinet" of "Mayor" Potts. Freddy, who looks like a good mixer, received 1,234 votes.

● Now, here is a hard if there ever was He's Ricky Sharp, who is the "corin the infant elec- contest and he t seem to appreci- at all. CLAIMS ROYAL BLOOD . . . This young man says he is Prince Otto Wilhelm von Hohenzollern, youngest son of the late German kaiser. Now in Mexico City, he married Virginia Kirk of New Orleans recently. Hohenzollerns deny his claim.

NEW LIFE . . . Countess Edda Ciano, daughter of Mussolini, lives with her mother and brother on Ischia Island in full possession of her executed husband's wealth.

SCHOMAKER THROWS HAYMAKER . . . John Schomaker, union associate of Harry Bridges, testified in San Francisco trial of Bridges that he issued Bridges Red party cards several years ago and helped him solicit new members. Schomaker was a prosecution witness.

TIME MARCHES ON . . . Just on the off chance that anyone is wondering what a 1901 calendar looked like, here is an example, albeit partially obscured by a young lady in a bathing suit that definitely is not 1901 style. This also might make you think, as the world moves on toward 1950, that it's been a long time since things have been as simple as they were at the beginning of the 20th century.

New Year Is Age-Old Rite

The history of the celebration of New Year's Day takes one far back into antiquity, and encompasses many peoples, lands and customs. It is only in relatively recent times that the New Year has been ushered in on January 1.

This holiday has been a mobile one and various races have marked it at various seasons. For example, the ancient Persians and Egyptians celebrated New Year's September 22 at the autumnal equinox, while the Greeks did so at the winter solstice on December 21. The vernal equinox, March 22, marked the beginning of the year for the Jews.

The famous Pope Gregory, in 1582, instituted what has since been known as the Gregorian calendar. Europe during the middle ages had observed New Year's on March 25, but with the advent of Gregory's far-reaching time-recording system the day adopted for the beginning of a new twelve-months was January 1.

All countries did not adopt the change at once, but the Christian world accepted it generally in 1752 when the British Parliament finally established New Year's Day as January 1.

New Year's customs always have had a joyful theme. Few tears mark the death of the old year.

Everybody Works -FOR 52 DAYS

New Year's Day ushers in for Americans an average of only 52 working days.

No, that's not a misprint. The figure 52 is right, for all the rest of the days are holidays somewhere in the nation. And, to carry the hypothesis further, if all the legal holidays now observed anywhere were adopted generally, the average working week would be only one day for labor, and six for rest and play.

For after you leave out the Sundays and legal holidays which will occur during the year, there remain 52 days on which no one can find any excuse—except laziness—for not working.

Unlike almost every other country, the United States has no national legal holidays. All the public holidays in the various states have been declared so by state legislatures.

The President's Thanksgiving Day proclamation, for instance, makes the day he designates a legal holiday everywhere in the U.S. and its territories simply because every state and all the territories have passed local laws declaring that whatever day the President designates as Thanksgiving Day shall be observed.

All over the world January 1 is celebrated as New Year's Day except in England, Northern Ireland, Wales, in the Mohammedan countries of Hejaz, and in China

Founding Fathers Joined In Spirit of New Year's

New Year's Day long has been celebrated enthusiastically in the United States, and from colonial times to the present it has been a day of great significance.

The spacious days of colonial America made an especially vigorous and zestful setting for the celebration of New Year's Day and the founding fathers were not behind hand in entering into the spirit of the occasion.

OFFICE LATIN

In several previous articles I have tried to point out the advantage of getting business letters out of the Middle Ages. In dictating business letters, many a hard-headed executive thinks he is in the groove, when he is really in a rut.

Office Latin is a carry-over from the dear, dead days of elegance and grace, when letters were leisurely written in Spencerian curlicues, and when there was time to compose scholarly and highfalutin commercial prose. But both the typewriter and the efficient stenographer are here to stay, and Latin, the dead language, should be allowed to rest in peace.

We should avoid such archaic cliches as:

"As per your request." Per is Latin for "through; by means of; by." Hence, "as per" is nonsense. Such expressions as "per diem, per annum, miles per hour" are better usage when put into English. Say: Five dollars a day; ten thousand dollars a year; one hundred miles an hour.

"Viz." is the abbreviation for videlicet, "it is plain to see." The English "namely" is a better and more accurate word.

"Instant, ultimo, proximo" really belong in the catacombs. Instead of "your favor of the 13th inst.," say: Your letter of April 3, 1946 (or whatever the correct date is).

"In re" does not mean "with reference to." Re is the ablative of the Latin res, "a thing."

"Etc." is the abbreviation for the Latin phrase et cetera, which means literally, "and the others." It is a convenient abbreviation in such uses as: wood, steel, concrete, etc. (and other such building materials). But it should not be used thus: "etc., etc.," nor like this: "I remain, yours, etc."

There also is a real need for reform in the wording of legal documents such as contracts, insurance policies, deeds, wills, and mortgages, to say nothing of federal legislation, state laws, and city ordinances. They are worded so obscurely and ambiguously as to be entirely beyond the understanding of us plain people whose lives are affected or regulated by such instruments.

For free copy of pamphlet on business letters, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Frank Colby, in care of this paper.

Alhambra: My pet peve is that "lug" in "luxury." It just doesn't belong there.—E. B.

Answer: Right. The first syllable should be like "luck." The second syllable has the short "oo" sound as in "foot, book." Say: LUCK-shooree.

Detroit: On a recent Bob Hope broadcast, Betty Hutton, in boasting of her high social standing, said, "Why, I'm right up there among the hoi polloi." Didn't Bob's gag writters cause her to say the opposite to the meaning intended?—M. I. C.

Answer: Yes. The Greek term hoi polloi designates the masses, the common people. Its literal meaning is "the many"; hence, "the hoi polloi" means "the the many." It's redundant.

Omaha: Can you clear the terms "obverse" and "reverse" in designating the two sides of a coin?—C. S. S.

Answer: Obverse actually means "facing the observer." But in speaking of coins, the obverse is the side called the "face"; that is, the side on which the "head" appears. The "tail" side is spoken of as the reverse.

Erie: What is meant by a "10d nail"?—J. P. H.

Answer: The symbol "10d" means "tenpenny." Originally, "10d" or "tenpenny" meant "ten nails (of a certain size) for one penny." Nowadays, however, a tenpenny nail is a nail three inches long. The "d," meaning "penny" is the abbreviation for "denarius," an ancient Roman coin which is called "penny" in the New Testament, Matt. 22, 19: "Shew me the tribute money." And they brought unto him a penny."

Deer Now Pest in Minnesota, So Hunting Ban Is Lifted

Because of damage to agricultural lands by deer, Minnesota this year opened the entire state, except refuges and posted areas, with hunters permitted to take one deer of any sex or age. Frank Blair, superintendent of game, in announcing the season declared:

"To give the farmers relief and keep the herd under control we are opening everything. Deer are a real problem in farming areas. More complaints have been received on deer damage than ever. Something had to be done."

Chester S. Wilson, conservation commissioner, explained:

"Minnesota is in the process of correcting one of the saddest mistakes ever made in the name of conservation, namely, giving too much protection to deer in state parks. Permanent damage has been done to the parks by deer which have multiplied far beyond the capacity of the range to support them.

A Good Question

Yes, "Are you a safe driver?" is a good question that would prevent many accidents if asked, and adhered to, more often. When you're behind the steering wheel of a car keep it in mind. Doing so may save a life---a life that could be yours. ..And remember---to be a safe driver your car should be in perfect operating condition. Let us keep it in shape. Drive in regularly for thorough inspections.

Funeral Services Held For Wm. F. Ax, 71, Sunday

LIFE-TIME RESIDENT OF HANCOCK DIED FRIDAY
Was Retired Farmer, Lived Here Past Three Years

Funeral services for William Ax, life-time resident of Hancock County were held from the Klemme Methodist Church Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock with the Rev. E. M. Egeland giving the sermon. Singers were Mrs. Roy Arnold and Mrs. Vern Bisom.

Mr. Ax, who was born in Liberty township, had spent his entire life as a farmer in this community. Mr. and Mrs. Ax retired from their farm three years ago and moved to Klemme. Mr. Ax had been in apparent good health until a week before his death when he suffered a heart attack, from which he died Friday morning, Jan. 6.

Following is the obituary through the courtesy of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service, who were in charge of arrangements:

OBITUARY

WILLIAM FREDERICK AX was born on a farm in Liberty township, Hancock County Iowa, November 28, 1878, the third of a family of eight children born to his parents, Frederick Carl Ax and wife Christine Wiervil Ax.

He attended the Elltown Reformed Church with his parents and became a member of this church by Confirmation during the pastorate of Rev. Henry Treik. After his marriage he joined the Methodist Church.

In April 1902, at the age of 23, William Ax and Lydia Ludeke were married at the home of the bride's parents near Klemme. They commenced housekeeping on a farm 2½ miles north of Klemme as renters. They also farmed on other farms in this community and farmed three years near Becker, Minnesota. They then purchased the farm where they had started out as newlywed and continued farming there for sixteen years. Three years ago they built a home in Klemme and moved here in retirement.

The tale of his last illness is briefly told: a stroke on Sunday with a quiet and peaceful ending on Friday morning, January 6, 1950. He reached the age of 71 years, 1 month and 9 days and leaves besides his wife:

Five Children:
Elmer Ax, Klemme
Irven Ax, Klemme
Pearl, Mrs. John Neuberger, Brownsville, Texas
Ida, , Mrs. Leslie DeMerritt Klemme
Lloyd Ax, Brownsville, Texas

Three Sisters:
Mrs. Anna Walker, Garner
Mrs. Minnie Sandersfeld, Thornton
Miss Emma Ax, Garner

Also five grandchildren.

Burial was in the family lot in Hill Township Cemetery near Klemme, and casket bearers were D. P. Anderson, Benn J. Coobs, E. J. Arnold, Henry Busse, Harry Gibbs and Elmer Beier.

APPOINTED PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE FOR HANCOCK

Miss Faye Whittlesey, at one time employed in the office of Dr. H. J. Roddy at Mason City, has been appointed public health nurse for Hancock County. She succeeds Miss Harriett G. Oxley, who has resigned to take an administrative supervisory position with the state department of health with headquarters in Spencer.

Miss Whittlesey began her duties last week Tuesday. The appointment was made by the Hancock County Board of Supervisors in cooperation with the county health council.

The daughter of Mrs. O. Whittlesey of Humbolt, Miss Whittlesey is a graduate of Humbolt high school and the University of Minnesota, where she received her bachelor of science degree and of the St. Joseph's school of nursing in Sioux City. She received her field training in Du Page County, Ill.

MORE ACCIDENTS OCCUR INSIDE DURING WINTER

Farm accidents move inside along with farm work when winter weather takes over, says Norval Wardle, extension farm safety specialist at Iowa State College

He says early winter is a good time to take a look at ladders and stairways in the barn and in other buildings. Raised door sills and obstacles in feedways are another source of falls that may result in major farm accidents.

Falls were the No. 2 cause of accidental farm deaths in Iowa in 1948. There were 113 farm deaths attributed to falls that year while farm automobile accidents claimed 115 lives.

Barn stairway steps covered with hay or chaff are a major source of danger during winter months when livestock care increases chores and inside work. Wardle says it's a good idea to make sure ladders are far enough away from walls to allow the instep to carry the weight of the body.

Raised door sills are another important cause of farm falls. Both men and animals trip over these. The farm safety specialist recommends that raised door sills be removed and the door extended down flush with the floor to keep the building weathertight.

Loops of bailing wire left in feedways and walkways are another cause of tripping resulting in falls. Wardle suggests that all pitchforks and sharp objects be kept in handy racks where there's no danger of their being mixed up in choretime falls and accidents.

SUGGESTS USING HEAT BULBS TO HEAT MOTOR

Hancock County farmers may be able to save themselves some high tempers at reasonable cost by using heat bulbs in starting tractor and car motors in cold weather.

Paul Henderson county extension director, points out that a Webster County farmer is finding good results from using a battery of three infrared heat bulbs to heat the crankcase oil. These bulbs are turned on from 20 minutes to one-half hour before starting.

Agricultural engineers at the Iowa State College say this type of heating has several good points to recommend it. It thins the oil, which means faster engine turnover. Also, it would help heat the block.

While the best success will be realized when using the bulbs inside buildings, use outside also is a great help. Henderson points out that an infrared bulb produces most heat in an object only when struck by rays of the bulb.

Pyrex bulbs should be used for such heating because of the danger of melting ice under the engine causing water to drop on the, bulbs. Ordinary glass bulbs will break when hit by water.

HANCOCK BOARD OKAYS REPORTS

Hancock County Supervisors Saturday approved the quarterly reports of the following county offices: County Recorder Fern Peck Katter, County Auditor Maynard Schoneman, County Sheriff L. M. Brower and County Clerk Ruth Hughes.

The recorder's report listed fees totaling $580.40 for the quarter, the clerk's, report $822.-05 of which $300 was in fines collected; the auditor's report listed fees totaling $30 and the sheriff's report listed fees totaling $47.35.

The board also approved the official bonds of Sheriff L. M. Brower and Auditor Maynard Schoneman.

FARM BUREAU SAYS "KEEP PARITY PRINCIPLE"

The Iowa Farm Bureau Federation is still on record as favoring the parity principe as a means of determining fair farm prices, and recommends the building of soil resources during periods of controlled production and price supports.

State-wide Farm Bureau resolutions, as adopted by Clarence Bird, voting delegate from Hancock County and other representatives of the 125,000 member families in the state, set forth the thinking of the membership on several angles of long range farm prosperity.

Mr. Bird this week called attention to the resolution which refers to parity, and which reads, "We feel that a price support program is onlly a part of permanent long range farm prosperity. We, therefore, believe that more emphasis must be placed on increased consumption of agricultural (improved diets, school lunch program, Food Stamp Plan, etc.), more efficient processing and marketing of agricultural products, increased world trade, full employment, and a sound monetary and fiscal policy.

"We commend the principle of the ever-normal granary support through the Commodity Credit Corporation and feel that our economy is jusified in using a sizable appropriation in order to provide storable food products to prevent disastrously low agricultural prices and to assure a high level of nutrition for all of our citizens through good and lean years. We commend Congress for providing, through Commodity Corporation, additional storage facilities for handling commodities. We urge that more emphasis be placed on storing corn on the producer's farm".

GET CROP SEED CLEANED DURING WINTER MONTHS

Sow clean seed next spring for a thicker, more uniform stand, stronger healthier plants and fewer weeds, says E. P. Slywester, extension botanist at Iowa State College.

He thinks this winter is the best time to clean small grain seed and adds that advantages far outweight the cost. The big reason for cleaning seed is to remove weed seed. The farmer who sows weed seed with his crop every year is multiplying his weed problems, Sylwester says.

By cleaning, weed seed content can be lowered from amounts as high as 10 percent down to between 1 and 2 percent.

Removal of weed seed alone will more than pay for the cleaning operation, the extension botanist points out. He says that most seed as it comes from the thresher or combine cannot be sold under Iowa law either because it has some noxious weed seed or because it contains over 3 percent seed from any or all kinds of weeds.

Cleaning also removes sticks, stones and chaff. Taking these items out allows seed to pass through the seeder or drill at a more uniform rate and will result in a heavier more uniform stand, Sylwester explains. Light seed and diseased kernels are also taken out in the cleaning operation.

Sywester says to burn screenings from the actual cleaning if the operation is done on the farm. He warns that these screenings, if fed to livestock or poultry, can increase weed problems around the farmstead, or in the fields into which the remaining refuse is taken.

WILL CELEBRATE 45TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Barz will celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary on next Tuesday, Jan. 17th by holding open house at their home from 1:30 until 4:00 p. m.

All of their relatives, neighbors and friends are invited to call on them at that time.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

The driver who had been killed in the accident was standing beside the wreck of his car when patrolmen arrived. He was in a state of talking shock. "It rolled over and over. Don't know how many times. Say, I bounced around in there. And not a scratch, not even a sore back! Bet I'll be stiff tomorrow. Say, I am lucky to be alive. Lucky!

He couldn't stop talking about the accident. "Absolutely my fault. Terrible mistake. Never should have been passing on that hill. When I saw the other car coming I took to the shoulder and so did he—right at the same time. I cut back onto the highway so fast that I went clear off on the other side. It rolled over and over."

A few jarring minutes later the driver was standing beside the wreck of his car telling shocked witnesses that he might be a little stiff in the morning but he was certainly lucky to be alive.

It was a strange kind of luck. He went to a movie that evening, probably to calm his nerves, and slumped dead in his seat. Internal injuries caused by the accident, the doctor said.

Except for a few details, this accident actually happened in Iowa.

LEVIES ASSESSED ON DRAIN DITCHES

The supervisors of Winnebago and Hancock counties met in joint session at the courthouse in Garner recently to discuss matters relative to drainage districts administered jointly by the two boards.

Levies for outstanding warrants issued for minor repairs were made on 3 districts as follows: Drainage district 30-34, 4 per cent; drainage dsitrict 79-49, one per cent, and drainage district No. 31-36, one per cent. The levy totals $2,968.14 and will be spread and collected with the regular tax of 1949 payable in 1950.

John Huber, Winnebago county supervisor from Buffalo Center, was elected chairman and Hancock County Auditor Maynard Schoneman, secretary of the joint boards.

DOG LICENSE FEES AND BOUNTIES FIXED

Dog license fees in Hancock county for 1950 were fixed at the annual meeting of the board of supervisors held at the courthouse last week. License fee for each male dog will be $1.50 for each female dog $4 except in towns having their own licensing ordinance and dogs in kennels.

The board also fixed bounties as follows: Fox, $2.00; groundhog, 25 cents; crow and pocket gophers, 10 cents; wolf, $10.00 and cubs $5.00.

U. S. POPULATION NOW ABOVE 150 MILLION

Washington,—The U.S. population has crossed the 150,000,000 mark.

The census bureau Friday estimated the population, growing at a 200,000-a-month clip, reached 150,183,000 on Nov. 1.

This was a 2,132,000 increase in the first 10 months of 1949 and a gain of 18,514,000 since the last full census on April 1, 1940.

PROGRESS REPORTED IN COUNTY ROAD PROGRAM

County engineers in Iowa during the past year have made progress in the state market road program, according to a report issued by John Butter of the Iowa Highway Commission. The report was sent to county engineers from the Engineering Extension Service of Iowa State College.

Comparative figures mark the progress made in the past year. For the year beginning Dec. 1, 1947 and ending Nov. 30, 1948, contracts were let for $8,600,000 worth of farm-to-market roads. From Nov. 30, 1948, to Nov. 30, 1949, $12,900,00 worth of contracts were let for the road network.

During the first 9 months of 1949, the Highway Commission and counties have contracted for five times the amount of work of Nebraska and South Dakota, two and one-half time that of Minnesota and two times as much as Wisconsin, Illinois and Missouri. All of this work, according to Butter, has been at a price lower than that of surrounding states.

At the same time, the law specifies that there shall not be more than 35,000 miles of secondary road. At the last official check, the total of farm-to-market road miles in Iowa amounted to 34,893. Again, said Butter, this shows the trides taken by Iowa in establishing such a system.

Problems of proper surfacing for all kinds of weather continue to crop up in the road program as do problems of having at hand large enough crews to take care of all of the construction in maintenance work seasonally.

JANUARY 31ST CLOSING DATE ON GRAIN LOANS

The closing date for obtaining loans and purchase agreements under the 1949 oats, soybean and flaxseed programs is January 31st, 1950, according to information from the Hancock County PMA office.

Support price on these grains is available only through loans and purchase agreements. Oats are supported at 67c per bushel, soybeans at $2.11 per bushel plus premiums ranging from one to six cents depending on the moisture content of the beans, and flaxseed at $3.75 per bushel.

Loans and purchase agreements on oats and flaxseed mature on April 30th, 1950, and on soybeans, May 31st, 1950.

A storage payment of seven cents per bushel is made by Commodity Credit Corporation for loan and purchase agreement soybeans and flaxseed delivered at or after maturity date, to Commodity Credit Corporation.

Producers desiring loans on any of these grains are urged to make application immediately in order that the loans can be processed, and all loan papers signed and completed before the closing date, January 31st.

ICS FILM SHOWS HOW TO REDUCE CHORETIME

Taking the chore out of choretime on Iowa farms is the subject of a new motion called "Planned Steps."

It shows how recent methods and machines used to cut down labor and time in field work can be applied to the bigger, year-round job of choring.

Combined details in chores, planning routes and steps taken, tools placed in lines of travel, the use of gravity and loads on wheels instead of on backs are a few of the items outlined in the film.

The ideas discussed have been worked out on Iowa farms and collected by H. B. Howell, farm management specialist at Iowa State College. The film may be obtained by writing Visual Instruction at the college in Ames. Service fee is $1.00 for 3 days and $1.50 per week, with postage and insurance to be paid by the user.

IOWA BUSINESS IN 1949 DESPITE SOME LAGS

The post-war boom in Iowa business and industry lasted through 1949 in some cases but in others lagged behind the all-time records of 1948.

At the year's end, a preliminary tabulation by the Market and Research Division of the Iowa Development Commission showed continued gains in the Iowa producer-consumer market, with the retail sales zooming to an all-time high and industrial income at its highest level in history.

A decline in corn production this year marred a repeat grand sweep of record production in the major fields of Iowa commerce. The heavy winds which swept the state last October were reported to have knocked down 72 million bushels of corn or 13 percent of the total crop. Production in other crops was down, too, while some gained; Iowa, however, still led the nation in many agricultural categories.

In general the current Iowa picture, based on a year's review, is one of abundance and prosperity for both business and industry, with the state's characteristically balanced economy closer to center than ever before.

VENTURA VIKINGS FALL BEFORE SHAMROCK ATTACK HERE
Ventura Girls Drubbed Klemme 'Rockettes 54-35

The high-powered Ventura Vikings met their match here Friday night when they fell before the Klemme Shamrocks in a close game. Klemme trailed in the first quarter 9-8 and were one behind at the half as Ventura led 20-19.

The Shamrocks turned on the heat in the third quarter, however, and went ahead 30-23. The Vikings then took over in the last quarter and had the margin whittled down as they counted 20 points, while the Shamrocks could only hit for 14, but they had enough to give them a one point lead as the game ended, Klemme 44, Ventura 43. It was Ventura's second defeat of the season, having lost previously to Fertile.

Ventura Girls Win

The Ventura girls had good sailing all the way and were definitely in command in every quarter, 16-6 in the first; 27-12 at the half, 36-21 at the third and won 54-35. Schaefer 16, Greiman 15 and Lacey 4 were the Klemme markers. For Ventura Monsen sank 29 and Benner 22.

SHAMROCKS AVENGE BULLDOGS IN FAST GAME 57-36
Klemme 'Rockettes Out In Front 39-21 Over Kanawha Girls

It was a big night Tuesday for the Klemme High School as they won two games off their rivals from the West.

In the opening contest the Klemme 'Rockettes downed the Kanawha girls 39-21 behind the shooting of Schaefer who hit for 21 points, Lacey was next with 9.

Get Real Revenge

The Shamrocks could not forget an earlier season sting when the Kanawha Bulldogs took a game away from them on a one-point lead. The Shamrocks started the fireworks right in the first quarter when they took a 17-12 lead and were ahead at the half 27-20.

Starting a high-powered attack in the third quarter, the Shamrocks rolled up 19 points and held the Bulldogs to only 5, and it was the Shamrocks 46, Kanawha 25 at the end of the third.

The Shamrocks could afford to coast in the last quarter and both teams played on even terms, each making 11 points, but the final score read: Shamrocks 57, Bulldogs 36.

DIVIDEND PAY BY FARM LOAN ASSOCIATION

A special 7 per cent dividend is now being paid to members of the United National Farm Loan Association of Forest City, Iowa.

Wm. F. Johannabar, Secretary-Treasurer, announced that checks are being mailed to the farmers and stockmen in Hancock and Winnebago counties, who have Federal Land Bank loans through the cooperative association.

This is the second dividend paid in the last 12 months, he said. A regular 5 per cent dividend was paid last July.

Mr. Johannaber explained that the dividends were possible because of dividends paid to the association by the Federal Land Bank of Omaha, which is owned entirely by the United and other National Farm Loan Associations in the four-state area.

Directors of the association at Forest City are C. M. Palmer of Forest City, president; J. E. Read of Forest City, vice president; George A. Kilen of Lake Mills, Rex Puffer and Lyle Fox of Britt.

MARTY LINKS

Of Course Not

THINKING it was very strange that a man who could support four dogs should have to resort to stealing a lamb to feed his family the judge said,

"You may have to steal a lamb to feed your family and yet, by your own admission, you have four dogs. Will you explain, please?"

"Well, judge, Your Honor, suh," he replied with all the offended dignity he could muster, "yo'll didn' expeck us to eat de dawgs, did yo'?"

SURPRISE!

Four days after the end of their honeymoon a couple received in the mailbox at their little love-nest a pair of tickets to a hit show on Broadway. With the tickets was a note which read:

"Guess who sent these."

On the appointed evening they went to the theater, returning very late. To their astonishment, everything of any value in the house had been removed.

On the living room table they found a note:

"Now you know."

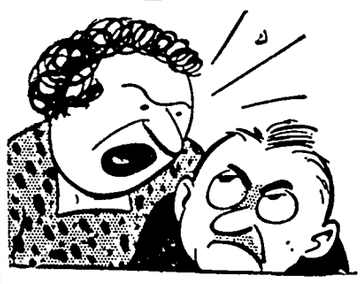
Natural Alarm

There is a valley in Scotland noted for its long echo. A Scot was demonstrating the echo to a Swiss visitor one morning and they timed it. It took exactly three minutes for the original "Hallo" to come back to them.

The Scotchman looked proud. "I imagine ye have some pretty fine echoes in Switzerland," he conceded, "but do ye have anything that lasts as long as that?"

The yodeler thought a moment. "I believe we have somthing that might compare with it," he said. "In fact, there is a valley near my home town that had a rather good echo. When I go to bed each night I put my head out the window and shout, 'Wake up, wake up. Time to get up,' and eight hours later the echo returns and serves as my alarm clock."

COULDN'T SPARE IT



"It's a sad case," the doctor said. "I am afraid your wife's mind is gone, Mr. Flaherty."

"I'm not surprised a bit, doc," answered Flaherty. "She's been giving me a piece of it every day for the past 12 years."

A Bit of Doing

Grandpa was trying to impress his grandson the futility of fighting.

"Look, young feller," he said, "you've just come home from a fight with the little boy down the street. Now you have an enemy, haven't you?"

"No, sir," replied the lad, "Jimmy's my friend."

Grandpa didn't want to get involved in that issue so he adhered to the enemy theory. "But he might become an enemy," he pointed out, "and then you might have a lot of trouble with him later on. Take me for instance, I get along very well with everybody. I haven't got an enemy in the world."

"Sure, I know, grandpa," the boy replied, "that's because you outlived them all."

GONE WITH THE WIND

Mistress—The canary is gone. What happened to it?"

Maid—I can't imagine. It was there when I cleaned out the cage with the vacuum cleaner.

Always Are

Smiles were beamed across the restaurant tables between a man and a woman almost at opposite ends of the room. She lost interest soon, though, and before he could follow up his initial advantage her smile had frozen completely.

Turning to a man who had paused beside him to light a cigar the disappointed diner said in a rather resigned tone: "Women certainly are fickle, aren't they? That pretty woman over at that table was flirting with me only a few seconds ago and now she looks as cold as an iceberg."

"Yes," agreed the man, "my wife is very unpredictable."

 Cherry Nut Custard
Serves 6-8

- ⅔ cup sugar
- ⅓ cup flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 2 cups scalded milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla or almond extract
- 2 eggs or egg yolks
- 1 cup red tart pitted cherries (canned or frozen)
- ½ cup broken nut meats

Mix dry ingredients. Add scalded milk gradually. Cook 15 minutes in double boiler, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and afterwards occasionally. Add eggs, slightly beaten, and cook two or three minutes longer. Cool and fold in the flavoring, cherries and nuts. Serve with dainty cake cut-outs or cookies.

Cherry-Apple Cobbler
Serves 8

Cobbler Crust: Any favorite baking powder biscuit dough may be used. This may be made a little shorter for this purpose, if desired, by adding two additional tablespoons of shortening per cup of flour. Press a layer of the dough into a greased baking dish, then add filling and top with remaining dough. Bake at 400°, about 25 minutes, or until crust is brown and filling is tender.

Cobbler Filling:

- 1 cup red tart pitted cherries
- 2 cups apples — any cooking apples, sliced as for pie
- 1 cup sugar
- 3 tablespoon flour

Combine sugar and flour, then mix well with the cherries and apples.

Cherry Foam Sauce:

- 1 cup tart red cherry juice
- 1 cup sugar
- 2 egg whites
- ½ teaspoon almond flavoring
- Few drops red vegetable coloring

Combine juice and sugar. Cook to a thick syrup or 230°. Pour gently over stiffly beaten egg whites, add flavoring, then the coloring to make desired shade. Serve hot or cold as a sauce or topping on any plain cake, such as white, yellow, sponge or angel food.

Use mint-flavored barbecue sauce for lamb chops. Combine chopped onion with mint leaves, vinegar and salad oil. Let stand overnight, then brush over lamb chops before cooking.

When you have meat loaf left-over, cube it and heat with barbecue sauce. Serve over toasted buns.

Use a slice of luncheon meat for these tricks. Break an egg on top of each and cover with grated Swiss cheese. Cook slowly in skillet until egg sets. It's grand for Sunday night suppers.

REAL ECONOMIST

Man Manages Frugal Living

LOS ANGELES.—How a 57-year-old chemist manages to live on $6 a week has drawn widespread attention over the nation. Albert Enoch has been living for some years in what he calls "an economic twilight on the far side of the sun."

Readers of Enoch's story probably will be impressed most by the fact that he gets along adequately and without complaint. The $6 on which he lives, he earns himself.

Enoch had gone along without any notice, resigned to obscure poverty but consoled that he had what he wanted—absolute independence.

Then his modest existence suddenly was in the spotlight—an issue in California's pension controversy. The pensioners in the hotel where he lived jumped all over him the day the newspapers carried his story. They resented his $6-a-week budget. It made their pensions seem more than adequate.

Goes to Hospital

Occasionally he goes to a veterans hospital for treatment of phlebitis, which makes him unable to hold a steady job.

"When my leg doesn't bother me," he says, "I walk to the wholesale market at Ninth and San Pedro and get my vegetables free. After 10 o'clock in the morning you can salvage considerable fruit and vegetables from the big containers where they put produce that is unsaleable, but still good.

"Today I got onions, potatoes, celery, carrots, lettuce, peppers, corn and grapes.

"From the Salvation Army anyone may get bread and cakes for the asking. I work for my clothes at a church. You can get a good free haircut in the basement of the Union Rescue Mission, although I usually try to give the barber a quarter. They also have facilities there to press your clothes and take a bath. I find enough odd jobs to earn about $2 over my room rent, and that's all I need.

Can't Keep Pride

"Of course, you have to stuff your pride up your sleeves and adjust to living on the other side."

"The "other side," Enoch says, means the areas of any city where the poor live.

"It's another world, a world of the aged and lonely who sit in rockers and talk about politics or the past; of the people who wear old clothes and whom you don't see when you pass them on the street; a hemisphere on the far side of the sun, where the inhabitants get less than their share of warmth."

Those words are Enoch's own.

Big Elephant Raids Pantry At Circus Winter Quarters

CIRCLEVILLE, OHIO.—Big Burma is just a little girl elephant of 7,000 pounds. At times, she's superbly elegant, but what a glutton she is, and how she showed it here!

Caretakers of the Mills Brothers circus winter quarters at the county fairgrounds insist that this is what Burma did:

Around 3 a.m. she broke loose from her stake at one end of a large livestock barn. In the dark she tiptoed past her sleeping handler, Mark Roe, then past 30 other sleeping workmen, and thence past a dining table—without rattling a dish.

Her destination: The cookhouse truck at the other end of the barn.

Once arrived, she had an early Thanksgiving dinner which — the circus people insist — consisted of:

One hundred pounds of potatoes, 25 pounds of onions, 20 loaves of bread, 10 pounds of flour, eight candy bars and a box of breakfast cereal.

Roe awoke and caught Burma trying to open a pound can of tobacco, which she likes. The Rev. Doc Waddell, 86, circus preacher, reports that big Burma also smokes cigarettes. But, he says, "It would be better for her to smoke in this world than in the next."

As for Burma's feast — Roe was glad of one thing. She doesn't like bacon. In her search she found a slab but turned up her nose at it. So the circus troupe did have breakfast.

Ex-Commando Enlists to Aid Marines in War Know-How

WASHINGTON.—When asked why he had enlisted in the U. S. marine corps reserve as a private, Robert Bishop remarked, "I'd be at home with this outfit and I can teach them a few things about the work of assualt troops on the continent of Europe."

Looking at Private Bishop's record, this statement can't be called boastful for the 29-year-old veteran fought for six years with the famous British commandos at Salerno, Norway and Africa. He was also a member of Marshall Tito's bodyguard and later served as a major in the Canadian army.

Born in Baltimore, Bishop moved to England at the age of three years and before entering military service obtained a degree in engineering at the University of Birmingham. Part of his training as a commando consisted of 67 parachute jumps and swimming a mile in full battle equipment.

Pheasant Feeding

Each year, about this time, state game and fish departments in states where the birds are numerous enough to permit an open season, get inquiries pertaining to winter pheasant feeding programs.

For the state departments, officials point out, such programs are economically and biologically unsound. From a financial standpoint, it would call for an outlay of funds which hardly any state could meet. From the biological standpoint, a feeding program makes the pheasant dependent on man for his food. In addition, these officials say, when pheasants are fed by artificial means, it is going directly against the process of nature.

The pheasant's beak continues to grow at all times and the only way this growth can be kept under control is when the birds find their food on natural grounds which, in turn, wears the beak down. If fed by artificial means, the birds get their food on the soft snow or in feed troughs, and the wearing down of the beak stops. It isn't long before the pheasant is unable to go out and search for his own food.

Instead of an artificial program, the experts suggest planting of natural feed lots, not more than 80 rods from known pheasant cover.

Did He Get 'Em?

The original cutlines on this photo were a little ambiguous in that they didn't say whether the young nimrod shown here got these birds himself, or is just posing with them. However, it's a good enough shot to rate passing along. The youngster is Jan Oneeta, of Nags Head, North Carolina, and whoever bagged the birds in the Pimlico Sound region, had a good day.

Check Fishing Gear

Hunters who spent many hours rounding up that lost box of shells, hunting license-holder and other bits of hunting gear pushed all around the place since the season closed last year and then, topping everything, found the trusty old blunderbuss coated with 1948 carbon and mud, would do well to give some attention right now to their fishing equipment.

That may seem a little premature, but if tackle isn't taken care of now, one will be surprised how little time there will be to do it when Spring and the fishing season are upon them before they know it.

Proper care of outdoor equipment requires little effort and time, and it pays off in dollars by reducing winter-time depreciation.

Plugs should be cleaned, painted and varnished; hooks need de-rusting and oiling; reels should be taken down, cleaned and oiled, and rods may need refinishing. Flies and fly lines need special treatment well known to fly fishing enthusiasts to keep them fresh and efficient. Even the tackle box could do with a house-cleaning and re-paint job.

Main thing is to know where everything is when the season opens some nice day next March or April.

Hook Aids Hunters

If one has trouble pulling a cleaning swab through a rifle, putting a fish hook to work will save a lot of temper and gray hairs.

Just straighten the hook and attach it to the cleaning rod, string or wire. By using this method one can pull the swab through the barrel without difficulty, or retrieve a swab stuck in the barrel.

Lesson for January 15, 1950

THE FIRST CHRISTIANS didn't have everything we have, but on the other hand they had one thing seldom to be seen nowadays. They did not have the New Testament, only the Old; they were not surrounded by an even partly Christian civilization; they had no centuries of Christian tradition; they had no world - wide Christianity, only a small knot of people in one small and out-of-the-way city, Jerusalem. On the other hand, for all they lacked, they had one great thing: Fellowship. We have it too, but too often in a week and watery fashion as compared with what they enjoyed.

Dr. Foreman

Family Living

THE VERY FIRST Christians lived literally like a big family. This is all the more extraordinary when you think of the variety of their backgrounds. (Look up the list of places mentioned in Acts 2:9,10 on a map of Asia, Africa and Europe.) A good family is a unit.

If little Willie comes down with appendicitis, his parents don't get out the family account book and figure out how much Willie has been worth to the family, in dollars and cents, in his eight years of life.

Suppose they calculated that his services, such as they are—carrying in the wood, feeding the chickens, or what not— had been worth about $23.75 since the last time he was sick, they wouldn't send little Willie to the hospital with the note to the doctor: "Please give our Willie $23.75 worth of operation. That's all he has put into the family budget and that's all we're going to let him take out!"

Not by any means. Little Willie is taken to the hospital and whatever operation he needs, that is the one his parents want him to have, even if it costs 20 times what Willie has been worth in cash. The family give Willie what he needs, and they also expect him to help out in all the ways he can.

Church Living

ONE TROUBLE with our churches today is that so many of them have actually lost this family-feeling. The early Christians, we are told, "were of one heart and soul." Could you say of your church that all its members are of one heart and soul?

The early Christians, feeling thus close to one another, "had all things in common." What do the members of your church have in common? They meet in one place once a week. But what else? Do they even speak to one another? If one member of the congregation falls sick, do the others find out about it quickly, and when they find out, what do they do about it? If trouble comes to a member, do the other members rally around him?

Does the church say to its members, as the Salvation Army does of hard-pressed men, "You may be down but you're never out?" Some churches have a pastor's or deacon's fund, to be used in cases of need.

Contributors to the fund are as anonymous as are those who are helped by it. The idea is for those who are blessed with large income, or those who may have special windfalls, bonuses, extra dividends, big crops, and so on, to chip in for the aid of all who may run into trouble.

Not All Troubles Are Financial

NATURALLY, not all troubles are financial. Some of the most serious troubles have little or nothing to do with money. There are many other kinds of needs. For example, in any church there will be lonely people, and you can't cure loneliness with a check, no matter how big.

The minister is the key man, he can locate the needs, but he can't supply them all. Lonely people, those who have been through deep sorrow, men trying to find the right jobs, young folks in danger of serious temptation— a church which is like a family will not let these people fight their battles alone.

What we all need is the feeling that we belong. The church can make all the difference between despair and happiness simply by making every single person in it feel that no matter what happens to him, he still belongs; he is more than among friends, he is among brothers.

Today's Account Book---
A TOOL FOR FAMILY FINANCE

The family's cooperation in saving sales slips is an essential to keeping a household record. A modern-day account book makes the job interesting to the whole family.

Many a family will be keeping household accounts this year, perhaps for the first time after the recent higher-income years. Most folks are looking to account-keeping these days as the key to stretching the family income to include savings, improvements on the house, life insurance or even a vacation trip in addition to the everyday expenses of keeping up a household.

Fannie Gannon, home management specialist, Iowa State College, says account-keeping helps any family understand its spending needs better. She says that modern household account books have been carefully planned by experts who have worked with families and who understand their financial needs.

The Account Book

A useful book is one which will give a picture of total spending for a year. It provides a place to enter expenditures for each month under about 15 or 16 classified headings such as food, clothing, household operation expense, recreation and so on One such account book has been prepared by economists and home management specialists at Iowa State College It is a green-covered booklet called "Your Family Finances" which may be purchased from the Iowa State College Press, Iowa State College, Ames.

To give a picture of family spending for a year, account books are planned with expenditures classified and grouped so that a quick total of each item can be made by the month.

From these monthly totals it is a simple matter to get the yearly total which shows what percent of the family's income has gone for family needs. This total shows how much it has cost to feed the family, how much the clothing bill has been for each family member, and whether important family needs such as recreation and vacations have been neglected. Often a family goes without a vacation trip to save money, when actually they might have had it had they known the facts.

The totals will also show up family spending leaks, Miss Gannon points out. One such leak, for example, might be operation of the family car. Without an actual record of costs of running the car, it might be hard to see that this is the offender.

Make It Easy

Account-keeping can be easy, f you make it so. Most record books now available have been planned for easy record-keeping. Have a special place to keep the book, with pencil and paper. And have a simple means of collecting such items as sales slips. Keep the check book and any other legal papers handy.

One person will probably keep the records, and usually it's Mother. But account-keeping is really the important business of every member of the family, says Miss Gannon. So ask for cooperation.

With a family account book in use, a family discussion of finances now and then is a "natural". Young people today belive that money matters should be decided cooperatively, and they take a matter-of-fact business approach to them. Family councils before making major expenditures lead to happier family relationships.

Family goals, or the satisfactions the family wants for the money it spends, may be discussed in a family council. Household accounts help keep family goals in the picture, and serve as a valuable guide in working toward them.

PROPER WATERING WILL HELP PLANTS TO THRIVE

Water houseplants when they need it, not necessarily every day.

That's a tip from Iowa State College horticulturists to keep that holiday cyclamen, longer blooming begonia or primrose growing and healthy.

The soil in which plants grow should go through a drying and wetting action. The time to water plants is when the soil feels dry to the touch and when the pot gives off a ringing sound when hit with an object. Overwatering is a frequent fault, especially when excess water has on chance of running out of the container at the bottom. If a plant comes wrapped in oil cloth or tinfoil, a small hole should be cut in the bottom to allow excess water to drain out.

A cyclamen plant will bloom for a period of several months in a cool room at 65 to 68 degrees. Place it where it gets a little morning light, and watch the watering carefully. For best results with a cyclamen which is blooming, don't let the soil dry out completely before watering.

It's best to use water at room temperature or several degrees warmer for all houseplants.

How to Make Over Closet To Add Beauty, Efficiency

Are you ashamed to be caught with your closet door open? You need not be for with a little planning and effort a closet can be made to complement and add to the attractiveness of a bedroom.

To really give your closet a "face lifting," you might start with the walls and floor. Light walls are best for they reflect light making the closet bright and pleasant. A gaily painted or papered closet does the same thing for a room that accessories do for a dress.

Harmonize or contrast colors in your closet with those in the walls, bedspread, and rug of your bedroom. Choose garment bags, hat boxes and fixtures with an eye to your color plan. If you want edgings on the shelves, stick to simple bands which are easily cleaned. Ruffles tend to collect dust.

Now for the floor. If your closet has a good hardwood floor, wax it often to make cleaning easier. If your floor is of softwood, give it a good coat of deck paint—preferably in a dark or medium color. Linoleum is excellent for closet floors. It covers the chinks that harbor moths and invite collections of lint and dust.

Most closets are poorly lighted. If you are installing a lighting fixture, put it on the inside door trim near the center of the door. A ceiling light is bad as it casts dark shadows under the shelves and in corners.

Yale Scientists Report New Disease, Like Polio

A new virus, which at times causes a disease closely resembling poliomyelitis in its non-paralyzing form, has been reported by scientists at Yale university.

This new virus has been isolated as a result of studies of last summer's poliomyelitis outbreaks (1948) in southern New England, North Carolina, and Texas. This finding confirms a discovery originally made at the New York state department of health laboratories last year.

The origin of outbreaks of the new disease is unknown, and its means of transmission is obscure, but the symptoms of the disease are at times identical with those of mild poliomyelitis. It has been found to occur simultaneously with poliomyelitis in the summer season. Thus, in several cities where poliomyelitis was prevalent last summer, people who were diagnosed as having poliomyelitis were found to be infected with this new virus.

It seems, on the basis of present cases studied, to inflict no permanent injury and all those patients who have been studied by the Yale group have recovered with no harmful after-effects. The average length of illness is approximately ten days. The new virus has not yet been officially named.

First Lady Golfer

Mary Queen of Scots was the first known lady golfer. Mary, who was beheaded by Queen Elizabeth, led one of the most tragic and hectic careers in history. But, despite a treacherous husband, court intrigue, an explosion, and the murder of her friends, the beautiful red-headed Scotch queen still found time to knock a crude golf ball around a pasture. Researchers have discovered that it was Mary who first used the term "caddie." Mary was educated in France and she called the boy who carried her clubs a "cadet," which in those days meant "a young man who did odd jobs."

Benzene and Benzine

Benzene and benzine are not the same. Both are clear, colorless liquids, consisting of carbon and hydrogen, but in different proportions. Benzine (also called naphtha) is a mixture of several chemical compounds, very closely related to those in gasoline and, like gasoline, is obtained by distillation of petroleum. Benzene, however, is obtained from coal in the process of making coke or illuminating gas. It has a molecule of six carbon atoms, in a hexagon, to each of which is attached a hydrogen atom.

"Little Corsican"

At the peak of his power, Napoleon imprisoned the captured Pope Pius VII at Fontainebleau. Two years later, in April, 1814, he signed away his throne in the palace's "Abdication Room." In the courtyard, afterward known as the Court of Farewells, he made his parting address to his old guardsmen before leaving for the first exile on the island of Elba.

Eggs on Bill of Fare

The consumption of eggs, one of the oldest and most wide-spread of foods, isn't restricted to the product of barnyard fowl. Eggs of almost all birds and of some reptiles and fish are eaten or have been eaten at one time in some corner of the world. Those of ducks, geese, ostriches, plovers, alligators, crocodiles, turtles, penguins, gulls, albatrosses, and pelicans, among others, still are important diet items for many peoples of today.

PLAN LOCATION OF TREES FOR SPRING

Too Many Trees Are Planted Without Careful Plan Of Long-Range

You can plan the location of trees now for planting next spring, says Margherita Tarr, extension landscape architect at Iowa State College.

Too many farm folks make the mistake of planting trees without much thought of pattern. Many times trees are too close to the house, often directly in front of it.

Miss Tarr suggests taking time to draw up a long-range plan built along several proven principals.

Principles To Use

First plant the trees in sweeping curves out from the corners of the house, with no trees closer than 20 feet from the house. Thus, when viewing the house from the front or from any side, no trees would obstruct your vision. Rather they would curve outward approximately 135 degrees from either corner of the house. Never plant trees directly in line with windows or the sides of the house.

The next principle is to plant trees close to shrubs. fences or walks, and not in the center of lawns. It also pays to keep in mind the relative location of wells, drains and overhead wires.

Can Choose Gradually

After you have your plan drawn up, it is not necessary to make all changes immediately. Miss Tarr suggests approaching the problem by taking out one or more trees at a time, then replacing them in accordance with the drawn plan.

Among the fastest growing long-lived trees are American elm, sycamoe, thornless honey locust, hackberry, green ash and basswood. Fine, large shade trees, though less rapid growing, are black and red maple. Trees to plant should be two inches in diameter at breast height.

It is colder at the antartic than at the arctic.

CORN PRODUCTION DOWN

The drop in the corn harvest was reported responsible for much of the decline. The corn production estimate this year was 553,847,000 bushels compared with 667,056,000 bushels harvested in 1948, the all-time high. The difference is an 18 percent reduction due to the heaviest corn borer infestation in history, unfavorable moisture conditions during most of the growing season, and the winds.

Still Iowa, on 25 percent of the Grade A land in the nation, continued to produce 10 percent of the nation's food supply. It led the country in the production of beef cattle, hogs, eggs and poultry products. Although state production was behind last year's, production of corn, oats, popcorn, clover and timothy seeds, and honey outranked the nation.

The Iowa market remained the world's greatest consumer market for farm equipment and home furnishings.

SHOT

Clark Powers, Central City man, was seriously wounded recently when the charge from a .410 guage shotgun struck him in the back. He was at work in the grease room at the Grafft service station when the gun, in the hands of another man, was accidentally discharged.

CONFUSED

Jim Potter of Algona took his mother-in-law to the hospital recently to see the Potter's newly-born infant son. Standing outside the glass enclosure, Mr Potter pointed out the many remarkable features of the new infant and was non-pleased when a nurse came by and told them he was admiring the wrong baby.

WE KNOW

We Can't Make All The Butter . . .

SO WE JUST MAKE THE BEST!

Everybody wants butter . . . especially ours. Rich, golden cream—four pints to every pound of butter we churn goes into STATE BRAND, the Butter of Selected Pasteurized Cream.

The matchless flavor of STATE BRAND butter does so much for the appetite appeal of all foods. That's why we're running our churns at full capacity.

Of course—we can't make all the butter, so we just concentrate on churning the best, so that people in Klemme say, "WE PREFER STATE BRAND BUTTER," made in Klemme.

Silence Sure With Visitors To High Court

WASHINGTON.--There is no excuse for a guest in the chambers of the U. S. supreme court to be kicking up any noise, for the first thing he gets with his pass is a slip on which is printed: "Silence is requested."

However, the request is hardly necessary.

One gets little but silence in the plushy room with its marble pillars, deep crimson drapes and enough cubbyholes to keep a family of pigeons happy for a generation.

The plain fact is, the acoustics are terrible in the 10-million-dollar building, which was finished in 1935 wthout thought either to acoustics or air-conditioning.

The hearing part got an airing a couple of years ago when Justice Felix Frankfurter remarked at the end of a reading of a learned decision:

"The acoustics in this court room ought to be declared unconstitutional."

Tourists Can't Hear

Tourists who beg and plead for passes into the small room on supreme court Mondays go away wagging their heads. They can see the dignified, black robed justices but can't hear much they say. Unless they are lip readers, they have to go out and buy the latest paper.

As a matter of fact, some of the justices can't hear one another. By chance, the two newest justices—Tom Clark and Sherman Minton—are at opposite ends of the bench. All they can do is wave.

A committee, comprised of Hugo, Black, Minton and Clark, is said to have been appointed to see what can be done about it.

According to David Lynn, the architect of the capitol, it will take a bit of doing.

The situation got so bad a couple of years ago, he said, that the bureau of standards—which can solve any problem—was called in. The experts installed the pretty deep crimson drapes with rugs to match. That didn't help.

Justices No Help

The bureau of standards engineers were called back and called for elimination of the many alcoves, which suck in the sounds. It was decided that would call for practically rebuilding a mighty expensive building.

The justices themselves aren't helping the acoustics situation much. Justice Black tips his swivel back so far he talks to the ceiling. Justice Stanley Reed has a soft voice. Frankfurter leans forward and puts out a staccato stream and Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson is hard to understand with his Kentucky drawl.

There have been a lot of suggestions. Individaul microphones, a horse shoe bench.

Even hearing aids for the spectators and press.

Babies May Start Thinking Three Months Before Birth

PHILADELPHIA.—If man's development follows the pattern of the lower animals, he begins to think, or his brain is at least ready to start thinking, three months before birth.

That this might be true is indicated in researches reported by Dr. Louis B. Flexner of the American Philosophical Society.

Dr. Flexner studied the nerve cells of the gray matter of the brains of guinea pigs at various stages in their prebirth development. About two-thirds of the way through the prebirth period, a series of "abrupt changes" occurred in the nerve cell.

Nerve processes started to grow rapidly. The volume of the nucleus of each cell stopped increasing. An enzyme believed to have a useful energy-yielding activity increased sharply to the adult level of activity. Other enzymes responsible in part for the combustion of foodstuffs, increased rapidly to the adult level.

At the same period the nerve cells for the first time are electrically active.

Great Rusk Shortage Keeps British Dads Walking Floor

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Because of a great rusk shortage, British fathers of young babies are walking the floor these nights.

The 10,000-member union of small shopkeepers complained of the situation in an urgent telegram to the ministry of food.

The union said the government ought to issue more raw materials to rusk manufacturers right away. The shortage, it was said, is upsetting the peace of households "at a time when fathers should be having a good night's sleep ready for a good day's work."

It looked like fathers would keep pacing the floor, however, for the food ministry consulted dieticians and announced: "Rusks are not essential for human feeding."

COMBINE PLANS FOR HOME AND GROUNDS

Don't leave all thought of the landscape until later, when you are planning building or major remodeling.

Margherita Tarr, landscape architect, Iowa State College, says the most convenient house and grounds layout comes from planning the house and surroundings together. The combined planning should be done before any actual work is started on either house or grounds.

The placing of a door in the house often decides the location of a walk or drive, Miss Tarr explains. A window may call for keeping a view open. And in turn, placing a walk or drive, or keeping open a view, may decide the location of other buildings in the landscape.

There are often factors in the landscape too, such as a fine view, which affect the house location and its whole plan, Miss Tarr adds.

Ordinarily, it's most convenient to plan the kitchen in one corner of the house, with one outer wall at the back or farm court side and the other on the driveway side. This location gives a view of the drive, and also of the farm buildings, from the kitchen windows. Plan the back door on the farm court side of the house, and then a back walk can be planned to run directly from the back door to the farm court. If you plan the house to face the drive rather than the public road, Miss Tarr says, a walk may lead directly from the front door to a parking space along it for visitor's cars.

BICYCLE

The ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Burkhead of Lorimor had a happy Christmas, after all. His parents bought him a new bicycle at Chariton. Enroute home, the crate dropped off. The parents called the highway patrol and located the missing bike at Osceola.

SNAKE BITE

Mrs. Walter Green, of Clarke County, was treated for a rattlesnake bite recently. This type of mishap doesn't happen very often but Mrs. Green's husband operates a snake show. She opened the compartment where the snakes were kept, thinking the reptiles were hibernating. One of them wasn't.

REMEDIES GIVEN FOR TABLE LINEN STAINS

Quick first-aid is suggested for the candlewax, gravy or cranberry sauce that's bound to end up on one of your tablecloths before the holiday season is over.

Iowa State College specialists in textiles and clothing stains can best be removed while fresh.

Colored candlewax should be scraped away first of all, with a dull knife. Then place between clean white blotters or cleaning tissues and press with a warm iron. Change the blotters as they become soiled. Then sponge with a grease solvent such as carbon tetrachloride. If color still remains, sponge with a solution of 1 cup denatured alcohol and 2 cups water.

Most stains from cooked and fresh fruit can be removed from linen or cotton with boiling water or sometimes warm water. It's risky to use soap, as alkalies set some fruit and berry stains. Stretch the stained part over a bowl, fasten with a string and pour boiling water on it from a teakettle held at a height of 3 or 4 feet. This is so the water will strike the stain with force. It helps to alternate rubbing with the boiling water. If a stain still remains, lemon juice or chemical bleach is advised.

Sponge meat-juice or gravy stains with cold or lukewarm water. Hot water may set the stain. Washing in warm soapy water should remove any grease spot which remains.

BOARD REAPPOINTS HANCOCK ENGINEER

Hancock County Supervisors reappointed C. F. Merten as county engineer for 1950. Merten has served in that capacity since Jan. 1, 1919, except for a year and a half while in service during World War II.

During his tenure in office Hancock County roads have been constantly improved and at the present a gravel surface highway leads to every farm home in the county.

The board also rehired all of the personnel in the engineer's office and all highway maintenance personnel. Salaries of all personnel including deputies will remain the same as they were in 1949.

FARM BUREAU, KICK-OFF JANUARY 9TH

Membership work becomes the number one job in Hancock County Farm Bureau the week of January 9th. The quota for the state of Iowa as announced by Wayne Tyler, state organization director is set at 130,000 members for 1950, while the Hancock County quota as set by the county organization and maintainence committee, Ed. Thieman, Chaiman at 1450. Up to date, our 40 percent of the county quota has been paid by mail collection or the members are on the continuous membership agreements.

The kick-off meeting will be held on the evening of January 9th in the Garner School gym at 8:00. V. B. Hamilton of Hampton, former IFBF secretary-treasurer will be the guest speaker. Mr. Hamilton is associated with the Farmer Hybrids and a member of the state board of education.

All township captains and their workers plus the directors will receive their instructions and cards at this meeting and will make their calls starting Tuesday morning January 10h.

The important problems facing American Agriculture will be discussed by Mr. Hamilton. All farmer combine constitute less than 15 per cent of the toal population of the United States. It is very necessary that 100 per cent of this small percent work togther to protect their interests and to help do their share in obtaining good government. Last year, in the state legislature, Farm Bureau fought for and had passed 15 of the 17 farm measures developed by its resolutions.

HANCOCK COUNTY REPORTS PROGRESS IN SOIL CONSERVATION

Achievements in the soil conservation of Iowa snowballed to a new high during 1949 when farmers of this state surpassed their accomplishments for the preceding year by a full 18 percent to set a new all-time record in the amount of conservation work actually applied on farmland. Hancock County farmers easily kept pace with the statewide speed-up, Vernon Moss, local technician of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service, reported.

"In this district," Vernon Moss said, "Many farmers did an outstanding job during the past year. However, both S. A. Barber, chairman of our local Commissioners and are expecting even greater accomplishments for 1950. Soil ocnservation is a program which snowballs, gaining momentum and size as it rolls along.

"As an example of what has been accomplished, our district cooperato.s during 1949 developed 34 complete farm conservation plans every one of which is geared to the natural capabilities of the land and designed to fit a particular farm, acre by acre.

"They also drained 309 acres, laying 46,912 lineal feet of tile. 7,689 acres of farm land were under conservation farm plans Contour cultivation was used on 1,044 acres with good results. 73,385 lineal feet of grassed waterways were developed.

Hancock County's first terraces were built on the Kenneth Olson farm, Ellington Twp. and the J J. Cook farm, Avery township."

Reports on progress for the state at large have just been made public by Frank H. Mendell, state conservationist at Ames.

"Our reports from farmers show that 1949 was a banner year for soil conservation in Iowa," Mendell said. "In addition to showing an increase of 18 percent in application over 1949, farmers made an increase of 19 percent in the number of farm plans which they developed during 1949 with the necessary technical assistance made available by our Service through districts. Much of the improvements in land use provided for in these plans will show in their accomplishments for 1950."

By the close of 1949, Mendell said, farmers of this state have organized 96 soil conservation districts covering 33,260,000 acres of land. At that time 18,433 farmers of the state had developed complete farm conservation plans of which 3,692 were developed during the year just past. Local representatives of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service also gave technical assistance to 2,590 other farmers with simple practices which they will later develop into complete farm conservation plans.

During 1949, Mendell's report shows, farmers cooperating with districts put 274,295 additional acres under contour cultivation, added 27,400 acres of strip cropping, improved 11,000 acres of pasture, built 573 farm ponds, 2,316 miles of terraces and drained 21,300 acres. Most of the land drained was already being farmed, Mendell explained, but production was badly reduced by lack of drainage. And to develop better water disposal systems on their land, farmers of the state constructed 4,000,000 lineal feet of grass waterways and terrace outlets during the year.

Nor was the new imeptus in soil conservation limited to Iowa alone. At Milwaukee which is reginal headquarters for the U. S. Soil Conservation Service in eight states, including Iowa, R. H. Musser said the speed-up trend was general. Musser, who directs the SCS program for the entire region, reported farmers of the eight states have now organizd 499 soil conservation districts, an increase of 44 during 1949.

A new trend among farmers of working in neighbor groups to solve mutual erosion problems with technical assistance from the SCS, will have an even stronger bearing on its future progress, Musser predicted.

In the eight states 94,163 farmers have now developed a complete farm conservation plan based on land capabilities, Musser reported, and these cover more than 15 million acres of the nation's best cropland. These farmers are now cultivating two and a half million acres on the contour, have strip cropped more than a million acres, have improved a half million acres of pasture, have developed 18,000 acres for wildlife, have planted 77,000 acres to trees, and have built 16,000 miles of terraces.

"These are only some of the practices," Musser said, "which go to make up a complete farm conservation plan. Such plans are designed by each individual farmer with our technical assistance to fit his own particular farm, acre by acre. These cornbelt farmers deserve praise for their accomplishments during the past year but from the present trend we are predicting even better progress in 1950."

What's the great rush to play Ventura again Richard? It could be the cute basketball player, Virginia Watermiller, would it?

Delwyn B. has been walking around with the most forlorn look on his face lately. I guess it must be because Faye is in California and he doesn't even have her address.

You better not turn Wally down too many times when he asks you to dance, Daisy, because he might not keep running after you.

KEEP EYE ON OIL IN TRACTOR NOW

Change Oil More Often Than During Warm Weather, Engineer Says

If you want to be free from trouble with the tractor during winter, give special attention to crankcase lubrication, suggests Dale Hull, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

For every gallon of gasoline burned, approximately 1 gallon of water is formed inside the tractor engine he points out. It's this water that may cause winter operating troubles.

The water is expelled from the engine in one of two ways. It may go out the exhaust in the form of water vapor, or it can go down into the crankcase and mix with the lubricating oil. The white cloud of steam commonly observed coming from automobile tail pipes illustrates the first and most desirable type of water expulsion.

Moisture Condenses

When a tractor motor is first started, Hull says it literally "rains" inside the crankcase due to the condensation of moisture.

He explains that normally the moisure leaves the crankcase in the form of water vapor when the motor oil reaches 145 degrees. During warm weather and extended operation, the moisture is easily driven off.

In cold weather, the oil takes longer to heat and the tractor is used for shorter periods of time, Hull points out. As a result, water may accumulate in the crankcase and cause damage to the motor.

May Form Sludge

For that reason, it's a good idea to cut the tractor crankcase drain period by one-half in winter, according to the agricultural engineer.

He says the oil and water may combine with prdoucts of combustion in the lubricating oil to form a mayonnaise-like compound called water sludge. It clogs oil lines, plugs rings and rusts shiny surfaces in the motor.

Under extreme conditions the water may freeze in the crankcase, usually resulting in frozen oil lines or a twisted off oil pump drive shaft. When this happens, the tractor may run for a time without oil pressure, unless the operator is watching the gauge closely, Hull warns. Bearing failure usually occurs in such cases.

That "Down" Corn

That big wind which hit Iowa last fall did more than blow down a lot of corn.

It proved what grand neighbors Iowa people are.

All over the state, young fellows . . . and even girls . . . went out from town to help farmers salvage their corn.

That's Iowa for you. Town folks help the farmers; farmers help the town folks. Yes, neighborliness really means something in Iowa.

And I think that's why we Iowans are noted for our tolerance and good will. We recognize that our neighbors have a right to their way of life, just as we have to ours. If neighbor Jones enjoys back-yard barbecues, that's O. K. by us. If neighbor Smith likes a temperate glass of beer after dinner, that's his privilege. A fellow who wants to dictate what a person eats, or drinks, or wears, or thinks . . . just doesn't belong in our neighborhood, or in Iowa.

When helpfulness and neighborliness step in, intolerance and meanness step out.

ELECTRIC BROODER REDUCES LOSSES OF PIGS AT FARROWING TIME 50 PERCENT OR MORE

Preventing early spring pig losses is one of the biggest opportunities of cutting costs of producing pork. Research shows that on the average 4 out of every 10 pigs farrowed never reach market.

Little pig losses may be reduced 50 percent or more through the use of an electric brooder such as is shown above, according to E. R. Johnson, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College. Heat from the electric bulb reduces chilling, keeps the pigs from crowding and reduces losses through crushing by the sow. Chilling, crowding and crushing account for 40 percent of the total pig losses.

This electric brooder can be built in the corner of any farrowing pen. It may be built permanently in the farrowing pen, or may be made so it can be readily moved from one pen to another and removed when the house is to be used for fattening hogs.

Electric brooders are inexpensive to operate. The heat is supplied by a 100 or 150 watt lamp. Johnson says that under normal conditions a brooder will use from 24 to 4 kilowatts during a 10-day operating period, which usually is the maximum time it is used for one litter. During warm parts of the day, the brooder can be turned off.

Plans for building this simple pig brooder may be obtained by writing to the Iowa State College Extension Service, at Ames. Ask for the pamphlet entitled "It's Easy To Build An Electric Pig Brooder," which includes working drawings of Midwest Plan 77717.

Solid Silver Bars Taken From Sunken Spanish Ship

MIAMI, FLA.— The Smithsonian institution in Washington, D.C., has revealed it has bought one of the ingots of solid silver recovered from a sunken Spanish galleon in the Florida keys.

Dr. Alexander Wetmore, secretary of the institution, said the bar had been bought from Charles M. Brookfield, Florida representative of the National Audubon society, and that it was "more than 200 years old."

The find was made by Arthur McKee, city recreation director of Homestead, Fla., last Memorial day while pursuing his hobby of making underwater pictures.

McKee, who has searched the keys for nine years as a hobby, says the ship was inside the reef and "more than three miles from land."

He would not divulge the exact location but said the wreckage lies in less than 60 feet of water.

"The ship carried at least six guns we can see," McKee said. "It lies in sand with coral grown partially over the wreck.

"I took pictures of the cannon and then came across some bulk and tried to move it. I got all excited and called to my crew to send down a line. The silver ingots were lying in ballast."

McKee did not disclose how many ingots had been recovered but exhibited two, weighing 60 and 80 pounds, in addition to that bought by the Smithsonian.

The vessel was not identified, McKee said, except that it was a Spanish craft and some of the wreckage bore Spanish markings, similar to those on the silver ingots.

Use for "Discards"

Women of the house will find that shirt boards (those cardboard backing sheets that come with laundered shirts) are stiff enough to hold sweepings when no dust pan is handy. Some housewives keep a supply of them in their basements and garages and reach for one when they are overcome with the cleaning urge. If you're building or remodeling a home, there's additional reason for saving those shirt boards. Stack them near the old broom used for sweeping up wood shavings, plaster particles, and the mud and dirt which is daily tracked into the house by workmen.

Home Rule for Senussi, New Twist in Cirenaica

Cirenaica, where the British have recognized a new self-governing regime by the native Senussi, is a small slice of North Africa involving a large package of world history and present-day international interests.

The region forms the eastern wing of Italy's former "desert colony" of Libia, notes the National Geographic Society. This colony is now governed by three military administrations. Two of the areas, Cirenaica and western Tripolitania, have been under British rule since wartime occupation. The third, southwest Fezzan, is under war-born French control.

Cirenaica covers about 200,000 square miles, much of it rocky, sandy waste. Nearly all of its estimated 290,000 inhabitants are tribesmen of the Senussi faith. Their spiritual and temporal leader, Emir Sayed Mohammed Idris el Senussi, heads the new more-or-less autonomous government, which is to be responsible for internal affairs.

Away from the towns, and the capital city of Bengasi, the Senussi are largely tent-dwelling nomads. They lead a simple pastoral life, dependent on the oases and a few other moisture-blessed regions to maintain their flocks and a few subsistence crops, such as grains, olives and dates.

The Senussi belong to a special Moslem sect which was started about a century ago by a traveling Arab missionary preaching a strict and puritanical form of Mohammedanism. The current leader of this politico-religious organization is a descendant of its founder.

Undulant Fever in Man Traced to Brucellosis

"The identical germ that causes the dread brucellosis or Bang's disease in animals is responsible for undulant fever in man," says Dr. Fred E. Allen, University of New Hampshire veterinarian, in answer to one of the most popular questions he is asked about this disease.

However, Dr. Allen continues, humans rarely, if ever, transmit the disease to one another. If humans do not carry the disease among themselves, animals obviously are the chief carriers and sources of infection. Cattle, swine and goats seem to be the three main carriers according to the work carried on by the state-federal eradication agency, and the U.S. department of agriculture.

According to these scientists, and Dr. Allen agrees, there is strong evidence that unpasteurized milk is responsible for many cases of undulant fever in man. However, although undulant fever is often caused by the cattle type of brucellosis, numerous cases have been reported as caused by contact with infected swine and goats.

Factual data on the incidence of brucellosis in goats and swine is at present inadequate, but the eradication agencies are working on this problem. At present it is believed that the disease in goats is largely, but not entirely, confined to the Southwestern states where the bulk of the goat population is found.

Estimate Earth's Temperature

Chemists have found a way to take a dinosaur's temperature, Proffesor Harold C. Urey of the University of Chicago's institute of nuclear studies revealed at a meeting of the American chemical society. The temperature of the earth during past geologic ages can now be estimated quite accurately by measuring the relative abundance of isotopic forms in clam shells, rock, and other relics, according to Dr. Urey, who won the Nobel prize in chemistry in 1934. He pointed out that the natural balance of various isotopes of a given element varies with the thermometer. This phenomenon has actually been used on a practical scale in the atomic energy work at Oak Ridge to separate isotopes by the so-called thermal diffusion process, he said.

Auto Center of Canada

Five railways connect the city of Windsor with all parts of Canada and the United States and a modern airport provides service. Modern highways and bus lines complete the travel accommodations. Recognized as the automobile center of Canada, Windsor has over 325 thriving industries. Products include pharmaceuticals, light and heavy chemicals, toys, textiles, pumps, playing and greeting cards, paper products, machinery, cereals, paints, and many other items. Farm products include tobacco, soybeans, corn and fruit.

Cold Preventives

Cod liver oil and vitamin A pills are worthless as cold preventives for the vast majority of people, according to Dr. Paul A. Day of the University of Arkansas. Persons with only a superficial knowledge of nutrition believe that vitamin A should prevent colds, because it has been shown that animals deficient in the vitamin develop infections of the upper respiratory tract. Most persons, however, are not deficient in vitamin A, and therefore attempts to prevent colds in large population groups by giving cod liver oil have been "almost uniformly disappointing," according to Dr. Day.

'Too Little for Brains' Idea Is Hindering Research Medicine

By BILLY ROSE

Today, I'd like to tell you about a talk I had with a doctor who is doing research work at one of the New York cancer clinics. He made me promise not to use his name because he was afraid he might be blacklisted by the foundation which pays his salary.

I began by asking him to sketch in his pre-research career.

"The usual 10-year grind," he said. "Four years of college, four more at medical school, a year as intern, and a year in residency training."

"What made you go into research?"

Billy Rose

"Like a lot of young doctors," he said, "I couldn't get used to sitting by while a patient died simply because I didn't know anything else I could do for him. Every time I looked up into the eyes of relatives gathered around the bed of a man in the last stages of cancer, I told myself that my job wasn't to go on using the hit-or-miss techniques but to get into a laboratory and help find the real cure."

"How did you go about getting started?"

"I made the usual applications," said the M.D., "but I soon found the hospitals and universities had no funds to hire research men, and that I couldn't get a job unless a foundation paid my salary. To complicate things, most foundations won't give you a fellowship unless you first have a job. In addition, it's almost impossible to get a grant until you've published a certain number of scientific papers and, of course, you can't publish such papers until you've worked in a laboratory and had a chance to do research worth writing about.

"It finally boiled down to this—I could work for nothing in a cancer laboratory, or I could take a job paying $120 a week doing research for a cosmetic outfit. Well, I had just gotten married and was ready to settle for the money, but my wife wouldn't hear of it—she went out and got an office job and made me stick to my test tubes."

"HOW LONG did you work for free?"

"About a year," said the doctor, "and then the head of the medical center—a very decent guy—squeezed me onto the payroll at $28.87 a week."

"You could have earned more washing dishes."

"We managed to get by," said the medico, "but the following year my wife had a baby and had to quit her job. After that, it was pretty rugged. As, for instance, we couldn't afford to buy a crib, and the youngster had to sleep in a donated baby carriage.

"Somehow, though, we pulled our way through, and by the end of the following year I had gotten a couple of research pieces published. With these to back me up, I applied for a fellowship paying $3,000 a year."

"Minus withholding tax, I presume."

"It may not sound like much, but I felt like John D., Jr. when the grant came through," said the doctor. "Last year, I went through the application rigmarole again—275 typed pages—and this time I got the full $3,600.

"WHAT DO YOU DO to earn all that money?" I said.

"I'm in charge of three cancer projects and help on half a dozen others. On the side, I run a throat clinic, work in the wards and give seminars."

"Any chance of a raise?"

"I'm afraid not," said the doctor, "and, as far as fellowships are concerned, I'm getting near the end of the line. I'm 29 now, and the foundations don't like to make grants to men over 30."

"There's always the job in the industrial lab." I said.

"It may come to that," said the M. D., "but I hope not. No matter what it pays, I want to keep plugging away on cancer. It seems a lot more important than developing a new shade of face powder . . ."

The day after our talk, I happened to pass the medical skyscraper in which the young doctor works, and I noticed that an additional wing was under construction. Dozens of steel workers, bricklayers and carpenters—all averaging around a hundred a week—were getting in each other's way.

Over the half-finished entrance was a space which looked as if it might eventually be filled with a block of marble on which a fitting inscription would be carved.

"I know what it ought to be," I said to myself. "'Too much for bricks, too little for brains.'"

"IF YOU ARE QUIET"

An old man sat one evening by his door,
His face was tranquil, in his eyes was peace,
His hands were still, his long life work was done,
He had a look about him of release.

And I, who needed much to learn the things
That he had learned, sat down beside him there
On the low doorstep in the scented dusk,
He smiled his gentle smile, he touched my hair,
He said: "My child, I, too, was restless once,
I, too, was hurt by life, and blind and dumb
I groped my way, then a wise one said these words
If you are quiet, so will help come
'Twas an old folk saying from an old loved land.
I listened to its teaching, listened long,
And learned its secret. He who trusts in God,
And who goes quietly, he will grow strong."

GRACE NOLL CROWELL

MIRROR Of Your MIND ■ ■ ■ Degrees of 'Emotionalism'

By Lawrence Gould

Are some people more "emotional" than others?

Answer: Very much so, if you mean that they display their feelings freely, or cannot control them when they want to. But I know no reason for believing that one person is endowed by Nature with more or less inborn capacity for feeling than another. Depending upon their life-experience, especially children, A—develops more intense feeling of love or hate than B—does and at the same time either remains free to express his feelings or is forced to "repress" them out of consciousness. But they may have been much alike to start with.

Does it do you any harm to be bored?

Answer: Yes For boredom is frustration (of your wish to do something that interests you) and frustration always tends to create rage and inner conflict. On the other hand, the reason for your being bored is often that you're childishly unwilling to "make the best of a bad job." For instance, try to learn something from a long-winded description of your future father-in-law's business problems if you have to listen to them while you're waiting for daughter to put on her make-up. Adaptability is the best antidote to boredom.

Do "truth serums" violate a prisoner's rights?

Answer: They would seem to, unless he accepts the treatment of his own accord and with full knowledge of what he is doing. For "narcoanalysis" may lead him to incriminate himself by admitting what the law allows him to require the prosecution to prove. A French court ruled that a prisoner who had been shown by this method to be feigning illness had been "deprived of his free will," and threatened to prosecute the doctors for "assault and battery." What goes on in our minds is no one else's business unless we choose to reveal it.

BASIL BECOMES A MAN

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

BASIL Winthrop's father had always made his decisions; had conducted the boy's affairs, organized his life, superintended his doings. Basil was an only child. His mother was dead, and because he had inherited his mother's mildness of manner, and because his father was a domineering type, Basil, following the line of least resistance, had allowed these things to happen. His father was wealthy and generous, so why not let the old man run the show? Basil thought.

He ceased to think thus when he met the girl with the red hair and blue eyes. She was selling kisses at a charity bazaar. Five dollars a kiss. Basil only had $30 in his pocket, but he stretched out the six kisses that amount would buy so that other customers got tired of waiting.

After the bazaar, he drove the girl with the red hair to the hotel where she was staying. He didn't ask her name; she didn't volunteer it. But they made a date for the next night.

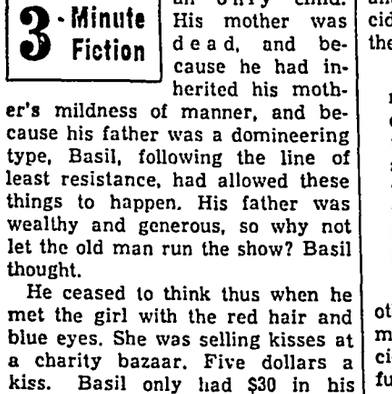
As he entered the front hall his father called to him. Basil hesitated, then squared his shoulders and went toward the voice.

Winthrop, senior, seemed in a good mood. "I've just met an old friend of mine, son Sarah Mortimer. She and her daughter, Elaine, are spending a few days in town. Son, I want you to meet them. Nothing would please me more than to see you and Sarah's daughter married."

Basil stared. This, he thought was the payoff. His father had arranged everything else in his life, but by golly he wasn't going to pick his wife!

"Dad, you're taking too much for granted. I can't marry Elaine. I—I'm in love with someone else."

"Someone else? Who?"



Basil continued to see the redheaded girl, and each time he saw her he loved her more.

"I—er—don't know her name."

"I see." Winthrop, senior, rose and patted his son on the arm. "I've arranged a dinner party for tomorrow. You'll meet Elaine then.

BUT BASIL didn't meet Elaine then. For the first time in his life he felt the electrifying qualities of manhood warming his blood. Instead of attending the dinner party, he held a clandestine meeting with the redhead. They had a swell time together. By mutual and silent agreement they decided not to confide to each other their identity.

Afterward, Basil had some regrets. His father was a powerful influence. He could make things decidedly uncomfortable. And the red-headed girl who, apparently, had been used to nice things, might not be so interested in him if she knew he was penniless.

Winthrop, senior, arranged another meeting with Sarah Mortimer and daughter. It was, he decided, to be the test. If Basil refused to follow his wishes this time—well, he'd have to get under way in taking his drastic steps.

When Basil heard about the arranged meeting he came to a decision. He would meet this Elaine and tell her in front of his father that he loved another. Then he would keep an appointment with the red-headed girl and propose marriage. That, he decided, was the only manly thing to do, and Basil had suddenly become a man.

So with his father Basil went to the hotel where the meeting had been arranged. Mrs. Mortimer and Elaine received them in their suite of rooms. Basil took one look at Elaine and almost collapsed.

She had red hair and freckles and buck teeth. She was about the homeliest looking creature Basil had ever seen. Moreover, she giggled.

Basil didn't wait for the dinner to get under way. He made his speech then and there, then headed for the door. His father accompanied him into the corridor.

"Son," said the old man, "forgive me. I didn't know what I was getting you into. Go marry your redhead. She couldn't be any worse than that."

"Thanks, Dad," said Basil. And he went off and kept his date with the red-head, whose name, it proved, was Mary Smith. He proposed and she accepted and they lived happily ever after.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

MORTON DOWNEY says "I've had more mileage out of my voice than any other singer in the business." He probably has; it was in 1919 that Paul Whiteman discovered him, singing in a small movie theater and looking "like an unfrocked choir boy." Bing Crosby says the only difference now is that "he looks like the oldest choir boy in the world." He has sung everywhere—church socials, night clubs, Hollywood, on the air, radio and now on television, too. A solid business man, he is director of three companies, vice-president of one. And he has found time to be a fine father; Mike, Lorelle, Sean, Tony and Kevin are proof of that.

After 30 years of acting—on the stage, in silent and talking pictures and in guest shots on the air—Ronald Colman has embarked on his own radio series (NBC Friday evenings). The applause he and Benita Hume Colman received after their four appearances on Jack Benny's show pursuaded them. "The Halls of Ivy" presents them as a college president and his wife.

Stars of movies and radio are giving so generously of their time to aid the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation that eventually you'll hear practically all of them. Cortisone, ACTH for Rheumatism

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHEN WE READ about the wonderful results obtained in the treatment of rheumatism and arthritis by the use of Cortisone—Compound E—and also ACTH, and have a loved one suffering with disability and pain, we may grow impatient with the delay in producing these drugs.

And in the case of ACTH, we cannot understand why a firm as large as Armour & Co., cannot produce it in sufficient quantities for even a small percentage of sufferers.

Perhaps all the answers to why we cannot get either of these drugs at the present time is because the tremendous demand greatly exceeds the supply.

Rheumatism is the oldest disease known to man and more patients suffer with it than with any other disease. Besides, to the great demand for the drugs in cases of rheumatism, research workers are reporting excellent results in the use of them in other diseases than rheumatism.

In fact, they state that Cortisone and ACTH will be hailed as wonder drugs of the same standing as insulin for diabetes. And like insulin, at present anyway, these new drugs must be taken continuously, as symptoms return when these drugs are stopped.

In "The Ontario Medical Review," Dr. Wallace Graham, president, Canadian Arthritis society, states that Cortisone, produced by Merck & Co., and ACTH, taking months to produce even under the best conditions, are now available.

"The production of Cortisone is an extraordinarily difficult and complicated process requiring more than 30 time-consuming chemical reactions. To produce the compound from its first step to the finished product requires many months. The amount accumulated from 1946 to January, 1949, will have been virtually exhausted by the experimental and clinical studies which have already been completed and by the additional studies now in progress."

Aside from the bile killing harmful organisms, the liver cells themselves filter out poisons from the blood which, if not removed, would cause tiredness and weakness.

Now that chest X-ray examinations are becoming available almost everywhere, it is known that hundreds of cases of tuberculosis are being found in which there was no thought that tuberculosis might be present. Some had the examination because they had been told that an early symptom of tuberculosis was tiredness, and they did feel tired most of the time.

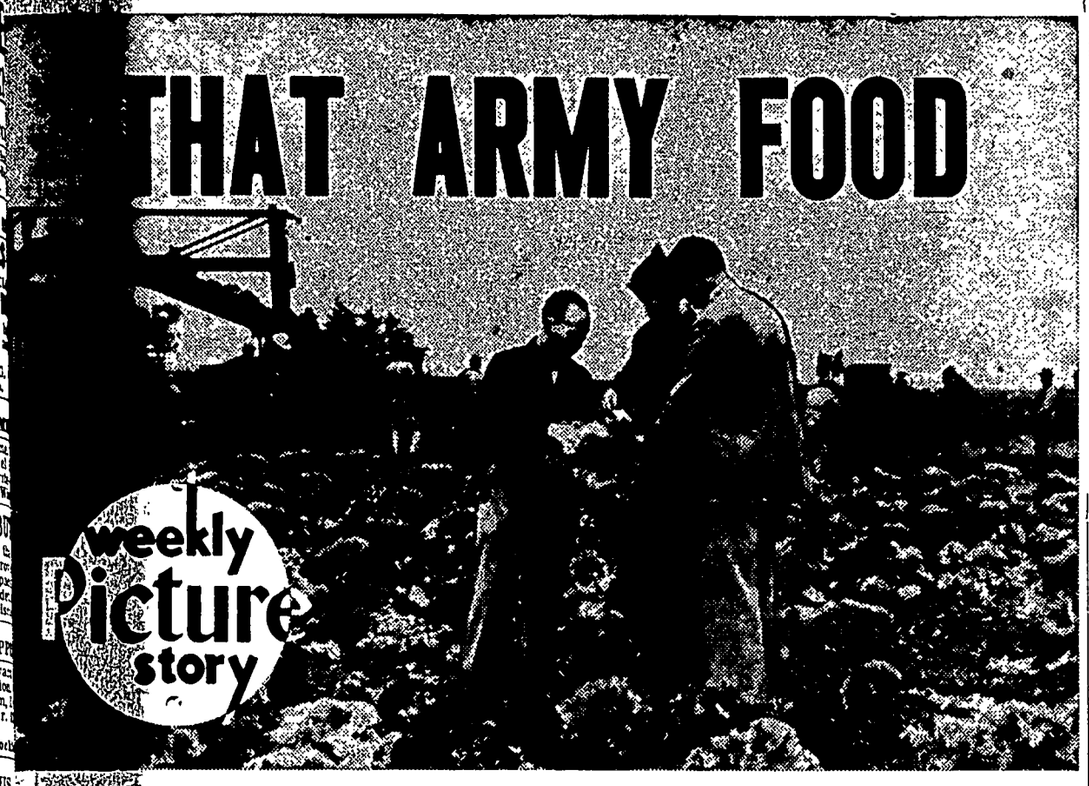
weekly Picture story



● Purchasing fresh food for the nation's armed forces is big business — a 31 - million - dollar - a - month business, and it is accomplished by the army quartermaster market center system on a nation-wide basis, using high-speed modern communication. The market center supplies virtually all the perishable subsistence required by the army, navy and air force. Shown above, Mr. Roberts, fruit and vegetable marketing specialist for the San Francisco QMMC, and Captain John Miller inspect lettuce in a field near Salinas, Calif. At left, marketing specialists in the teletype room at Chicago headquarters are in contact with various market centers throughout the U. S.

Purchasing through a system which ascertains availability of an item, quality, price and distance to be transported, enables quartermaster market center system to obtain the best possible food with which to feed the armed personnel of its various military forces. SPORTLIGHT

Old Guard Liked Rugged Matches

By GRANTLAND RICE

NO ONE CAN QUESTION the fact that football's big argument this winter will concern the two-platoon system.

This correspondent, opposed at first to the double-platoon idea, must admit in talking with Fritz Crisler of Michigan and Red Blaik of Army one gets a far better picture of what the two-platoon game means.

Grantland Rice

Crisler and Blaik must be listed among the top football coaches of all time. I mean up with Rockne and Haughton and Sutherland, to mention only a few. Both are smart, subtle talkers. They know their subject. On this day, Red Blaik stood for nearly two hours, challenging a long list of doubters—answering every charge.

"Of course," he said, "the old guard is against it. The old guard in anything is against every form of change. This is new football—football that is faster, keener, more exciting, less punishing on the player."

I thought about the old guard. I've heard them grumbling for over 40 years about the modern players of the 20's and 30's. They couldn't understand why a fellow couldn't play 60 minutes of every game. Shep Homans of Princeton was Snake Ames' substitute. Homans never got to play a minute until Ames graduated. Homans, weighing 165 pounds, was Princeton's fullback in 1890 and 1891. Sheps' substitute never got to play a minute. Homans played the full 60 minutes for 22 games.

But the game was different in 1925 and 1930. It is the contention of Crisler, Oosterbaan and Red Blaik that the game is still different. Today's demand is for speed.

They prove to you that it is faster, keener and more exciting because it is played with fresh men, with rested athletes. And if you tell Fritz Crisler the public doesn't like it, he points to Michigan's attendance record — 97,500 a game for either five or six games—plus television in Detroit.

Important Point

It has always seemed to us that in any football problem there should be only one angle to consider—what is the player's viewpoint?

I have never been interested in what the coaches or what the public might think. The player is the one who takes most of the beating — who makes most of the sacrifices. The coach is certain to be biased and selfish. Nearly always. The public pays but it doesn't have to pay unless it wants to, and its viewpoint is usually warped.

But the player should know. To get this slant I had a long talk with Arnold Galiffa, Army's leading star. Red Blaik had just said that Galiffa, his offensive spark, was also the best defensive player on the Army team. Galiffa played entirely on offense this fall.

"Don't you like defensive play?" I asked Galiffa.

"Oh, I like it very much," he said.

"Do you like to tackle?" I asked him.

"I sure do," he said.

"Then you don't like the two-platoon system?" I inquired.

"I certainly do," Galiffa said. "I'll tell you why. My job is to try to run the Army team on offense. To call the plays—to pass—to run with the ball—to block. Scoring is the big factor in football. Under our two-platoon system I am always fresh. I am never tired or battered. I can do a far better offensive job for the team. We are out to win games. Galiffa doesn't count. Cain doesn't count, John Trent, our captain, doesn't count. No one counts but the Army team. Individuals are out.

"To show you what I mean, we have very good men on our defensive squad. They know they won't be picked on any All-America. They don't give a rap about All-American mention. They are out to help win games for Army. Isn't that the way it should be?"

Official Has Say

"Suppose," an official said, "you were working a game and you saw a player holding—suppose you saw him palpably offside—suppose you saw backs distinctly in motion before the ball was snapped—suppose you saw every form of rule breaking taking place under your nose—code infractions that definitely affected the play.

"The officials are taking all the blame," he said, "while the full blame belongs to the players and their coaches.

KEEP GOOD FARM RECORDS SAYS HENDERSON

A good set of farm records will help keep Hancock County on the road to profits in 1950, observes County extension Director Paul Henderson.

He says a farm account book provides a basis for figuring out ways to make farming pay and at the same time, avoid losses. A good farm record shows where money was spent in the business and it shows which parts of the farming enterprise are yielding the best returns.

With this information, it's easy to relate income and expenses, and then make plans that favor the part of the business that's the soundest, Henderson says.

He thinks every Hancock County farmer ought to keep a record of inventory costs and depreciation costs on buildings and fences, fertilizer costs and an annual feed and livestock inventory along with all other expenses and receipts.

A record of actual expenditures may prevent paying for an item twice and a record book can serve as a financial credit statement, Henderson points out. The book also affords a means of filing tax returns and fire or damage claims.

The county extension director says there are several methods of keeping farm records. One is to keep a small notebook and make entries as business is transacted. Another method is to record every expenditure and payment by posting checks and deposit slips. However, it is sometimes easy to miss small items with this last method.

He thinks making entries in the book regularly each day at noon or evening meal is a good idea. For those who do not have a 1950 farm record book, can procure one at The Times Office.

ROAD UPKEEP COST HIGHER

Maintenance costs on county roads in Hancock County increased by about $550,000 in '49, while the amount spent for construction in the same period decreased, according to a report by Charles F. Merten, Hancock county engineer.

The county spent approximatly $263,000 for maintenance in 1949, as compared with $213,000 in 1948. Construction costs in 1949 were $107,000 in 1949. In 1948 they totaled $140,000.

Chief reason for higher maintenance costs in 1949 is due to increased wages of workers in this period, according to Merten.

AVOID CROWDING STOCK IN WINTER

They Won't Gain As Well As They Should If Space Is Too Limited

It's bad to crowd livestock during cold winter months. They won't gain as well as animals that are properly housed even though they stay healthy. That's the opinion of C. H. Van Vlack, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

A 175 to 200-pound hog needs at least 8 to 10 square feet of floor space, and laying hens need from 3 to 4 square feet of floor area each, depending on the breed.

Build Shed Extension

Build a shed extension on one side of a permanent type building if it is too small, Van Vlack suggests. Lumber and studs from the side of the old building that is opened for the new addition can be used to help build the extension.

To get the right amount of ventilation is usually a problem during cold winter months. Tight, properly insulated walls and joints, with vents to permit insulation as needed can usually prevent drafts and dampness that hold back livestock gains in cold weather.

Choose Ventilator

For hog and poultry-type houses that are low-roofed, Van Vlack recommends the slot-type ventilators. These, are long openings about 8 or 10 inches wide extending along the south wall of the building just below the ceiling. A wide board, hinged at the bottom, can be used as a cover for the slot opening.

Flue-type ventilators may be used in buildings that have enough height to keep air moving up the flue. Other types of winter ventilators include electric fan systems that are automatically controlled. Automatic systems provide positive ventilation and are a good way to maintain proper conditions in all kinds of weather, Van Vlack says.

IOWA CONSERVATION OFFICERS TO BE UNIFORMED IN IOWA

Iowa state conservation officers are to have an official dress uniform for the first time since 1934. The uniform will consist of a gray-green gabardine Eisenhower dress jacket and garrison cap, tan gabardine trousers, tan poplin shirt, green tie and suitable insignia.

Conservation officers will be required to be in complete uniform "at all meetings, special occasions and as further directed by the officer's superiors."

Iowa laws make no provision for purchasing conservation officer's uniforms, the uniforms being purchased by the individual officers. The Conservation Commission does, however, provide "insignia and all other badges of office" for the new uniforms. In recent years most of the conservation officers in the Middle Western states have been uniformed.

Larsens Sell Home Here To Former Klemme Residents

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Larsen have sold their home just north of the school house to Mr. and Mrs. Ed. G. "Nick" Ell of Belmond, who are former residents of Klemme when a number of years ago Mr. Ell had a garage and Ford agency here.

Mr. Ell is associated with the hybrid seed corn company at Belmond, but expects to retire in about another year when they will move to Klemme. Mr. and Mrs. Larsen expect to build a new home in Klemme, having purchased lots from Mrs. Mildred Day just west of her residence on Main Street.

Klemme will welcome Mr. and Mrs. Ell back to their old home town!

Friday, The 13th Gave Us A Variety Of Weather, All Bad

Friday, the 13th, was all bad luck as far as the weather was concerned: Rain, snow, fog, sleet, 2 below zero that night after the temperature dropped 23 degrees in 4 hours.

North Iowa has had some winter weather the past few days. Most roads were covered with ice, making driving hazardous.

HELP US TO HELP YOU IN THE POLIO DRIVE SET FOR JANUARY 16-31

The 1950 March Of Dimes will be conducted in Hancock County and throughout the nation during the, two week period from January 16 to January 31, Roy L. McMillin, Hancock County campaign manager said today. He predicted the drive would be the most intensive of its kind in local history.

"Recalling as we do the tragic polio epidemics just past," Mr. McMillin said, "each member of our varoius March of Dimes comittees is determined that this year's fund raising drive to aid polio patients must be the greatest in the 12 year history."

The Hancock county campaign director revealed the plan for raising this money will be follow as before. Every owner of an automobile in Hancock county will receive a letter with return envelope. If you do not have a car in your name be sure that you send your donations to either Roy L. McMillin at Garner or Mary Jane Jorgenson of Klemme.

We have had to borrow during the past year to help us pay the cost of the Polio cases in Hancock county. Now we have a large number of bills that are as yet unpaid on account of "Not Enough Funds." We want to pay all the bills for Polio, but the cost of each case has gone up. We did appreciate your donations last year. So many envelopes came in with a dollar bill, this will not be enough to pay this year and we are asking if you will make this dollar bill a five dollar donation.

If Polio hits your family we want to be able to take your case from your home to the hospital and give that case the best care and the best doctors that they have. This is your insurance that Polio will not cost you, no matter who you are.

One family alone last year ran near to $2,000.00 and the cost is not finished as yet. What would this do for any one family if it were not for this polio drive. We must not fail to send in our donations at this time.

We have many who have given in large amounts, $25.00 and $50.00 and yet the average is so small. Think this over and I am sure you will agree there is not a better place to spend a five dollar bill. If we can raise our average we will be able to pay our past due bills and care for those during 1950.

The people of Hancock County have always had the welfare of their children at heart and have always demonstrated their loyalty and support in the fight against the cruel disease, Infantile Paralysis.

This appeal is urgent. Please return your envelop as soon as possible. Make this the greatest drive we have ever had in Hancock County.

—Roy L. McMillin

REV. S. W. CUNNINGHAM IS NAMED 1950 CANCER FUND CHAIRMAN

Mason City, Jan. 18, 1950—Announcement of the appointment of Rev. S. Willard Cunningham, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Garner as fund raising chairman for the cancer control program in Hancock County was made by H. B. Hook of Mason City, state campaign chairman of the Iowa division of the American Cancer Society. He succeeds Miss Louise Beyer, who served in that capacity in 1949, successfully raising 159 percent of the county's goal.

Workers representing all of the towns and rural areas in the county will be named by Rev. Cunningham to assist in the 1950 campaign, which will be held in April, designated by congressional resolution as cancer month.

In accepting the appointment Rev. Cunningham, who is also a member of the board of trustees of Morningside College at Sioux City, "I have assumed community leadership for this important cause to help do my part in saving lives both today and in the future. The money we obtain broadens the attack through research, which seeks cancer's cause and cure; through education, which today can save thousands of lives if people learn cancer's danger signals and act upon them, and through service which is helpful to the patient himself. And, in addition, as we raise money, we supply life-saving educational information to the public."

The year-round program of cancer education and service is under the direction of Miss Beyer of Garner, chairman of the Hancock County Chapter.

Mr. Arnold had been in the banking business continuously for the past 55 years, and for a number of years was president of the bank.

Obituary

FRED A. ARNOLD was born October 4, 1874 on a farm in Clayton County, Iowa, about 8 miles west of McGregor. He was the second of six children born to his parents, Frederick Arnold and Mary Renziehausen Arnold.

He attended the German Methodist Church at Giard, Iowa, and became a member by confirmation. He attended the Giard school, the high school at Farmersburg and then took a commercial course at the Charles City College, and completed his business training at La Cross, Wisconsin.

In 1894, when Fred was 20, the Arnold family sold their land in Clayton county and bought some prairie land in Avery township near Klemme, Iowa.

In 1895 Fred Arnold began working in the First National Bank in Klemme as a bookkeeper and has been active in this bank for over a half century, and at the time of his death was its president.

On November 26, 1902, at the age of 28, Fred A. Arnold and Clarice Gibbs were married at the home of the bride's parents and they commenced housekeeping in Klemme and have continued as residents through all of their 47 years of married life. They are the parents of two sons.

Mr. Arnold was always interested in our schools and was a member of the Klemme School Board for 15 years, serving most of that time as president. He was also interested in town affairs and served several terms as councilman.

All of the business and professional people who were active on Klemme's Main Street in 1895, when Mr. Arnold started, have passed on and are replaced by younger men. And now, Mr. Arnold, Klemme's senior busiman, after spending a few weeks in a hospital, also received the call to leave us, and the end came Monday morning, January 16, 1950. He reached the age of 75 years, 3 months and 12 days.

Dolliver's major legislative interests, in addition to his committee assignments are veterans' affairs and legislation affecting agriculture and education, and he is well informed on these matters.

"CAN YOU NAME an animal that has eyes and cannot see; legs and cannot walk, but can jump as high as the Empire State Building?" asked the life of the party.

Everybody racked his brains during a period of deep silence, and racked in vain. Finally, they gave it up and demanded the solution.

"The answer," he said, "is a wooden horse. It has eyes and cannot see, and legs and cannot walk."

"Yes," the company agreed. "But how does it jump as high as the Empire State building?"

"The Empire State building," the humorist explained, "can't jump."

GOT OFF LIGHT

Patient: "Great, Scott, Doc What an awful bill for one week's treatment."

Doc: "My good fellow, if you knew what an interesting case yours was, and how strangely I was tempted to let it go to a post-mortem, you wouldn't grumble at a bill three times as large."

Undoubtedly

A tourist was enjoying the wonders of California as pointed out by a native.

"What beautiful grapefruit," he said, as they passed through a grove of citrus-trees.

"Oh, those lemons are a bit small owing to a comparatively bad season," explained the Californian.

"What are those enormous blossoms?" questioned the tourist a little bit farther on.

"Just a patch of dandelions," answered the guide.

Presently they reached the Sacramento river.

"Ah," said the tourist, "some one's radiator is leaking."

Do It Every Time

A wager was laid that it was a Yankee peculiarity to answer one question by another. To sustain the assertion a down-Easter was interrogated. "I want you," said the bettor, "to give me a straightforward answer to a plain question."

"I kin do it, mister," said the Yankee.

"Then why is it that New Englanders always answer a question by asking one?"

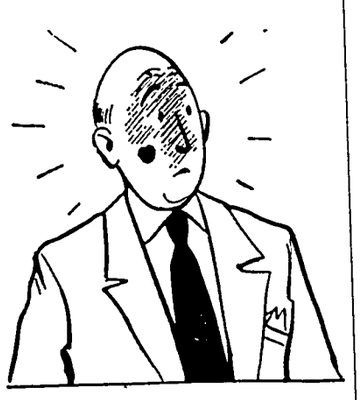
"Du they?" was the Yankee reply.

Careful!

As the doorman ran down to open the limousine door, he tripped and rolled down the last four steps.

"For heaven's sake, be careful," cried the club manager, "they'll think you're a member."

SURPRISE!



A pastor in Paris received a package from his nephew in America. It contained a very plain tie, suitable for one of his calling. He wore it one evening when he called upon a very orthodox family. In the middle of a deep philosophical discussion, the light suddenly went out. It was pitch black except for the pastor's "plain" tie on which gleamed the request, "Kiss me."

CORRECT!

Young Wallace was an inquisitive child and had been barraging his father with questions.

"Papa," he was asking, "is it true that Edison made the first talking machine?"

"No," sighed the father, "God made the first one, but Edison made the first one that could be shut off."

Permission Granted

A farmer on his first visit to New York came out of the Grand Central station into the confusion of Forty-second street, and after standing somewhat bewildered for a few minutes walked over to a traffic officer and said, "Mister, I want to go to Central Park."

"All right," said the officer. "You can go this time, but don't you ever, ever ask me again."

Old Mrs. Jones had led a sheltered life and had never heard of a lawyer before.

"Just what does a lawyer do for a living?" she asked her grandson.

"A lawyer, grandma," he explained, "is a man who induces two other men to strip for a fight, then charges them for holding their clothes."

"It was wonderful. Simply wonderful. He took me to that secluded rock near the sandbar, looked into my eyes, whispered sweet nothings in my ear, put his arms around me, and then——"

As she uttered those last words the lady oyster clutched at her throat and groaned in mortification.

"Oh, Good Lord—my pearls."

Pro Football Has Big Job Left

—By GRANTLAND RICE—

HE PRO FOOTBALL people, after a four years' war of de-uction, the most costly in sport, ve cleaned up at least part of e debris.

They have just as big a job left. this spot their complete future ns are still too vague to be dged. They have a good start with 13 clubs. They need three more to complete 16 teams that can then be turned into two big pro leagues. I don't believe they have a chance for any great measure of success if the 13 of 16 teams are to be confined to one league. There uld be two big leagues, entirely parate and distinct, with two gue presidents and Bert Bell on nd as football commissioner.

antland Rice

These two leagues must have the keen rivalry that now exists between the American and National leagues in baseball. They must be separate organizations. One league with only 13 teams would produce around four money-makers.

The old National league in 25 ars tried out 35 teams in differ-t cities with this result—four nners and 31 stained heavily th red. The four winners, finan-ally, were the Bears, Giants, edskins and Green Bay Packers.

It was a smart move to keep both Los Angeles and San Francisco in the new setup; they happen to be much better football cities than New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh or even Chicago. Their big crowds, even this last poor season, ran from 66,000 to 86,000 —far beyond any New York, Chicago or Philadelphia totals. Cleveland had a big drop from other years, but is still capable of matching or leading the top-drawer squads.

In their search for three other ams, pro football directors can rn to Texas with its frenzied otball interests and stadiums cap-le of handling 75,000 people. Dal-and Houston are two big-league ies worth inspecting.

The 13 sets of owners left have d too much experience swimming red seas not to have learned useful lesson. Their experiences ng other lines must have been pful. The big drop in football aries will give them a breath-spell. Almost everyone likes to see the player get his share, but not to take it all.

Pro football is too fine a spectator's game not to have a bright future. It has one weakness. To make money a team must be a winner or a capable challenger Collegiate football is different Traditional contests draw well despite a team's record.

In one old-time gathering they were talking about the star pros of the game, looking back to Red Grange, the greatest crowd-puller of them all.

Bronko Nagurski was one of the featured headliners, a great football player. There were Otto Graham and Frankie Albert. There was Jim Thorpe in the old days. The most effective combination that ever worked together was Sammy Baugh and Cliff Battles. They wrecked both the Bears and the Giants on successive Saturdays.

"The smartest football player I ever saw," Bob Zuppke said, "and this goes for college or pro, is Sid Luckman Luckman is an amazing man. He is a fine football player with his hands and legs and body. But he is amazing with his headwork. I believe Sid Luckman carries 500 plays in his head, far more than any team could ever carry into action. But he can reach in and find the right one when he needs it. Luckman is a master magician with that football brain."

There was another famous veteran coach in the group. "I'll tell you about Sid Luckman," he said "Don Hutson is the greatest pass catching end I ever saw. Sammy Baugh is certainly as great a passer and kicker as anyone would want to see. He is an all-around star. But for value to my team, I would rather have had Luckman than Baugh and Hutson combined. I mean that."

This may be overpraise. But it shows you the deep esteem in which Sid Luckman is held by all who know their football. Sid should have no trouble getting a good job coaching some team. He happens to be a gentleman on the side.

Sammy Baugh is another who should finish his football career on the coaching side. It might be mentioned here that the big majority of the pro teams left are ably coached. Greasy Neale is one of the best football ever knew. So is George Halas.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

Take Some, Leave Some

"If every hunter who goes afield this year will give some serious thought to next season's game supply and then take some action in an effort to enhance it, the problem of future hunting would be well on its way to solution."

This statement by Kelly DeBusk, Oklahoma state game and fish director, contains a lot of verbal meat and his advice to "take some action is particularly timely. Many sportsmen would sincerely like to follow through in doing something about the future game supply, but all too few know just what steps they can, as individuals, take in approaching this goal. Here are DeBusk's suggestions:

"Don't shoot a covey down to the last bird.

"Don't set the limit as a MUST every time you go hunting.

"Stop when you've had a fair amount of sport.

"Don't return time and again to the same area just because you had good shooting there yesterday.

"Wild game," the game director points out, "is a natural renewable crop. All crops, whether they come from the soil or are hatched from eggs, have to be planted and cultivated if the harvest is to be successful. Leaving some game birds as next season's seed is one way to insure good sport for the future. This is one way of planting next year's crop. Protecting it from both human and other predators and seeing that pleny of natural food is provided are two important forms of cultivating the game crop you have planted.

"Game management," DeBusk continues, "is not such a complicated science that it cannot be practiced by individual sportsmen. Interpreted in simple terms it is merely the provision of ideal habitat and adequate protection."

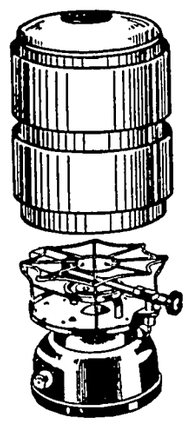
Happy Combination



Of course the duck season hasn't long to run, but the little portable heater shown here should be a natural for thousands of fishing shacks that will dot our northern lakes and rivers this winter. It is a chimney crown—the manufacturer's name for a sheet metal flue cap—and a Speedmaster stove which fit together perfectly to form a fast-action, radiant circulator for every winter sports enthusiast.

At birth a black bear cub weighs from 9 to 12 ounces which is about 1/200 to 1/250 of its mother's weight. It is about eight inches long, blind, and covered with dark hair so thin that it is practically naked.

Birds Have Mishaps

Partridges are adept at thundering from the ground and escaping through what looks like impenetrable brush and trees, but the Wisconsin conservation reports that the "thunderers" are not always as accurate in their aim as it may seem—that many of these birds do have "accidents."

In examining 100 partridges, department research men found seven birds with injuries that came apparently from colliding with trees and brush in escape flights.

The seven birds were found to have chest injuries, seemingly from flying into tree branches, and one bird was found with a small twig embedded in its flesh. One immature female had a severe head-scalping.

One bird was found with an acorn impaled on its bill and a "wear" mark showed that the nut had been there a long time. The bird managed to eat in spite of the impediment, as its crop contained other acorns.

Weight of Fish

Many are the times when an angler who has made a particularly good catch would like to know what his fish weighed stream-side, but has no scales.

Here's a way that the weight of the fish can be closely approximated: Just measuring the length and by the square of the girth and divide the result by 800. For example, a fish 18 inches long and 10 inches in girth would, under the formula, weighs 2.25 pounds.

SCRIPTURE: Acts 6:1—8:4.
DEVOTIONAL READING: I Peter 1: 3-9.

Lesson for January 22, 1950

TROUBLE IN THE CHURCH can start anywhere. Sometimes it starts with the women. That was the way the early church found it. The experiment in fellowship which they tried ran into snags, for not even the first Christians were perfect. The church in Jerusalem was in a sense inter-racial. Some were born and bred in Palestine, and there were others from the outside, with Greek names, speaking Greek as their native tongue —Hellenists they were called. There was argument: Were the Hellenist widows getting their share of the church's help?

Dr. Foreman

Committee Chairman

THE APOSTLES, being called on, refused to straighten the tangle themselves. Let the church elect a committee, they said. First on the list was a man named Stephen. He turned out to be most famous for being the first Christian martyr, but when he fell unconscious beneath that shower of stones, there died no ordinary man.

To begin with, he filled the bill as chairman of that Committee on Grievances. Not many men, then or now, could fill all three qualifications the Apostles required: reputation, spirituality, and wisdom.

It takes a very tactful man to settle a difficulty in which women are concerned; it takes tact to handle any committee; it takes tact to manage an inter-racial situation; it calls for wisdom to handle funds.

Debater

SOME MEN THINK themselves bigger than their jobs. Some men really are bigger, and Stephen was one of these. He spilled over, so to speak; he had even more energy and ability than the job called for. We hear of him debating around the synagogue circuit particularly in the synagogues which were used by Jews from other parts of the world.

We have no details of those debates, but we know how they always came out: Stephen got the decision. We can guess, from his great speech in the hour of his death, what his general line must have been.

Many Christians in Jerusalem at that time had little or no idea that Christianity was actually a new religion; even the name "Christian" had not been thought of. They considered it a form of the Jewish religion.

Scholar

STEPHEN'S SPEECH at his trial (Acts 7) may sound dull to some now, but it was not dull to the audience. No man makes a dull speech on the brink of death. Further, it was that speech that got him killed. His listeners may not have liked it, but they certainly did not think it dull! The beauty of the speech is that it reveals Stephen's keen insight into the religious history of his people.

Speaking without notes, he reviews the history of close to 2,000 years in a 10-minute talk, and yet brings out the main points. Only a real scholar can do that, a man who is both historian and prophet. The most important peaks in Israel's history were God's revelations to them; and Stephen shows that these revelations had never been tied to a house or a book.

No institutions and no place is indispensable to God. The same God who had wrought new things in the past had now wrought a new thing in Christ. And the religion of thing in Christ.

Martyr

STEPHEN'S AUDIENCE was not convinced. Seeing murder in their eyes, Stephen knew his time was short. In a few stinging last words he reminded them that murder was an old story in that Temple. They had killed prophets, they had killed Jesus the "Just One." And now—. Now they dragged Stephen out and stoned him till he died.

Well, you can stop a voice but you cannot stop an idea. Stephen was first to fall, but not the last. To this very year Christ has his martyrs, men and women who will die rather than deny him.

You can silence a man but you cannot silence truth. When the world goes against her, the Church should remember that now as then, "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church."

SHAMROCKS HAND CORWITH COHAWKS 53-17 DRUBBING

Corwith Seconds Dump Little Shamrocks In Opening 30-24

Klemme high school split a pair with Corwith here Tuesday night as the Corwith Reserves upset the Little Shamrocks 30-24. Goll paced Klemme with 10 points.

In the feature game the Shamrocks got off to a slow start but were ahead 6-0 in the first quarter and held the Corwith Cohawks to a lone field bucket in the second to hold a 17-2 point advantage at the half.

The Shamrocks had found their shooting glasses and began their famous third quarter bombardment in the third and stepped ahead 36-13. From there on out they had their own way. Corwith could not solve the Shamrocks defense and were able to hit for only one basket and a pair of charity tosses for 4 points, while Klemme racked up 19 with a good percentage of reserves in the line-up and ended the game: Klemme 53, Corwith 17, to give the Cohawks their worst licking of the year.

Josten and Brinkman lead the battle with 18 and 13 points, Kaduce 11, Schmidt 5, Pearson 2, Barz 2 and Schmidt 2.

Hancock Ministerial Ass'n. Met Monday

The Hancock County Ministerial Association met in the United Presbyterian Church of Garner on Monday. County Superintendent of Schools, Chas. S. Whitney, addressed the group on "School Reorganization."

A report of a questionnaire sent out to ministers and morticians in this area indicated that out of a total of 21 replies, 14 designated they did not favor Sunday funerals while the remaining 7 were non-committal. None of the replies indicated by designation that they did favor.

Of the replies, nine favored a county-wide group expression, four favored a town or community group expression, and four said they felt any action respect Sunday funerals should be left entirely to individual minister or mortician.

SUGGEST RATION TO USE IN FEEDING DAIRY COWS

A good balanced ration for dairy cows in winter consists of 500 pounds of corn and cob meal, 400 pounds ground oats, and 100 pounds of high protein supplement. Cracked soybeans, soybean oilmeal and linseed make good supplements. If cracked soybeans are used, the dairyman has a balanced ration in his home-grown grains, making purchase of costly supplements unnecessary. This ration is recommended when feeding a high-quality roughage such as alfalfa and red clover. When silage is fed, cut down corn and cob meal 50 pounds and increase protein supplement 50 pounds.

To help dairymen find good rations to feed along with the various roughages and pastures and to provide other information on feeding, Iowa State College has published a bulletin called "Feeding Dairy Cows." It is available at county extension offices and from the Bulletin Office at the College.

GOOD RATIONS FOR COW BETTER THAN STIMULANT

Dairymen wishing to increase production through feeding can best do it with proved rations rather than through feeding commercial feed containing thyroprotein stimulant, says George Stoddard, animal husbandman at the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station.

Most cows responding to thyroprotein do so at a loss in body weight. There must be compensated for by giving the cow added nutrients which are provided in the feed. Feed costs are roughly twice as much as the cost of home-grown grain. The resulting increase in production is not high enough to justify this higher feed cost. Actually, if the same amount of home-grown grains were fed in the same way, production would be increased more efficiently.

He says that feeding according to production, using high-quality roughage, home-grown grains and some high-protein supplement still produces the safest, most economical yields.

Stoddard also points out that cows respond differently to the stimulant. While some increase in production, others show no increase, and still others will actually show a decrease after a short period.

Abnormal stimulation in many cases is shown to cause impairment of health. Since studies on the effect of thyroprotein are incomplete, there is a possibility that it may be detrimental to cow health.

Another disadvantage of feeding thyroprotein is that if cows on official tests are fed thyroprotein, their records are not recognized by breed registry organizations.

ALL-WEATHER SECONDARY ROADS NEEDED IN IOWA

Secondary county roads must be designed for all-weather use in Iowa because transportaiton is a year-round necessity to agriculture now.

That is the opinion of L. M. Clauson, director of the joint board for study of secondary road surfacing problems of the Iowa Highway Commission. He voiced it in a report to some 250 Iowa county engineers and their assistants through the Engineering Extension Service of Iowa State College.

Because in some instances suspension of railroad service has made many Iowa towns dependent upon highway transportation for deliveries of mail, equipment and food, secondary roads will have to be better. They must serve the rural population of Iowa in every season and in every kind ofweather.

The social aspect of the secondary road must not be overlooked, said Clauson. Students travel to and from school. Families attend church every Sunday. Both use the secondary roads extensively in these social functions. Last, but not least in importance, these secondary roads provide a vital link in a state-wide transportation network.

Clauson told engineers that the weight and density of traffic affect the design standards and are primary factors in secondary road improvement programs. However, more and more consideration must be given to constructing secondary roads which require less maintenance. A little time and a few more dollars spent on construction of subgrades may save dollars in the future and give Iowa its needed secondary transportation links as well as durable farm-to-market arteries.

TREATING SMALL GRAIN SEED PAYS

Treat At Same Time Seed Is Cleaned During Winter, Specialist Says

It will pay you to treat small grain and flax seed, and the best time to do it is when the seed is cleaned this winter, according to A. F. Sherf, plant pathologists at Iowa State College.

Oat yield tests show that treating seed has increased on an average of 3 bushels an acre. The 3 bushel figure is the average increase obtained in more than 10,000 comparisons made by Iowa State College since seed treating became a recommended practice.

Improves Stand

The reson for higher yields is that treating produces better stands and protects the stand from some plant diseases. Chemicals applied uniformly on seed protect it from seed rotting organisms during the critical period of germination and protect plants from diseases such as smuts carried on the seed which cause trouble later on.

For oats, barley and wheat, Sherf recommends treatment with Ceresan at the rate of ½ ounce per bushel. However, he points out that this rate should be cut to ¼ ounce per bushel if treated oats are to be stored for more than 3 months before seeding.

Amount To Use

Recommended treatment for flax is 1 ounce of Ceresan per bushel for brown seeded varieties and 1½ ounces per bushel for golden seeded varieties.

Treat only as much grain as will be needed for seed. Chemically treated grain should not be fed to livestock in any amounts because of danger of poisoning, Sherf cautions.

He also advises against inhaling any of the dust while treating seed. Good ventilation and a dust mask can head off any irritation and unpleasant effects that the chemical might cause.

A dead person may vote, legally, if he mails an absentee ballot and then dies before election day.

Pierre, Great Hunter, Found Something He Could Not Kill

By BILLY ROSE

From the province of Manitoba in Canada comes the strange tale of Pierre Montevilain, the hunter. Your acceptance or rejection of it will depend on the kind of pixies under your hat. . . .

For many years, Pierre, a man with the strength of a caribou, lived in almost medieval splendor in a chateau overlooking Lake Winnepeg. Only two things interested him—hunting and drinking, and the measure of the man was that he was more concerned with the potency than the taste of his liquor, and cared little what it was he shot as long as he made the kill.

When he was forty, he married Emilie d'Arbesine, a girl of good family from the Winnipegosis district, and when she presented him with a son a year later he toasted his heir in Hudson Bay rum and predicted that he, too, would some day be a great hunter.

Billy Rose

His wife, however, hated the continual killing, and as the child grew older she was happy that he showed no inclination for the hunt. To encourage his love of wild life, she gave him a silver medallion of St. Francis of Assisi, patron saint of birds and beasts, and hung it around his neck on a thin gold chain. "I've heard it said that when people die their souls enter other living things, sometimes an animal," she told him.

A FEW MONTHS before the boy's ninth birthday, his father found a new-born fawn in the forest and presented it to his son. The lad named it Francois, bottle-fed it until the shakiness went out of its legs, and trained it until it followed him around like a puppy.

On his birthday a few weeks later, Pierre gave his son another present, a specially - constructed rifle, small enough for a boy to carry but in all other respects an efficient instrument of destruction.

"Tomorrow," he said, "we will go hunting."

The youngster said nothing, but later asked his mother what he should do.

"You must go with your father," said Emilie.

"You told me that when people die their souls go into animals," said the boy. "Wouldn't it be like killing a person?"

"Your father thinks differently."

"I won't shoot to hit anything," said the lad.

Pierre, who had been drinking on the porch, overheard the conversation. Addressing himself to his son, he said, "There will be no more women's talk. You will become a man and a hunter like your father. Tomorrow we go to the woods, but your first lesson will be tonight. Take your rifle and shoot the fawn."

Terrified, the boy nodded and went to the barn. He prodded the fawn with a stick and tried to frighten it into the forest. but the pet, thinking it was a new game, took a few playful leaps and then frisked back for more sport. Finally, the boy placed the medallion of St. Francis around the fawn's neck. It needed divine protection more than he.

HALF AN HOUR later, Pierre back on the porch, was roused from his rum by a shot and walked out to the barn, certain that the boy, like a true Montevilain, had obeyed his order. Instead, on the earth floor he found his son's body, blood oozing through the shirt, while the fawn, the medallion dangling from its neck, stood near by.

Crazed, Pierre picked up the rifle and pumped the remaining bullets into the animal's heart. Then he tore the talisman from the carcass.

Next day the boy was buried with the medallion of St. Francis again around his neck, and after the funeral Emilie went back to her own village.

From then on, the great hunter became the great butcher. Day after day, he killed as if bent on exterminating every animal in the forest, and at night he drank and cursed his wife for her ideas about souls and animals.

One evening the following summer he saw a giant stag at the far end of the garden. He reached for his gun and followed it down to the lake. At the water's edge the animal paused and Pierre lifted the gun to his shoulder, but instead of a giant stag he saw a frightened fawn. Its eyes reminded him of two other sets of eyes, but he fired, and the animal gave a little jump and fell dead. Attracted by something on its neck, he walked over to see what it was . . . .

The villagers were not surprised a few days later when they learned that Pierre Montevilain had died of a stroke. But there was much talk about the object found in the dead man's hand—a silver medallion of St. Francis of Assisi suspended on a thin gold chain.

The Presence

WHERE two or three are gathered together," Lord,
We have your promise that you will be there,
We cling to it your dear unbroken word,
We bring the burdens that we cannot bear,
We bring our heart's deep gratitude and praise
And all the supplications of our days.

And you are here among us as we plead;
We reach our hands to touch your garment's hem
Your treasure house is opened for our need
As much for us today, Lord, as for them
Who walked beside you on the earthly roads,
And found your hand beneath their heavy loads.

So Lord, within our midst, and by our side,
Continue still to be our strength and guide.

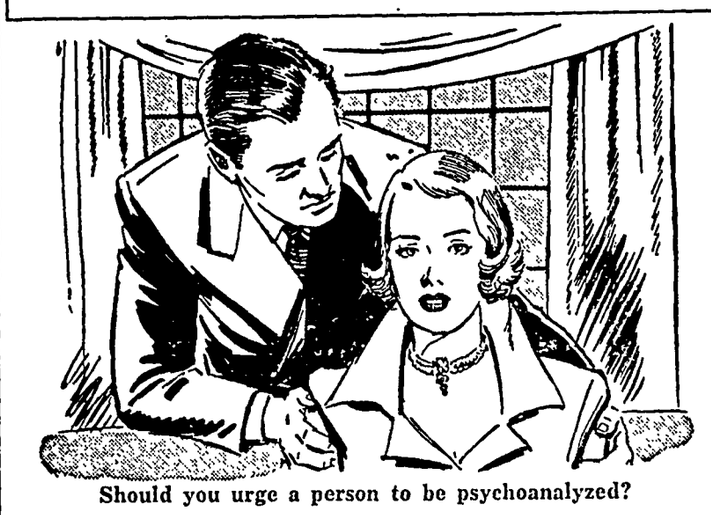
Never Force Psychoanalysis

By Lawrence Gould

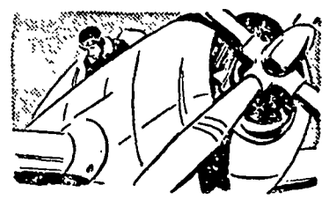


Should you urge a person to be psychoanalyzed?

Answer: Never! The most you can do is to let him know what the treatment means and give him a chance to observe what it has done for others—preferably yourself. Urging someone to be analyzed will make analysis seem to him a way of compelling him to become the sort of person that you want him to be, and is likely for this reason to intensify his "resistance," both to the idea, and to the analyst. The purpose of psychoanalysis is to help the patient to become more truly himself, and he can't do this to please you.

Can one person "drive" another insane?

Answer: Only if the other has psychotic tendencies to start with. But we do see cases of "folie a deux" (double madness) in which for example, someone suffering from delusions of persecution succeeds in convincing his wife—or some other person with whom he is living a comparatively isolated life—that the whole world is conspiring against them and that they must trust nobody but each other. Double suicide may follow, although suicide is more often a symptom of neurosis than of insanity.



Is a flyer who breaks down "all washed up"?

Answer: Not necessarily, reports Dr. D. D. Reid of the psychiatric staff of the British Air Ministry. Study of the later histories of more than 200 men who were victims of psychological disorders showed that 82 per cent of them were able to return to flying duty, although only 70 per cent proved capable of "sticking it out." Men judged to have had a "predisposition to neurosis" were the poorest prospects for complete recovery, but those pilots who were able to make a real come-back had a casualty rate no higher than average.

The Fiction Corner

CASE OF FORGERY

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"THERE'S A CURIOUS TWIST to this case, inspector," George Jackson, president of the Medville National Bank was saying. "Anthony Page, who deposited $25,000 with us on Monday, decided to use his right name at the last moment."

"His right name? What do you mean?"

"Anthony Page is a fiction writer. His real name is Edward Thurston. Recently a distant uncle died and left him a small fortune — $25,000 to be exact. Page consulted me about investments. I advised him not to invest in anything while the market was in its present unstable condition. He agreed, and decided to deposit the money in our bank until things looked better.

3-Minute Fiction

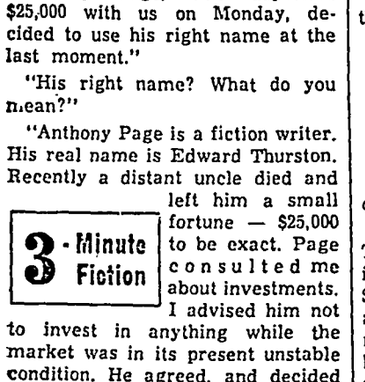
"He came in early Monday morning and made the deposit, decided to use his real name of Edward Thurston at the last moment. On Wednesday, a check for $5,000, signed by Edward Thurston, was presented and cashed by one of our tellers.

"I have questioned Thurston. He says he left for Chicago directly after depositing the money, and swears he told no one about his decision to use his real name. He had signed no checks against his account!

Inspector Kent Clifford reflectively lighted a cigar.

"You say that Thurston made his deposit early on Monday morning?"

"As far as I can find out," the president offered, "there were only two men in the bank while Thurston was here." He handed the officer a slip of paper. "Here are their names and addresses. Both are well known to all of us, men of high repute."



Simon's eyes grew wide . . . for a moment he stared as though struck, then impulsively turned and bolted.

Inspector Clifford studied the names. "Now tell me what your clerks were up to."

"Nothing unusual. Getting things ready to start the day. Making sure deposit blanks, pens, blotters, ink, etc. were on the lobby counters. Arranging their cash . . . "

Inspector Clifford snapped his fingers. "That's it. Come on, we're going to call on these two men."

THE FIRST CALL was on a man named Simons in the suburban town of Sharonfield. Mrs. Simons answered their knock.

"Harry is away. Is there anything I can do?"

Following previous instructions from Clifford, Jackson said: "We made a mistake in his monthly statement last week. Do you happen to know whether he has it handy?"

"It may be on his desk. Will you come inside?"

They followed her into the house. There was a small den off the living room containing a desk. Mrs. Simons began opening drawers and peering into them. For a moment Inspector Clifford stood idly by. Then suddenly he stepped forward and snatched something from one of the drawers.

Before the startled eyes of Mrs. Simons and the astonished gaze of President Jackson, he strode over to a window, studied the thing.

"Simon's our man," he said. "This proves it. Now—" He broke off as the front door opened and closed.

As Clifford finished speaking, Simons, a tall spare man, appeared in the doorway, stopped and looked about in bewilderment.

"I'm Inspector Clifford of police headquarters," the officer said, stepping forward. "Simons, I arrest you for forging Edward Thurston's name to a check for $5,000."

Simons' eyes grew wide. The color drained from his cheeks. For a moment he stared as though struck, then impulsively turned and bolted.

Anticipating the move, Inspector Clifford leaped forward. His fingers caught hold of the tall man's collar, and yanked him backward.

"Quite simple when explained," Clifford was saying later. "Simons probably needed money. He was in the bank when Page was making his deposit, and picked up the blotter Page had used when signing his name. It was a new blotter, and the imprint therefore was definitely easy to copy for forgery purposes."

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

JOHN BARRYMORE, JR., making his screen debut in Eagle Lion's "The Sundowners," is afraid of just one thing—that he will unconsciously copy his famous father. Playing a quick-triggered cowboy, he had two elderly actresses who had played with John, Sr., to check on his work; after seeing "The Great Profile" and part of "Richard III," he was upset at finding that many of his own mannerisms were like his father's. He is 17 now, and says that maybe when he is 21, with his own acting style set, he will see some of his father's old pictures. Robert Sterling, Robert Preston, Chill Wills and Cathy Downs are also in "The Sundowners."

KEEPING HEALTHY

Early Rising After Operation Helps

By Dr. James W. Barton

SOME OLD PHYSICIANS shake their heads when they see patients who have undergone surgical operation allowed up on their feet for a few minutes in the afternoon after a morning operation.

Some physicians go as far as to say that as hospitals are overcrowded, getting the surgical patient on his feet and allowing him to go home in a week or 10 days is just a "scheme" to make more beds available for waiting patients.

It was in surgical treatment of hernia, rupture, and later removal of appendix, that early rising was first tried; the results have been so satisfactory that some surgeons allow their patients out of bed and out of hospital in half the time formerly allowed, even when the operation is more serious than hernia or simple appendicitis.

In "The Journal of the American Medical Association," Dr. Amos R. Koontz, Johns Hopkins university school of medicine, Baltimore, states that he is in favor of early rising after operation for hernia. The main argument against early rising is that it puts too much strain on the sutures, but if the suture line will not hold from the effort of standing on the feet, the hernia will return or break down anyway.

Dr. Koontz points out that straining coming out of anaesthetic and straining in using the bedpan, increases the pressure on the sutures as much as getting on the feet early on the day of operation.

"With early ambulation (walking about the room) the patient does better in every way and there are fewer complications. Healing probably takes place faster for two reasons.

"Ambulation (1) increases the blood supply to the wound and (2) tends to keep the patient in positive nitrogen balance—keeping a well person in bed causes a daily loss of nitrogen." Nitrogen is absolutely necessary to various body processes and forms the largest part of the air we breathe.

"Early ambulation does not mean that the patient should sit in a chair for hours at a time especially for first few days after operation. The patient should walk around or be lying flat."

GREEK RENAISSANCE

● The second play of the trilogy—"Cheophorae"—opens with this meeting (below) of Orestes and Electra, son and daughter of Agamemnon at the foot of their murdered father's tomb. Looking on are Electra's slaves. Seldom have the Greek revivals been presented on such a scale and with such success as the 1949 revival.

● King Agamemnon enters (above) and with him is hapless Cassandra, a Trojan princess he has brought home as a trophy. Nimble hands of Greek maidens spent many busy hours weaving the heavy fabrics from which dresses were designed for the main characters in the drama.

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE

Q. I could hardly believe my eyes when I looked up the word "baton." My dictionary gives as first choice the pronunciation "BAT-un"! That I will not say.—D. B.

* * *

A. Baton is a French loan-word that, to use an apt phrase, has long been kicked around by the dictionaries, both British and American.

To begin with, the French spell the word baton with a circumflex accent mark (an inverted v) over the "a," which gives it the "ah" sound. The "o" is nasalized, thus: bah-TAW(N).

The French nasal vowels are not retained in the American pronunciation of words of French origin. The prevailing American pronunciation of baton, then, is either buh-TON, or ba-TON with the "a" as flat as in "bat," and "ton" rhyming with "con, don." An almost-French pronunciation, "ba-TAW(N)"—flat "a"—is heard occasionally on the air, but it is a conscious affectation.

Despite the fact that ba-TON (or buh-TON) is the standard American pronunciation, you'll not find it in Merriam Webster's, Funk and Wagnalls', Macmillan's, Winston's or the New Century. These dictionaries list the Frenchified "ba-TAW(N)" and the British "BAT-un."

Not once, during more than half a lifetime of observing and studying speech in America, have I ever heard "BAT-un," except in the solitary instance of the Louisiana place name, Baton Rouge, as: BAT-un ROOZH.

But "BAT-un," for the stick which a conductor waves at his musicians, simply doesn't exist in American usage. It is, therefore, amazing to find it listed as the "preferred American pronunciation" in some American dictionaries, and second choice in others. Indeed, why it is listed at all is as baffling as the dictionaries' fondness for those other un-American curios, "SHIF-on" for "chiffon," and "ree-VAIL-yi" for the bugle call reveille.

Correct American is: ba-ton or buh-ton. If you want to appear "long-haired," say: ba-TAW(N). But don't go around saying "BAT-un." People will look at you with very queer expressions on their faces.

Q. To settle an argument, please state whether the "fall" of "infallible" rhymes with "ball" or "pal."

A. Infallible, "not capable of erring," is accented on the second syllable, which rhymes with "pal," thus: in-FAL-i-b'l.

Q. Who is right? A says that the first syllable of "pulmonary" rhymes with "full." B says it should rhyme with "dull." (I'm B.)

A. B wins. The "u" has the "uh" sound as in "dull, mull," thus: PUHL'moe-NAIR-ee.

Q. To decide a wager, tells us whether it is correct or not to pronounce Joliet, Illinois, as "jolly-ETT."

A. Sorry, no. The first syllable is like "Joe," and receives the accent, thus: JOE-li-ett.

Q. I've been corrected for saying, "He has the Saint Vitus dance." But why is that wrong?

A. The correct form is "Saint Vitus's dance (say: VY-tuss-ez)." The name was first given to an epidemic of nervous dancing mania occurring in parts of Germany in the Middle Ages. The victims often prayed before the shrine of St. Vitus, for the saint was believed to have the power of healing them. Say: He has Saint Vitus's dance.

The common medical term, however, is chorea, pronounced: koe-REE-uh. Chorea, appropriately, is from the Greek word choreia, "dance."

Lincoln: Here in the midwest, we use the word "kensington" to designate any social entertainment other than bridge. What is the origin of the word?—Mrs. G. A. A.

Answer: The only listing in the reference books of my library is in Webster's New International Dictionary, Second Edition: "kensington (note small 'k'), noun. A kind of afternoon social party, especially one at which sewing and knitting are done." No origin is given, but there probably is some connection with Kensington, a historic and fashionable borough of London.

3 Lithuanian Brothers End Lengthy Separation

ROCHESTER, Ind.—Separated 44 years ago, three Lithuanian-born brothers have finally contacted each other.

The burden of the search was upon John Wesselena, who now is a Boston, Mass., shoe manufacturer. Frank, who lives in Rochester, and Michael, living in Wendale, Ida., came to the United States together and remained in touch with each other.

However, during World War I the two brothers in the United States lost contact with the remainder of the family in Europe.

When John came to the United States in 1919, he did not know where to find his brothers. His search was complicated because Frank and Michael had shortened their name from Wesselena to Wesla when they applied for U. S. citizenship.

Deer Now Pest in Minnesota, So Hunting Ban Is Lifted

Because of damage to agricultural lands by deer, Minnesota this year opened the entire state, except refuges and posted areas, with hunters permitted to take one deer of any sex or age. Frank Blair, superintendent of game, in announcing the season declared:

"To give the farmers relief and keep the herd under control we are opening everything. Deer are a real problem in farming areas. More complaints have been received on deer damage than ever. Something had to be done."

Chester S. Wilson, conservation commissioner, explained:

"Minnesota is in the process of correcting one of the saddest mistakes ever made in the name of conservation, namely, giving too much protection to deer in state parks. Permanent damage has been done to the parks by deer which have multiplied far beyond the capacity of the range to support them.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

The Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

The garage owner remembered Harry. "He quit here a month ago. I had to get on him about his driving. Once I took him out of his car because he was too drunk to drive." A friend remembered Harry. "He left the tavern about 5:30 that evening pretty well lit up. But drunk or sober he always drove fast."

At 6:10 p. m., someone saw Harry's convertible race a car the length of a street then cut in sharply that the other car almost climbed the curb as the driver avoided an accident. For the next four hours and twenty minutes no one saw Harry - until:

"I was driving along this street about 10:30 when a convertible shot out of an alley and hit me in the side. The driver backed away, turned off his lights and roared away."

Twenty minutes later a final witness had remembered Harry. "This convertible came around the curve right on the center line. I just got off the road in time. When I looked back the convertible had hit the car behind me and was still spinning around on the highway."

And this is how a Highway Patrolman remembered Harry. "Bleeding from the mouth, nose and ears. Left side crushed. Arms and legs broken. Killed instantly."

ISSUE CALL FOR BIDS ON DRAINAGE PROJECT

A letting on the cleanout of the open ditch on the West Main of Hancock County drainage district No. 1 and 2 will be held at the courthouse in Garner at 1:30 p. m. Monday, Feb. 6, according to County Auditor Maynard Schoneman.

The project was decided upon at an informal hearing of taxpayers in the watershed of west main held at the courthouse Monday afternoon after C. F. Merten, engineer, reported that the main is in need of repair and that the cost thereof would not be excessive.

The project will include the removal of approximately 83,640 cubic yards of silt and some trees and the total cost of the project is estimated at approximately $16,000 which will include the engineering. C. F. Merten has been appointed construction engineer on the project.

TWIN LAKE TOWNSHIP LEADS IN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE FOR MEMBERS

Francis Sandry, captain of Twin Lake township and his fine crew of leaders and workers, are leading the county on their Farm Bureau membership drive, with only five to go to have their quota, reports Paul G. Shurts, Fieldman. They may be the first township to go over the top, replacing Erin township who had that honor last year.

According to the reports in the office, Shurts said Garfield second high with only eleven to go for quota, with Ell running a close third. Reports coming in today, Saturday, may change the position of these fine teams of workers.

The number of memberships paid in is ahead of last year at this time by about 100 members.

Senator O. K. Lynes when talking to a meeting of state captains in Des Moines said "I don't mind telling you that at the last legislature over on the hill, we made a little hay. That isn't all, there wasn't very much of it that was injured by rain or dew."

KEEP CLOSE TAB ON CATTLE PRICE

Rex Beresford Says It Will Take Smart Marketing To Get Top Price

It's going to take a smart and orderly job of marketing to get the best prices for fed cattle this season, observes Rex Beresford, extension animal husbandman at Iowa State College.

He says that even though more feeders were bought last fall, the total beef supply in 1950 probably will not differ much from that of 1949. But the distribution will be different and feeders will need to watch the market closely to take advantage of market trends for their particular grade of cattle.

Finish Them Out

Right now there's a wide spread between the top grades and the good and medium grades of beef. That means the feeder who has pulled his cattle in off of cornstalks can afford to finish them out in the feedlot if they're good enough in quality.

There's nothing in the picture, however, to indicate that the wide spread in the market will continue. Beresford says that normal seasonal market trends are against this and there are enough quality cattle on farms to cause the present spread to narrow when they start moving to market in larger numbers. That's why he thinks it will pay to watch the market on all grades of cattle.

Be Ready For Changes

At any rate the animal husbandman doesn't think it's wise to take cattle out of the stalk field, feed a month and then market, unless the livestock feeder is convinced that his cattle are past the stage of economical gains. However, it's a good idea to have the market picture pretty well in mind this year when cattle are reasonably finished for their grade, Beresford says. Then the marketing date can be moved one way or the other to take advantage of a trend for a particular grade.

CROSSINGS DANGEROUS ON SECONDARY ROADS

Accidents at intersections on secondary roads are on the increase according to records of the State Department of Public Safety. This survey resulted in a report to county engineers by Safety Engineers D. W. Burch of the Iowa Highway Commission.

Sent to highway engineers all over the state by the Iowa State College Engineering Extension Service, the report had recommendations to cut the toll at intersections.

Intersection are likely spots for due to sight restrictions such as high banks, field crops and weeds. The report recommended cutting of weeds and allowance for vision by not planting corners of fields where intersections meet. Other suggestions are the cutting of embankments where possible and better safety planning on new projects.

Planned construction is part of the answer; new projects could be engineered to do away with blind intersections. Also, where necessary because of heavy flow of traffic, roads could be made wider than the prescribed 24-foot width. However, wider roads should result only where necessary. Temporary posting with warning signs is also a suggested measure to reach a greater safety margin on secondary roads

At present the Highway Commission is preparing a new manual on uniform traffic control devices. Two changes are notable: Warning signs will be diamond in shape, and the square "caution" sings will be replaced with the diamond shaped signs as the square ones are retired through normal wear. The system of warning signs coupled with elimination of existing hazards and safety planning on new projects will, it is hoped, cut the secondary road accident toll.

Accidents will be reduced on secondary roads, says Burch, when the people of a community make up their minds they want safety.

DIED EARLY FRIDAY MORNING AT HIS HOME IN KLEMME

Had Been Ill Only For A Few Days With A Heart Attack

Funeral services for Henry Suckow, 51, Klemme bookkeeper, were held from the Klemme Methodist Church Monday afternoon in charge of the Wellemeyer Funeral Service, with the Rev. E. Morris Egeland conducting the final rites.

Special prelude and postlude music was provided by W. F. Pavey on the sound system and Maurice Jacobs accompanied at the organ while Mrs. Wesley Patterson and Mrs. Vern Bisom sang "Abide With Me" and "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

The following obituary was provided by Arthur Wellemeyer and read during the serves by Rev. Egeland:

Obituary

HENRY SUCKOW was born January 17, 1899 on a farm in Liberty Township, the youngest of a family of seven children born to his parents, Henry L. Suckow and Taldine Brouwer Suckow.

He attended religious instruction at the Liberty Methodist Church and was confirmed during the pastorate of Rev. H. W. Schneider.

After completing his rural school education, he attended the Garner High School and then completed his business training at Iowa Falls.

Henry Suckow was a victim of Infantile Paralysis when four years old, since then he has walked on crutches, but, he was a bright lad mentally and in spite of this handicap became a good accountant and his services as bookkeeper were always in demand.

He worked as bookkeeper at the State Savings Bank; then at Northern Implement Store, Jacobs Hdw., and was employed by the Klemme Hardware Co.

He also served several years as Justice of the Peace.

Henry Suckow was never married, but he owned a little home, close in, so he could walk to work and was quite comfortably situated.

Henry Suckow was a friendly man, a brilliant conversationalist, and a jolly companion, his ready wit will be missed on Klemme's Main Street.

About a week ago, Henry became ill with Influenza, this with his Asthma was a bad combination, and the end came Friday morning January 20, 1950.

He reached the age of 51 years and 3 days and leaves to mourn his passing; two sisters: Etna, Mrs. Herman Paul, Garner, Mae, Mrs. Lawrence Schaefer, Milwaukee, Wis.; four brothers: John H., Klemme, Carl of Jennings, La., Lous of Mason City, Iowa and Rev. Will M., Van Meter, Iowa, many other more distant relatives and friends.

Burial was in the family lot in Ell Township Cemetery and Henry was carried to his grave by Bernard Smid, Ernest Henschen, Henry Smid, Melvin Neuberger, Art Wille and Wayne Schoenwetter.

Special Speaker Procured For Adult Bible Class

Rev. Vernon Jaberg, of Talmadge, Nebraska, will be the speaker for the next meeting of the Klemme Evangelical and Reformed Adult Bible class at the church on Tuesday evening, January 31st.

Brower To File

Hancock County Sheriff L. M. Brower has announced his candidacy to succeed himself as sheriff and began circulating nomination papers on Tuesday. He will be a candidate on the republican ticket.

"The unprecedented incidence of infantile paralysis during the summer just past calls for increased alertness against the possibility of even greater attacks by this dread disease. Exhausted funds must be replenished and all promising means for wiping out the scourge must be explored. The March of Dimes affords a democratic way for all Americans to join in the fight against a common enemy."

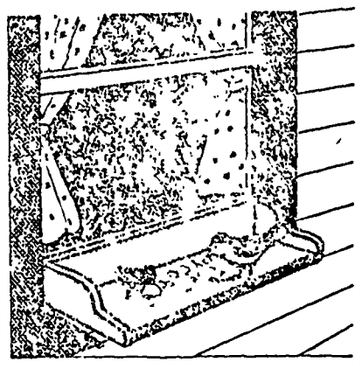
Good Show

There's nothing like having a good show going on around your home to help winter months along. And with a bird-feeding tray fastened on your window ledge or nearby post, it's likely to be a continuous performance.

"Calling all birds" with a hunk of suet or weed and other bird seeds is a good way to brighten up dull winter days and furnish the whole family with entertainment.

The country boy or girl living on a farm with a large shelter belt has an excellent opportunity to attract a wide variety of birds to his or her home. A shelter belt can be pretty much of an oasis to wildlife in the middle of acres of cultivated land or prairie. Trees or shrubs that bear fruits or seeds attractive to wildlife will help considerably as a drawing card.



With a feeding tray . . . it's likely to be a continuous performance.

Town people can also attract a good crowd of feathered friends to their homes but, in town or country, it's smart to get your reservations in as early as possible Start putting out food for birds as soon as you can, so that they will become accustomed to visiting your place and will attract other birds there as winter wears on.

Firm, white beef suet is one of the best bird foods. Woodpeckers will bother with little else, and nuthatches, brown creepers, chickadees and blue jays are good customers Sunflower seeds are popular and hemp and millet seeds also are favorites Cracked corn can be used, but it should not be too coarse.

Bread crumbs, chicken-feed canary seed, nuts and peanut butter may also be included on the bill of fare for the feathered friends

After visiting the same place day after day, birds become quite tame. In fact, if one is willing to take some time and patience, chickadees may be coached to take pieces of peanuts and other tidbits from a person's hand. Other shyer birds eventually may follow suit when they observe that no harm comes to the chickadees.

All this can lead to an interesting hobby, too, for birds sitting just outside your window make good subjects for the camera.

Tips for Anglers

If you have forgotten to take a rule or measure with you when going fishing, remember that one standard cigarette measures 2 and ¾ inches in length and will serve as a measuring gauge Hard wax, such as used on floors, is excellent for rods and tackle· two or three coats will keep them like new . A zipper tobacco pouch makes a fine holder for small tools used in repairing reels and other tackle; it is dustproof and practically waterproof . . . Many good strings of soft-mouth fish, such as crappie and bream, are lost due to their being torn off the stringer; for that reason a fish bag or sack is far superior for holding catches of these species . . . Newspapers stuffed in boots will absorb the water and moisture acquired from use . . . Nylon leaders are sometimes hard to straighten out, but this can be accomplished easily by drawing them through a piece of rubber—such as a boot strap . . . Model airplane lacquer of the 10 cent variety is ideal for touching up old plugs and lures.

"No, I'm not kidding," he said. "In the first place, Cleveland will have one of the best pitching staffs in the league. Watch young Garcia this n. He will be one of the best in all. Hank Greenberg is a natural optimist anyway. He has full faith in the Indians to move up where they were in the fall of 1948, which is in front. Hank is an extremely able operator already, although still young at his new trade. He won't do his ball club any harm.

The Unworried Manager

While inspecting the various managers who have been in New York we ran across the one and only unworried leader. His name happens to be Burt Shotton, the celebrated Florida fisherman.

Burt is in a tough spot. If they ever start crowding him, all he can do is to retire on more than enough and fish the rest of his life. A very sad fate.

"They come to us in trades," he said. "We don't have to go to them. We've got all the ball-players we need. When young Morgan arrives, our infield will be complete. He is better than a .300 hitter and a fine infielder. I guess that leaves us a punk infield — Gil Hodges at first—Jackie Robinson at second—PeeWee Reese at short and Morgan at third — plus three or four utility stars.

"We have about six good outfielders. And I mean good if not great right now. Pitchers? How many games will Don Newcombe win in 1950? Twenty? Twenty-five? Maybe more. Preacher Roe? About 80 per cent of all he can pitch."

"How about Branca and Barney?" I asked the eminent fisherman.

"If either had some of Dizzy Dean's confidence they might be 30 game winners. Their weakness isn't physical—it is psychological, I guess. Some year, maybe this year—Branca and Barney are go ing to become winners."

Rex Beach was a magnificent writer on the side of adventure and rugged life. It is impossible to recall a finer gentleman and I still can't recall a rival in the combined fields of writing, athletic accomplishment and sportsmanship.

But Rex Beach, the athlete, shouldn't be allowed to step into old Charon's barque and slide into the fogs forgotten. Rex was one of the finest athletes I've ever known, and I'm not barring Jim Thorpe.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

A Baby Won't 'Save' Marriage

By Lawrence Gould

Will having a baby "save your marriage"?

Answer: Not if it needs "saving"—that is, if you and your wife or husband are really at odds with each other. In that case, the added responsibility and care will be more likely to deepen the suspicion of each partner that the other is not doing his or her share. The time to adjust yourselves to one another is before the baby comes, not after. But if you both want a baby for its own sake, planning for it will bring you closer together and sharing the thrills of watching it develop will create a lasting bond between you.

Should you try to "top" a hard luck story?

Answer: No. There's a more or less unconscious urge to do this which you'll see especially in married people—as when John comes home exhausted from a hard day at the office, and Mary, instead of listening to his tale of woe, breaks in with a recital of her troubles with the children, meant to prove that she deserves more sympathy than he does. The result is that they both feel angry and frustrated, whereas if they had been willing to "take turns," each would have had a hearing and have felt drawn closer to the other.

Can psychiatrists agree on what's wrong with you?

Answer: They can come at least as near to it as other doctors, and perhaps a little nearer. Two Royal Air Force psychiatrists report that a review of 541 cases showed ninety per cent agreement on the commonest diagnosis ("anxiety state") and concurrence in diagnosing almost two-thirds of all types of patients. The doctors were less unanimous as to the causes of their patient's ailments, with one group inclined to lay more emphasis on "flying stress" and another—probably the Freudians—on "predisposition to neurosis."

Effective Cough Syrup, Mixed at Home for Economy

No Cooking. No Work. Real Saving.

Here's an old home mixture your mother probably used, and is still one of the most effective for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

Make a syrup with 2 cups granulated sugar and one cup water. No cooking needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly and tastes fine.

And you'll say it's really excellent for quick action. You can feel it take hold swiftly. It loosens phlegm, soothes irritated membranes, helps clear the air passages. Thus it makes breathing easy and lets you get restful sleep.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its quick action on throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if not pleased in every way.

Cancer of Lung Detectable Early

By Dr. James W. Barton

WHAT MANY OF US FORGET is that nearly all symptoms of various ailments clear up of themselves within a reasonable time. If symptoms continue, with or without treatment, for an "unreasonable" time, then the cause of the symptoms should be investigated.

I have in mind at this time tumor or cancer of the lung, in which the early symptoms may be only a slight cough or perhaps a wheezy sound resembling asthma to some extent. It may be easily overlooked because the early symptoms are so mild.

When we think of cancer, we usually think of cancer of the stomach, intestine, and brain, and the breasts and uterus in women, yet research workers report that cancer of the lung accounts for about 8 per cent of all cancer cases.

In "The American Review of Tuberculosis," Dr. R. Adams states that the three most valuable approaches to early diagnosis of lung cancer are: (1) education of the public to consult a physician for any cough lasting more than two weeks; (2) education of the profession to inquire for symptoms, to fluorscope (X-ray) every new patient, and to advise X-ray films when necessary; (3) stopping the practice of treating cough symptoms and pleurisy without trying to find the cause.

Unfortunately, the early symptoms of cancer of the lung are so "ordinary" that they are likely to be disregarded by both patient and physician — cough, pain in chest, coughing up mucous and slight amount of blood and wheezing.

Later symptoms are shortness of breath, collection of fluid in pleural sac (lower part of sac in which lungs lie), severe pain, hoarseness, loss of weight and weakness.

The X-ray gives the most valuable information regarding lung cancer, and the next most valuable is the use of the bronchoscope, "which, if handled by a seasoned expert will, in 90 per cent of cases, give the proper diagnosis."

Removal of the section of the lung affected by cancer is at present the only hope of cure.

GOODELL MAN FIRST TO SUBSCRIBE TO POLIO FUND

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, Treasurer for the Hancock County Committee of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, reports that Harold Savogue, of Goodell, was the first in Hancock County to send in a contribution to the Polio Fund.

Echard Zeidler, Klemme, was the second to give to the Fund and brought his contribution personally.

Mrs. Jorgenson reports that letters are arriving daily with contributions and most people are contributing more than they did last year. ROAD NOTES

By C. F. Merten, County Engineer

Hancock County roads are divided into three classes as follows: the primary roads, consisting of the numbered highways 18, 69, 111 and 60; the Farm to Market roads consisting of the more important secondary roads; and the local roads which have a very light traffic. All the expense of construction and maintenance on the primary road is paid from the Primary Road Fund and the work is done by the State Highway Commission. The Board of Supervisors has no jurisdiction over primary road work. The Farm to Market roads are constructed from the Farm to Market fund which consists of Federal Aid, gas tax and motor vehicle license fees and is under the joint supervision of the Highway Commission and the Board of Supervisors. Local county roads are constructed from county road construction funds which consists of the county share of the gas tax and the motor vehicle fees and is controlled by the Board of Supervisors. The maintenance of both the Farm to Market and local roads is under the jurisdiction of the Board of Supervisors and is paid for from the county road maintenance fund which comes from property tax levies. All roads not in the primary system are called secondary roads, including both farm to market and local roads.

There was no new construction work on the primary roads in Hancock County in 1949.

The following Farm to Market roads were constructed in 1949. The road from Klemme west to Highway No. 11 was graded and graveled at a cost of approximately $65,000.00. The river road through Ellington Township was graded and graveled at a cost of approximately $52,000.00. In both of the above the cost of right of way, culverts and engineering is included in the total. The length of Farm to Market roads constructed was 16.5 miles making the cost a little over $7,000.00 per mile.

Approximately 16 miles of local roads were graded and graveled in 1949 at a cost of $46,000.00.

The following amounts were spent for bridge and culvert work in secondary roads: four wooden bridges, $8,584.00; six concrete box culverts and extension built by the county crew, $12,980.00; 16 concrete pipe culverts with diameters from 18" to 90", $14,309.00; twenty corrugated pipe culverts with diameters from 18" to 36" $3,088.00.

Approximately $17,000.00 was spent for right of way and gravel pits.

The cost of maintaining the secondary roads in Hnacock in 1949 was $232,436.64.

Some of the principal maintenance items are as follows:

Machinery purchased,	$71,185.65
Labor	$71,868.00
Petroleum products -	$21,741.68
Machinery repairs	$23,482.68
Tiling and D.D. assessments	$7,183.86
New Buildings	$11,180.90
Misc. Materials and Supplies	$25,794.20

There seems to be some controversy as to the wages paid our machine operators during the past two years. The records show the following rates:

First half of 1948 -- 0.85 per hr.
Last half of 1958 -- 0.90 per hr.
All of 1949 ----- 0.92½ per hr.

Average increase 1949 over 1948, 0.05 per hour. Nearly all maintenance items were higher in 1949 than in 1948.

The cost of the County Engineers office for road work in 1949 was $10,109.10 which is approximately 3 percent of the total construction and maintenance costs. This does not include the cost of drainage engineers as each district pays its own engineering expense.

Plans are now being prepared for grading and graveling 27 miles of Farm to Market roads in various parts of the county. Information to location and cost of these roads will be available as soon as contracts are awarded for their construction.

Surprise Birthday Party Held For Mrs. Elsie Baack

Dorance Baack and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baack planned and carried out a birthday surprise party for Mrs. Elsie Baack at her home Thursday evening.

Mrs. Elsie Baack and son, Dorance had been invited to the C. E. Kluckhohn home for supper and when they returned home the crowd was waiting for them, a complete surprise.

The evening was spent playing 500 at three tables with Mrs. Martin Barz and Gene Albers winning high prizes, and Mrs. John Albers and John Albers winning low.

A nice lunch was served by the self-invited guests. Mrs. Howard Baack had baked and decorated a cake lighted with candles, for the event. Mrs. Baack received many nice gifts.

"THE VIGILANCE CREW" OPERATES FOR THE HEALTH OF IOWANS

Free Service Is Offered; Will Check Your Complaints

The basement of an unobtrusive building a few blocks from the State House in East Des Moines houses a vigilance crew that keeps a scientific eye on the health and sheckles of Iowans.

The crew members are test tube sentinels and microscope minions who sleuth in that subworld of impurities and harmful little things which might contaminate the things we eat or defraud purchasers. If some impurity is found, out it goes or the product - or somebody.

These benevolent bouncers work for the State Chemical Laboratories, a division of the Department of Agriculture, under the supervision of Mrs. Esther M. Johnston, acting state chemist.

For the taxpayer's money allocated to the State Chemical Laboratories, he is getting his money's worth in protection.

Take, for example, the antifreeze solution you purchased this winter to protect the cooling system of your engine. If it is permanent anti-freeze, it has a "glycol" base. If it is non-permanent, or volatile, it has an "alcohol" base. These are the only types of standard anti-freeze solutions, tested and tried by the State Chemical Laboraories, authorized to be sold in Iowa.

Claims to the contrary are false, according to Mrs. Johnston. She said a salt base will corrode the car radiator and a petroleum oil base (paraffin)) presents a fire hazard. Such products were on the market, as late as last winter, before the last General Assembly passed a bill outlawing the sale of injurious anti-freeze solutions in Iowa.

"You are wise to check any anti-freeze you want and see if it is licensed with this department before you buy it," warned Mrs. Johnston. "Although most of the name brands are excellent products and through our inspectors we try to test every new brand sold, there are slips and you might be a victim."

Generally, as with anti-freeze solution, if you suspect an impure food or fraudulent product on the market, contact the State Chemical Laboratories. An inspector and a microscope will look into your complaint.

Department of Agricutlure inspectors operate in many fields where the ultimate consumer is concerned. They delve into dairy and food products, canned and baked foods, agricultural seeds, commercial fertilizers, weights and measures, gasoline and kerosene, commercial feeds, and agricultural limestone.

On the dramatice side, these scientific hawkshaws assist in criminal tangles uncovered by Iowa Bureau of Investigation, State Fire Marshall's office and do laboratory work for the State Pharmacy Board.

The general procedure, Mrs. Johnston said, when you suspect a violation in the content of a market product is to write direct to the laboratories. Where a private citizen wishes an analysis for his own information, tests are run on a fee basis. The categories and costs are

Agricultural seeds, $1.00; gasoline and kerosene, no charge on kerosene "flash" tests, gasoline 2.00, although imperative that inspector pick up samples; commercial feeds, $1.00, samples suspected of poisoning animals tested free; agricultural limestone, $1.00 for individuals and companies alike; anti-freeze, no charge.

In categories not listed private tests are not run. Generally it is preferred that a trained inspector procure the samples or look into the complaint. If you suspect a merchant is leaving a heavy thumb on the scales, report him. If you find a bug in your bouillon soup, report it.

Mrs. Johnston said that due to Iowa's rich agriculture the watch over farm seeds and commercial fertilizer is an important one. Last season, she said, out of 3,500 official seed samples tested, approximately 400 "stop sale" orders were given. The sales injunctions were generally for mis-labeling, she said.

Iowa law requires that no primary noxious weed seed be present in agricultural seed sold in the state. Secondary noxious weed seed must be declared on the label.

She cited the stop order on a shipment of seed shipped into Iowa by a certified seed company which claimed 95 percent germination (the abaility to reproduce) for the seed. State chemists found only 25 percent to 38 percent germination.

Mrs. Johnston said fertilizer testing has expanded greatly and gave collaterial evidence that 310,000 tons of commercial fertilizer were sold last year in Iowa, while in 1941 sales amounted to about 40,000 tons.

Both a check and double check are taken on kerosene samples before sales are allowed. The law requires a "flash" point, or ignition, of at least 100 degrees Fahrenheit. Cases where fires exploded when kerosene was used as a combustible were probably due to a low kerosene flash, Mrs. Johnston said. This means the container was either mis-labeled or the kerosene contained some gasoline. Bad gasoline seldom is found in Iowa, she said.

Last year more than 3,000 official samples of commercial feeds were tested in the state laboratories, Mrs. Johnston said. Law requirements for feed are basic protein, fat and bulk components. Some 8,700 individual feds are registered for sale in Iowa.

She cited a case in this category where tankage or meat scraps prepared as high-grade commercial feed had the protein content lowered by the addition of limestone, an adulteration which was discovered.

Violators found by state chemists are customarily first warned by the department, then fined. Repeated violations or flagrant infractions bring severe penalties.

"We try to be fair with both the producer and the consumer," said Mrs. Johnston. "But in the final analysis, it is the consumer who can be hurt the most, so it is there our duty lies."

CAN BOOST YIELD SAVE WATER, SOIL

These Are Benefits To Iowa Farmers From Proper Soil Management

The farmer who fits soil, crop and livestock programs to his soil and his own needs will get many short-time as well as long-time benefits, in the opinion of G. M. Browning, manager of the outlaying experimental farms if Iowa State College.

The three big benefits listed by Browning are saving soil, saving of water and increased yields. Other benefits include improving soil structure and making organic matter available, saving of power and machinery, reducing flood damage, of production, and benefits to the community.

Need Grass, Legumes

A high acreage of erosive interilled crops without enough soilbuilding grasses and legumes contributes to serious sheet and gully erosion, says Browning. Mechanical practices such as contouring, strip cropping and terracing can aid in preventing erosion such as that which has occured during the 60 to 70 years we have farmed Iowa soil.

The same practices that save soil also save water, Browning points out. Studies show that a good rotation supplemented with mechanical practices can make an additional 2 to 6 inches of water available to crpos.

Yield increases resulting from use of some soil mangement practices are evident the first year. Other practices require several years to show maximum benefit, says Browning.

Crops Yields Increase

In a 5-year study of about 300 fields in cooperation with farmers throughout Iowa, contouring increased the average corn yield 7 bushels per acre. Oat yields were increased 5 bushels per acre and soybean yields 3 bushels.

Browning says that production increases of 10 to 25 percent are common where complete soil, crop and livestock management programs have been adopted.

Another way in which Browning says soil conservation pays is that machinery operation costs are lower. Contour farming takes about 10 percent less power than farming up and down hill. Also, machinery lasts longer when operated over the fields which have no gullies.

SOLVE THE "STAY-HOME" PROBLEM---

PLAN A CHILD'S PLAY GROUP

Most youngsters are quite enthusiastic about fingerpainting at supervised play groups. The fingerpaint is similar to household starch and is used on shelf paper. Aprons on the children and oilcloth on the tables keep the cleaning-up to a minimum.

It's often pretty hard for the mothers of small children to get to the local meetings and study groups they'd like to.

But watch the attendance grow if your organization plans a supervised play group so that children can go right along to the meetings with their mothers, says Mrs. Alma Jones, family life specialist at Iowa State College.

She points out that many mothers can't attend meetings because there's no one to leave their youngsters with. And if the mothers do bring their children soon become restless, tired or bored.

Here are some of Mrs. Jones' suggestion for a play group.

A Play Room

First of all you'll need a meeting place that has a suitable room for children to play in. Any room that is well ventilated, comfortable and safe will be satisfactory. It would be near the room where the mothers are meeting so that they can glance in at the children once in a while to assure the youngsters they have not gone away.

You'll need to select one of several women out of the group each time to be supervisors, depending on the number of children and the length of time that they will play together. Rotate the supervising job so that no one woman has to miss all of one or of a series of meetings. You may even be lucky enough to have someone in your community who does not belong to your group but who would be interested in taking charge of the play group.

In either case, you'll want to select women who really enjoy being with and working with children.

Equipment for your play group can be collected from persons in your community. Some groups make many play materials from boxes, cans, scraps of lumber, spools and other items the women have in their homes. A new bulletin which will be very helpful in making toys is being planned for distribution from Iowa State College.

Toys To Make

Mrs. Jones says, for example, members of the group can make a peg board from clothes pins, unit blocks from lumber, nests of painted cans and ring tosses from jar rings and bean bags. Puzzles can be made by pasting pictures on wood and cutting the wood into several large pieces. Stuffed animals, clay, magazines, water colors, paste and crayons are suggestions.

For all-day or even half-day sessions, Mrs. Jones advises your group to plan outdoor play for the children sometime during the morning or afternoon. It gives the youngsters a chance to work off a little of that excess steam they always seem to have. Outdoor play materials might include wagons, sleds, skipping ropes, balls, small shovels, bricks, wooden boxes and kegs that are free of splinters.

Devote some time during the play periods for stories, musical games, singing and finger games, Mrs. Jones suggests. Water colors, finger paints and clay keep most children busy for many minutes. A mid morning snack such as fruit juice and crackers or a raw apple is also a good idea and one that children love.

A well-child check-up by the mothers before each meeting will safeguard every youngster from catching sniffles and diseases.

"HUSTLERS" MEET

The regular meeting of the Avery-Twin Lake Hustlers was held January 9th, at the home of Larry Pals. The boys fathers were also present, as it was "Dad's night." A demonstration on nail pulling was given by Larry and Kennth Langlitz. Sam Barber, our guest speaker, spoke on the conservation of our soil. The next meeting will be held February 13th at the home of Marvin Swyster.

School News

FIRST GRADE NEWS

We are proud to report that two days this week we have had perfect attendence for the first time since before Christmas.

In spite of the cold weather we have been having, one day was nice enough for us to play out of doors for a short period. We all enjoyed sliding on the ice very much.

For our story period we are now reading "Raggedy Ann's Lucky Pennies."

—Miss Tulp

THIRD AND FOURTH GRADE NEWS

We have elected our new officers for this week:
Librarian ------- Douglas Roul
Erasers ------ Roger Olson and Dorothy Roul
Water Helpers ----- Karen Clabough and Gary Swyster.

Sandra Medin and Roger Olson were the only pupils in the room to earn a hundred per cent in their semester spelling test.

FIFTH AND SIXTH GRADE NEWS

The sixth grade made a medical castle for the library table. They have studied in history the nobles and knights and their large castles. They have a moat that runs around the castle and a drawbridge to enter the grounds.

Both fifth and sixth grade had soap carving Friday. Some of them turned out quite well but some got in too big a hurry and broke legs etc. off.

The sixth grade studied Japan in Geography. They made Japanese scenes for display purposes.

JUNIOR HI NEWS

In English the eighth graders are trying to learn the difference between reflexive pronouns, and demonstrative pronouns. We are finding it very difficult to keep them apart.

The seventh graders are trying to learn how to use per cents that are lower than one per cent.

Monday January 16 the first and second Junior Hi team went to Goodell to play the Avery Twin Lake Hustlers. The Junior Hi first team defeated them with a score of 49-34 and the second team defeated them with a score of 26-16.

The motto for this week is: "Don't try to get ahead by patting yourself on the back."

COLOSTRUM FURNISHES VITAMIN A FOR CALVES

Winter and spring months are the most likely time for the rations fed calves to have too little vitamin A, says Ray Murley, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

That's why he says it's important for calves to get the colostrum—first milk of the mother's lactation period—during the first week after birth.

Colostrum will help calves get a good start in life. It aids digestion and is a rich source of vitamin A. And it contains substances which help the newborn calf develop resistance to disease.

If the calf's mother produces more colostrum than the calf can consume, Murley suggests that you feed it to some older calves. Not only will this prevent waste of the colostrum, it can be fed safely if diluted with warm water in the proportion of 2 parts of water to 1 part of colostrum.

Murley says that you should give calves all the well-cured, early-cut mixed legume-grass hay that they want. Green, leafy roughages contain large amounts of carotene, a natural source of vitamin A.

The calves will usually start eating hay at about 2 weeks of age. And they'll eat an increasing amount of the roughage if it's kept before them all the time. Fresh hay should be supplied frequently according to Murley.

Silage, in limited amounts, may be fed to calves after they are 4 months old. But it's too bulky for younger calves.

Don't feed more than 2 pounds of silage per day to a 4-month-old calf. Then gradually increase the amount as the calf gets older. A6-month-old calf should receive no more than 8 pounds of silage per day.

Bridge Party Held

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson entertained a number of ladies at four tables of bridge Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. George Lawhorn won high score, Mrs. Fred J. Arnold, second high, Mrs. Kenneth Medin, low and Mrs. John Etchen, travel.

A nice lunch was served after the games.

JOLLY WORKERS CLUB MET AT AUSBORN HOME

The Jolly Workers Club met at the home of Mrs. Nellie Ausborn on Wednesday, January 11. Sixteen members answered roll call by telling something they received for Christmas. Mrs. Maude Bachman, our president, passed out our new program books for the year. All members present paid their dues. It was decided that each one bring a valentine and a quarter gift for their Sunshine Friend. And also each one is requested to bring some of their old Christmas or any other cards to the next meeting which will be sent to the home for the feeble minded at Woodward.

After the business meeting Mrs. Maude Bachman had charge of the entertainment.

A nice lunch was served by the host Mrs. Nellie Ausborn and co-hostess Mrs. Fred Lass.

THIS SEEMS TO BE the time of year when most folks would like to take a little time out to plan a year's program. Good idea, if you can do it. So far, government agencies plan the best. The weather, weeds, bugs and sickness does not affect tax revenue too much.

Good, Old Iowa Winter

When the ducks went south last fall, I don't mind telling you, I rather wished I was going with them.

But in another way, those tropical lands sometimes make a fellow appreciate Iowa even more. Without cold weather how could we enjoy the first days of spring? Without winter's coming, would we appreciate Iowa's fine autumns so much?

It's the VARIETY that makes Iowa such a grand state to live in. We Iowans enjoy that same breadth and variety in all our tastes and ideas. Of a winter evening, when neighbors come to our house, some like a cup of tea, some coffee, some a temperate glass of beer or ale. Some talk one kind of politics, some another. But we all respect each one's right to his own choice and preferences.

That's what makes good neighbors, a good community—recognizing that nature isn't always the same, and people's tastes aren't always the same . . . and it would be mighty monotonous if they were.

Wrastling Is an Honest Sport, But Love is a Different Story

By BILLY ROSE

The other night at Lindy's, I was introduced to a Popocatepetl of a man named Ezaklios Pappanokiyulikos, the Greek wrestler—better known to the toe-hold set as the Hooded Cobra.

"You inressid in wrastling?" the mash-and-maul artist asked pleasantly.

"Not particularly," I said. "I hear tell the business is full of crooks."

"Is wrong," said the Cobra. "In United Schnapes, wrastling is mos' honest sport what can be. Why? Because no wan bet. Is lak betting on feenish of musical comedy show."

"What makes you think people don't bet on musical comedy shows?" I said. "But never mind, go on."

"Only place wrastling is crooked sometime in Sout' America," the Cobra continued. "Frinstance, Ecuador, where tree months ago I ween plenny money by losing."

Billy Rose

"I am amaze," I said.

"Is funny story," said Ezaklios. "Day before I wrastle Aloicio Macombo, champ of Quito, Senor Ramon, matchmaker, walk een my hotel room. Ramon is beeg shot in Ecuador.

"'Poot on show twanny, twanny-fife minoot,' he says. 'Then Aloicio weel take fall for you. Mak it bear-hug an' body-press.'

"I cannot believe ears. I say: 'You want me to beat champ?'

"He say: 'That is only way you gat return match. Mak sure no mistake. I bet plenty for you to win.'

"NIGHT OF MATCH, when I walk down aisle, crowd have bottles, is boo, want kill me. When Aloicio comes in, they chuck flowers an' cheer.

"Everybody is bet on champ—poor, rich, Spaneesh, Indians — an' theese mak me sad. I am honest man an' do not like cheatin' poor, ignorant peoples. So I decide to be fair and lose—I even bet all I got on Aloicio.

"Well, at first is very good match. For twanny minoot we poosh, mak noises an' stick fingers in eyes. An' then Aloicio says, 'Is too hot to wrastle more. I take fall soon.'

"I am smart an' say nothing, an' minute later I fall on back with Aloicio on top. But Aloicio is smart, too. 'Oh, no,' he says, an' begins to fight dirty. An' before raferee can count tree, he twist my arm round his head so I got headlock. Then he geeve jerk, mak like he trip over my leg, an' fall on hees head. Only he fall harder than he think an' gats very deezy.

"Queeck, I jump on heem, making beeg tangle weeth arms and legs— no one can tell who got who. Then I feenish up on my back. Raferee counts tree, announces Aloicio ween, an' crowd go crazy."

WASN'T SENOR Ramon sore?" I asked.

"I no wait for Ramon," explained the Cobra. "I slip out of the arena, then out of town, then out of Ecuador . . . ."

Just then, a good-looking woman pushed her way through Mr. Lindy's revolving door, spotted the wrestler at my table, and began jabberwockying away at him in Spanish.

"Wait for me in car, babies," Ezaklios said, affectionately. "I am weeth you in minoot."

"Who's the lady?" I asked, when we were alone again.

"Wife of Senor Ramon," said the Cobra. "When she gat final divorce, she become Meesus Pappanokiyulikos."

"I thought you said wrestling was an honest sport," I said.

"Wrastling, yes," said Ezaklios. "Love, my frien', of course, is horse of different collar."

I PRAYED TODAY

IN my quiet room I talked with my Friend today;
I opened my heart to Him with its weight of care.
I spoke of the burdens I carried along the way;
I sought His help as I knelt at His feet in prayer.
I told Him my griefs, forgetting He knew them all;
I prayed for my own, forgetting that He could see
Within their hearts each need, though great or small,
Each unsolved problem and dark perplexity

In my quiet room I talked with the Friend I love,
As He engineered His planets, His stars, His suns;
My little world was what I was dreaming of,
My little day, and my own near precious ones.
And He with His hands on the universe, His eyes
Upon endless space and the sweep of eternity,
Bent above me, listening to my cries,
And, forgetting my faults and failures, answered me.

Good Breakfasts Put Pep into Work

Teen-Agers' Breakfast

IN THE HUSTLE and bustle of school work and social activities, teen-agers are apt to short-change themselves on the food they eat. Their stomachs aren't going empty; but, considering between-meal snacks of candy bars and soft drinks, the kind of food they eat is apt to be off the track as far as good nutrition is concerned.

At this age, the phrase "You are what you eat" is all-important, for personality development, the capacity for work and play, as well as health, are dependent in considerable measure on good nutrition. Also, this is the time when boys and girls are forming food habits that will follow them through life. Let's consider the first meal of the day—breakfast.

By studying teen-age habits in this country, we have turned up the interesting fact that two-thirds of our teen-agers feel that everyone should have a good solid breakfast. But, in this same survey, it was discovered that thirty per cent of the boys and girls in this age group were skimping on breakfast. What causes the gap?

Consider the wide range of foods offered in this basic breakfast of fruit, cereal, milk, bread and butter. Canned, dried, fresh or frozen fruits may be used at the breakfast meal.

Almost two dozen varieties of cooked and ready-to-eat cereals are available. The beverage might be cocoa, milk, or hot chocolate; the bread could be in the form of sweet rolls, hot muffins, biscuits, waffles, or pancakes.

FOR APPETITE APPEAL, a hot bread is a quick and easy treat for breakfast. This recipe for upside down oat muffins is doubly good, too, for it supplies extra nourishment in the rolled oats and the apricots. You might vary the fruit by substituting cooked peach slices, pitted prunes or apple slices for the apricots.

Upside Down Oat Muffins
(Makes 1 dozen)

- 1 cup rolled oats
- 1 cup milk
- 2 tablespoons fat
- ¼ cup sugar
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 4 tablespoons honey
- 12 drained cooked apricot halves

Combine rolled oats and milk; let stand five minutes. Cream together fat and sugar. Add egg and beat. Add oat mixture. Sift together flour, salt, and baking powder; add to first mixture. Stir only until mixed. In each well-greased muffin pan place one teaspoon honey and an apricot half with cut side up. Fill ⅔ full and bake in moderate oven (350-375°) 25 to 30 minutes. Turn out fruit side up. Serve hot.

Molasses Bran Muffins
(Makes 1 dozen)

- 2 cups whole bran
- ½ cup molasses
- 1½ cups milk
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon soda

Soften whole bran in molasses and milk (5 to 15 minutes) Add egg to first mixture. Sift together flour, salt, and soda. Combine with bran mixture. Fill greased muffin pans ⅔ full and bake in moderately hot oven (400°) about 20 minutes.

Corn Flake Honey Rolls
(Makes 1 dozen)

- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup fat
- ⅔ cup milk
- 3 tablespoons melted butter
- 3 cups corn flakes
- ⅔ cup seedless raisins
- ½ cup honey

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in fat until a coarse even texture is obtained. Add milk, stirring enough to make a soft dough. Turn onto lightly floured board and knead about 30 seconds. Roll dough to ¼ inch thickness. Brush with melted butter. Combine slightly crushed corn flakes, raisins and honey; spread over biscuit dough, roll as for a jelly roll and cut into one-inch slices. Place slices on greased baking sheet. Bake in moderately hot oven (400°) about 15 to 20 minutes.

Oatmeal Fruit Bread
(Makes 1 large or 2 small loaves)

- ¼ cup fat
- ½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 egg, well-beaten
- ½ cup chopped Brazil nuts, pecans or walnuts
- ½ cup cooked diced prunes
- ½ cup cooked diced apricots
- 1 tablespoon grated orange rind
- 1 cup rolled oats
- 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon soda
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1¼ cups buttermilk or sour milk

Cream fat; add sugar gradually. Add egg to creamed mixture. Stir in nuts, prunes, apricots, orange rind and rolled oats. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Add dry ingredients alternately with buttermilk to creamed mixture. (To make sweet milk sour, add 1 tablespoon vinegar to 1¼ cups sweet milk.) Turn into greased loaf pan, 9x5x3 inches and bake in moderate oven (350°-375°) about 1 hour. Cool on rack. If desired, decorate the top of the loaves before baking with whole pitted prunes, apricots and nuts.

Add grated orange rind to applesauce; serve on hot or ready-to-eat breakfast cereal.

On weekends and special occasions, serve breakfast buffet style; provide a tray for each member of the family, and give them a choice of fresh fruits and ready-to-eat cereals with the usual milk, bread and butter.

Mix together two or three varieties of ready-to-eat cereals in a large wooden salad bowl, provide a serving fork and spoon, and let the family help themselves.

Back in the days of silent films Jane Novak was a star; in many a William S. Hart movie she was the gal who gazed into the sunset at the end, with Bill and his horse. The Fiction Corner

NO JOB WANTED

By Richard H. Wilkinson

IT WAS SNOWING when Guy started over the pass. The filling station attendant at Jackson had warned him against it, but Guy had only smiled crookedly. It was early May and snow storms of any consequence didn't happen in May, not even in the high country.

3-Minute Fiction

Besides, the way he felt, it wouldn't make much difference if anything did happen to him. Not even if he perished in the drifts or froze to death. Death would solve all his problems. It would be a relief from worry and hopelessness and bleak despair.

Foolish though for a young man 26 years old. But young men can sometimes become pretty wild and desperate in their thoughts. Guy remembered Mr. Moore's cynical smile. "Sorry, son, we haven't a place for you. Full up."

"But not good reporters. I've had experience, Mr. Moore. I'm a good writer. I always scrape up a new angle to a story that makes interesting reading. Besides—" There was desperation in Guy's tone, because Mr. Moore had begun shuffling papers on his desk. "When I wrote inquiring about a job you said you'd be glad to talk to me."

He had driven all the way up from Denver—1,000 miles—because Mr. Moore had said he'd talk to him. It had taken nearly his last dollar to buy enough gas to make the trip. Now he had nothing left but the 5-year-old car. Just about enough to get him back home, from which he'd started out six months ago, bound and determined to land a job on a newspaper.

Toward noon Guy understood why the filling station man had warned him. The snow formed an impenetrable wall. The wind was rising and it was colder. Now he was stuck.

Hours passed. Twice Guy thought he heard someone call. The third time he roused up. Through the slanting curtain of snow he saw a figure floundering toward him. He got out. The man was nearly exhausted; his face frost bitten.

Guy got him inside the car and turned on the heater full, speeding up the motor. Presently the man looked at him wild-eyed. "My wife! She's sick. We're stuck—up the road."

Guy thought quickly. There was the shack. Apparently the man had passed it in the storm. It must be close by. At any rate, it was their only chance.

AFTERWARD, Guy wondered how he'd found the shack, or what it was that kept him going when the desire to lie down and sleep and forget everything was so strong. It was all like a dream—the way he'd stumbled against the shack itself, found the door and fell inside. He remembered that the wind and cold were shut out. Then he remembered the sick woman.

The place he'd found was a road camp. There was a stove and wood and a few cans of food on the shelf. He got a fire going and placed water on to boil. Then he lunged out into the storm again, fought his way down the road and found the stranger's car. He half carried, half dragged the woman up to the shack, and left her there near the stove while he went for the man.

The storm lasted two days. It took another day for a rescue party to get through. They took the three of them down to Jackson and to a hospital. Guy was put into a room by himself and fed. Then he went to sleep.

When he awoke Mr. Moore was standing by his bed. "Feeling better, son? Good. How about a story on your experiences? That man you saved was Senator Ostrand.

"The lady wasn't his wife at all. See what I mean? You want a job and we want a story, because Ostrand is on the opposition ticket. Here's your chance, boy."

Guy closed his eyes. Well, why not? he thought. After all, a man has to live, has to look out for himself. Why not? Why not? The thought kept pounding against his brain. Then he opened his eyes.

"Sorry," he said. "Sorry, that isn't the kind of job I'm after."

SCRIPTURE: Acts 8:4—11:18.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Romans 3:21-30.

Unto All Men

Lesson for January 29, 1950

"MARK TIME, Christian Soldiers," is not a Christian hymn. The word is "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" The command was given by no less a person than Jesus himself: "Go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them . . . teaching them . . ." (Matt. 28:19, 20) Do you know some one in the church who says he doesn't believe in missions? Such a man does not take Christ seriously. If you do believe in Christ then his commands are for you to obey, not to ignore.

Dr. Foreman

UP TO NOW, the church has been playing around with Jesus' command. Very few denominations are actually putting any large amount of money or manpower into obeying Christ's command to go into all the world.

One fairly typical American denomination contributed last year to all benevolences, that is to all causes not in their own local congregations, the sum of $9,137,065. That sounds like a lot; but divided by the total number of members it boils down to $14.03 per member for the year, or less than five cents a day.

And of course not all that big sum of five cents went to missions of any sort. Yet that denomination gives more per capita to missions than most others do. When a man who gives less than five cents a day to carry the good news of Christ into the wide world sings "Onward, Christian Soldiers!" or prays "Thy Kingdom come!" how much does he mean it? Not a nickel's worth!

Or take the question of manpower. This same denomination sends out as missionaries, every year, as many men and women as are sent by some denominations three times its size. And yet, even so, the total number of ordained ministers in that denomination who are foreign missionaries is only 4 per cent of their total number of ministers.

"Go into all the world," said the Master. "Four per cent of us will," we reply, "the rest of us will stay at home."

When Men Obey

AS A MATTER OF FACT, even the earliest church was slow to pay real attention to Christ's command, Forward! Men are strange creatures. And one of the strange things about us is that we often have to be scared into doing our duty.

It took the persecution set off by the death of Stephen to move the Christians in Jerusalem out along the roads south, north, east, anywhere to get away from the city of death. Everywhere they went, they told the story of Jesus.

But at first it was all rather breathless and informal. "Why are you here?" one of these DP's would be asked, as he was passing through Samaria or Antioch or Alexandria, perhaps in the bread-line, perhaps looking for a place to work and settle down. "I'm a refugee from Jerusalem," he would say. "But why?" "Well, I'm a Christian." "What's that?"

So the story would be told all over again, the good news about God's grace in Christ. So the church spread. Today, though an enormous part of the world's population is still unwon, there are Christians in so many lands that the Bible—all or parts of it—has had to be translated into more than one thousand different languages and dialects.

Unto All Men

ONE OF THE MOST interesting and surprising little books of recent years is called "They Found the Church There," by H. P. Van Dusen. It is the dramatic story of how the American GI, to his great astonishment, found Christians in the most unexpected places.

It is a tremendous mistake to think that the Christian religion is only for English-speaking peoples, or for Europeans, or for white people. It began among people whom most readers of this column would set down as "foreigners."

Christ can be as much at home in an igloo or a wigwam as he is in an American farmhouse or in an efficiency apartment on the city boulevard. He comes to all men, and as Peter found out, the Lord is no respecter of persons.

Dead Aim

An American visitor to England had just returned to his native United States with a slight British accent and numerous stories of his travels. He was relating some of his experiences to a group of friends when one of them asked if he had done any shooting.

"Oh, yes," he replied, "I did quite a bit of shooting I was most successful, though, when I shot at Lord Baddleton's county seat."

"Didja hit it?" asked another eagerly.

Force of Habit

After finding a vacant seat in the train the little man with the meek demeanor slumped into it and soon fell asleep. He evidently hadn't noticed the parrot perched on the shoulder of the man next to him but the latter eyed the newcomer with mixed emotions. After considerable deliberation and frequent shiftings of weight from foot to foot the parrot decided on attack. Balancing himself precariously on his owner's shoulder he leaned over and nipped the little man's ear. It was just enough to wake him up.

"Yes, ,dear," he said softly "I'm coming."

CHEAP CROP SEED MAY NOT BE GOOD BARGAIN

Cheap crop seed man eventually cost a farmer more than higher priced seed, according to E. P. Sylwester, head of the seed testing laboratory at Iowa State College.

Seed is cheap for a reason, he says. Sylwester doesn't think there is such a thing as good cheap seed. It has been his observation over the years that most seed sold at ridiculously low prices contains over 3 percent weed seed, is poor in germination, may contain noxious weeds, or may not be adapted or true to variety name.

The best rule-of-thumb a farmer can keep in mind when buying seed, according to Sylwester, is to buy good seed---seed free from all weed seed, high in germination, and adapted to the area in which it will be grown. He thinks it is the best insurance available for a good crop.

RYP MEMBERS INVITED TO SQUARE DANCE AT THE SURF BALLROOM

"Honor your partner, honor your corner, swing your partner" is the call that will open the KGLO Square Dance for Hancock County Rural Young People February 16th at the Surf Ballroom.

Hancock County's 50 RYP members have been invited to attend. They will soon be extended an official written invitation by Chet Randolph, KGLO Farm Service Director, to join 400 other RYP members from 12 counties in Northern Iowa and Southern Minnesota.

Hancock County president Glen Sloan will be sent 50 invitations with instructions to give one to each member. If more invitations are desired for new members, they will be sent as soon as a request is sent to KGLO. An RYP member that does not receive an invitation through Sloan is urged to write to KGLO and he will be mailed one promptly.

Since the purpose of the RYP is to give farm fellows and gals a chance to meet others of their own age and background, KGLO is sponsoring the square dance at the Surf so those of Hancock County may meet members from 11 other counties.

Hancock County's RYP group has been square dancing frequently at their regular meetings. But for those who have not square danced before, Randolph has reserved the first half hour, from 9:00-9:30, for instruction.

Since many are familiar with most of the square dance calls, square dancing after 9:30 will be interrupted only by a schottische, varsuvienna, polka, waltz and a few ballroom numbers.

Members from the following county groups have indicated they'll be at the Surf Februray 16th: Cerro Gordo, Worth, Mitchell, Floyd, Franklin, Winnebago, Hancock, Kossuth, Humboldt, Howard and, Mower and Freeborn counties in Minnesota.

Music will be furnished by KGLO's Ralph Geer and his five-piece band. An old fiddler will start the square dance tunes and a sweet saxophone will be featured for the ballroom numbers, all geared to Geer's piano.

Phil and Louis Palermo of Minneapolis, Minnesota, American-born Italian evangelists who were used to start Youth for Christ in Italy in two lengthy tours of that county, will present a musical program, and bring a brief message at the Evangelical United Brethren Church on Thursday, February 2nd, at Goodell, Iowa, at 7:30 p. m.

The two young singing evangelists who are official field representatives of the Youth for Christ movement which now exists in 59 counties of the world, traveled through Italy and Sicily in a jeep station wagon donated for their use by Minneapolis Youth of Christ. Born in Melrose, Illinois, of Catholic parents who emigrated to the United States from Italy, Phil and Louie were converted as young men. They have used their musical ability in evangelistic work for the last 10 years, speaking and singing in all parts of the United States and Canada.

The first trip to Italy was made in the fall of 1947. Pioneer work was done all through the country by stopping their station wagon in a public square and holding services in the open air. Returning in the summer of 1948, they brought Italian delegates with then to the World Congress on Evangelism at Beatenberg, Switzerland. Two intensive months of meetings followed that Congress, with rallies in Rome and Naples alone resulting in more than 600 conversions. The Palermos have travelled throughout the States and Canada in recent months in the interest of Italy, and are planning to return to that country again in 1950.

In the last five years, Youth for Christ has fanned out to all 48 states and 59 counties of the world. Louis is considered one of the world's foremost accordianists, and will be playing a $800.00 instrument. He is also an expert on the trombone. Phil is a preacher, and also a good musician. A cordial invitation is extended to all, and especially the youth. There will be no admittance charge, but a freewill offering for missions will be taken.

BY BOB HULLIHAN

It was going to be the biggest investment he had ever made, but the family deserved a better car. They sat at the kitchen table all evening figuring how the monthly payments could be met. Then he called the dealer and told him he would buy the car.

The next day he signed the finance papers. "This include insurance?" he asked. "You're covered," he was told. The company carries your policy as part of the payments." He thought no more about it.

Two months later he had a bad accident. He helped carry the other driver to an ambulance. When he filed his accident report it was some comfort to write that he had insurance in effect. Then he received a letter from this department.

The injury and damage to the other driver and car had been evaluated at $3,000. He would have to satisfy the safety responsibility law. Among 7 ways of complying with that law he could deposit with the State $3,000 or show proof of liability insurance in effect at the time of the accident.

But didn't he have insurance? He read his policy for the first time. He had collision but no liability coverage. His car was protected; he was not.

Because he could not meet the law, his license was suspended and the plates taken from his car. Because his insurance did not include the protection he thought it did, he faces a heavy damage suit without aid and has had to retain a lawyer to defend him.

Because he then could not continue the monthly payments, the car he could not drive has reverted to the company.

This is not a single, isolated case. Members of the safety responsibility division are aroused they have similar cases "almost every day." This department is not concerned with where insurance is purchased. But it is concerned that drivers receive the kind of insurance they think they are buying—the kind that will protect them when other persons or property are injured or damaged in accident.

SEVERAL BENEFITS FROM TREATING NOW FOR GRUBS IN DAIRY COWS

Grub infestations of dairy cattle have increased with the switch to modern chemicals for controlling stable flies. The result is that more attention needs to be given to treating these grubby cows.

That's the information Paul Henderson, county extension director, received this week from Harold Gunder, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

Before modern fly control was introduced cows were sprayed daily. Such spraying have good control of heal flies — the flies that cause grubs. Modern stable fly chemicals give no protection against heal flies.

The answer, then is to treat for grubs. Treat ment is necessary because it is estimated that the activities of young grubs in migrating through tissues cause production losses of about ten percent.

Henderson points out that dairyman is in an ideal position for grub control. Cows in stanchions are easy to examine and treat.

Rotenone dust is the recommended treatment. The 1.67 percent should be used. Apply every 10 days until the grubs are killed. Dry cows and bulls also should be treated.

Killing grubs now can be very beneficial in reducing future infestations. It will mean reducing heal fly population on your own farm. This is important as the heal fly ordinarily does not range further than one-half mile from where it is hatched.

POLIO FUND GROWS AS MOST PEOPLE SEND $5.00 CONTRIBUTION

Mrs. R. A. Jorgenson, secretary for the Hancock County Polio Fund reports that letters are coming in with every mail with contributions to the Polio Fund and that most people this year are sending checks and currency for $5 and more.

The largest conrtibutions so far received were two $25.00 checks in Monday's mail. One from the Swanson Hatchery, of Klemme, and the other from Clara H. Gatena, Kanawha.

One check arrived form far away Brownsville, Texas, from Mr. Henry Wade, who wanted to help the local cause along.

GET ODRER IN NOW FOR BABY CHICKS YOU NEED

Don't delay ordering your baby chicks for this spring any longer, advises A. W. Nordskog, Iowa State College poultry husbandman.

Reliable hatcheries may be sold out later in the spring, says Nordskog. So he advises ordering now to make sure you get the quality and breed you want.

Nordskog suggests a few points to keep in mind when you order spring chicks. First he thinks one should buy from a hatchery which has established a good reputation for itself. This is simply because ultimate success in brooding and rearing depends largely upon the quality of the chicks.

Nordskog points out that reliable hatcheries are careful to see that chicks come from a pullorum-free flock. Pullorum is one of the poultry diseases definitely known to be transmitted from the hen to the chick through the egg. It can be controlled by blood-testing the birds in the breeding flock.

Some farmers prefer to buy started chicks rather than day-old chicks. Nordskog thinks, though that with the proper management best results are obtained by buying day-old chicks.

Started chicks cost more money to begin with. And although the poultryman may avoid losses which occur during the first 2 or 3 weeks, there's greater danger of disease among started chicks. There's more chance of Newcastle disease with started chicks.

The net cost of raising a pullet from straight-run chicks is less per bird than from sexed pullet chicks, studies have shown. This is especially true with the heavy breeds but also applies to Leghorns, Nordskog says.

NEW RED CLOVER SEED AVAILABLE TO GROWERS

A supply of Emerson red clover seed is available from the Committee for Agricultural Development, Ames, Iowa. This is a well adapted Iowa strain superior in winter-hardiness, forage yields and seed production.

Emerson is not only a superior variety in itself but also one of the superior Corn Belt varieties used in making Midland clover, a composite variety developed from the leading strains in Ohio, Indiana, Illnois and Iowa.

Growers interested in obtaining a supply of this seed should write immediately to the Committee for Agricultural Development, Ames, Iowa. The seed will be furnished under agreement to produce the seed crop under conditions meeting the requirements for certification. It is necessary to certify the seed crop since the supply of commercial Emerson red clover has not filled the demands of Iowa farmers.

The field where you plan to plant this clover seed must be free of primary noxious weeds and not have been planted to red clover for at least 2 years. In this way, a pure, weed-free seed crop may be obtained.

At the present, up to 80 lbs. of seed may be obtained by each grower. The price is $1 per pound f.o.b. Ames.

W. EARL HALL NAMED HEAD OF EASTER SEAL DRIVE

Des Moines, Iowa—W. Earl Hall, editor of the Mason City Globe Gazette, has been named to head the Annual Easter Seal drive for the third consecutive year. The dates for this year's sale were announced by Hall as March 9 through Easter Sunday, April 9th.

During this time, according to Hall, over 650,000 letters containing seals will be mailed to Iowans. The returns from these seals will be used to continue and expand the work of the Iowa Society for Crippled Children and Adults, the Easter Seal agency.

In 1949, Easter Seales provided many and varied services to Iowa's handicapped persons. Included were a summer speech correction clinic, home employment projects, camping and recreation for crippled children, sheltered employment, parent counseling and the Cerebral Palsy Center in Des Moines which serves the cerebral palsied throughout Iowa.

Mr. Hall said, "The actual number of severely handicapped persons who will receive this help during 1950 depends entirely on the amount of money raised during the Easter Seal Drive. The need for this work is emphasized by the fact that 17 out of every thousand persons in Iowa are permanently physically handicapped. Since this is a normal, ever-present part of society, it is necessary to help these persons fulfill their capabilities and take their place in the world."

The Iowa Society for Crippled Children and Adults conducts its campaigns in cooperation with the National Society and over 92 percent of the funds raised remain in Iowa and are administered by state and county society officers.

OPEN CAR DOOR NOT AS GOOD AS HAND SIGNAL

It takes less energy for winter motorists to roll down the window and give the proper hand signal than it does to open the door and leave other drivers wondering what the next maneuver will be.

That's the observation of Norval Wardle, safety specialist at Iowa State College. He says motorists who open their pick-up or car door to signal are actually letting in a lot more cold air inside their vehicles, too.

Wardle points to the awkard position the driver gets into when opening and closing the car door. Not only is he off balance and unable to act as quickly as he should, but the door-shutting job takes about all the energy most drivers can muster at one time.

Wardle thinks that most drivers who stop to think about opening the door to signal will realize that this is considerably more inconvenient than rolling down the window and giving a hand signal that other drivers understand.

Busy Freezer Lockers Prove Most Efficient

The way to get most efficiency from your freezer locker is to keep it busy.

That's the advice of foods specialists, Iowa State College, who belive it's no economy to keep fruits or vegetables, meats, or prepared foods in the locker too long. Unit storage costs less and food quality is better if packages go in and come out in a steady stream.

Careful inventory of everything that goes in and comes out is a key to good menu planning as well as to locker efficiency. It's especially important to watch the freezing time for pork you're putting in the locker these days.

WERE MARRIED AT FARM HOME IN LIBERTY TWP.

Farmed Same Land Continuously For Thirty-Six Years

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gast, retired farm couple of Klemme, observed their fourtieth wedding anniversary on Thursday, January 26th with open house in the afternoon when all of their children and families and other relatives and friends were present and a nice lunch was enjoyed.

Hermon Gast and Meta Bredlow were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bredlow in Liberty township on January 26, 1910, by the Rev. George Wessel, Methodist pastor.

They immediately began housekeeping on Mr. Gast's parents' farm, which they later required and where they farmed continuously for 36 years and where they raised their family of five children.

Mr. and Mrs. Gast retired from the farm 4 years ago when they purchased a home in Klemme and moved to town. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gast have been active in church work all of their lives and helped greatly to build up the Liberty church where they were regular attendants while on the farm. Mr. Gast is at present custodian in the Klemme Methodist church.

Those present at the Gast home Thursday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Borchers, Mrs. Aug. Kropp, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bredlow, and Mr. and Mrs. W. C. A. Gast of Garner; Mrs. Clara Stille, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Beier and Rev. and Mrs. Egeland of Klemme.

A nice lunch was served by their daughters, Mrs. Kenneth Zwald, Mrs. Ronald Gibbs and Mrs. James Fredin.

In the evening their children and families came to the Gast home to help their parents celebrate the great event. They were Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gast, Roger and Judy; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Zwald, Winola and Eugene; Mr. and Mrs. Loren Gast, Kathy and Doran; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Gibbs and Ronna; and Mrs. James Fredin and Carolyn of Fort Dodge.

The evening lunch was served by their sons and their wives: Mr. and Mrs. Loren Gast and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Gast.

The children presented Mr. and Mrs. Gast with a beautiful bouquet of carnations and roses, and a nice corsage for Mrs. Gast. The color scheme which was carried out was in ruby and white. Mr. and Mrs. Gast received many nice gifts from their children, relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Gast were happy to have their five children and families, including eight grandchildren with them on this occasion.

W. S. Nelson, publisher of the Thornton Enterprise for the past 12 years, will give up his lease to the owner, H. W. Alexander, March 1st.

Mr. Nelson has greatly improved the paper since taking over and has greatly increased both the circulation and the advertising. Mrs. Nelson, who has been working with him, has taught the 7th and 8th grade in the Thornon schools for the past 4 years. She has resigned and will remain at her post until her successor can be found.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson are a fine young couple and the newspaper people of North Iowa have enjoyed associating and working with them, and they will be greatly missed at our press meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson will not locate until they have had a good vacation. Their future plans are indefinite.

MUGGSY, THE MOVIE CRITIC

I JUST SEEN SAMSON and Hedy Delilah, which is the movie of the year in size, costumes, drama and peacock fans and I ache in every muscle. Now I know why Gargantua died down at Sarasota. He seen Victure Mature in a preview of this picture and he knew he was washed up.

* * *

I never seen no movie which had more action or more people in it, except maybe a newsreel of the crowds in Times Square election night. Cecil DeMille who done wonderful mob pictures years ago is the same wizard and he has the hand that has not lost its touch, except maybe with lions. There is a hair - raising scene where Samson wrestles a lion with no rules of a state athletic commission to protect him, and he kills the lion with his bare hands. The direction was a little bad. I got the idea Mature had the lion out a couple of times, but I guess there was a horn on the play the first time. The second time there was a illegal substitution.

Anyhow a fight between a lion and a man is a five-star special with me and as this one was in Technicolor it was like me being right in the ring with a waterbucket. I was in the lion's corner on account of I knew it was all fixed in the script so he had no chance and I got so excited I almost tossed in the towel, but the best Hollywood actor won and the lion had no business in the same ring with Mature and Hedy Lamarr anyhow. Just the same, if I was a lion and was matched with Mature I would of fought him different.

I am not knocking Mature. What he does in this picture would make a piker out of even Bernarr MacFadden in his prime. In the Bible story, which Jesse Lasky, Jr. and Freddie Frank have fixed all over for the popcorn trade, Samson was a strong man who did wonders, but Matrre makes them look easy and the close-ups of muscles are extra good.

* * *

There is a big switch in the Delilah story. In the Bible story which is good enough for me, this dame is a combination of Mae West, Gravel Gertie and a Democratic reply to a Republican statement of policy. She is tough all the way, with no detours. This would not do in no Hollywood script, even on Bible authority. So Delilah is made a nice girl who had Samson's hair cut by mistake and reforms, quitting the haircut and shave field entirely and ending up nuts about him and his jawbone.

I was afraid they would put a sweater on Delilah, but they did not. It was not necessary, I could tell it was Hedy all along.

Still I am going a second time as it is a picture you don't see every day It is worth the money just to see so many beards, suits of mail, spear bearers, peacock feathers, and muscles all in Technicolor. Also after Samson fights a lion, slays 1,000 Philistines and demolishes a temple, it is nice to have a stage show thrown in with nobody fighting and not a jawbone in the joint.

"Alaine White, frequently seen with Gable, said, 'Golly, I can't picture her as his wife. Gabe's been doing a lot of motorcycling lately That must've done it."—News item.

Y'mean the sharp turns or the jolts?

Shudda Haddim seconds a recent suggestion of Joe Palmer that the all-level blanket system of old-age pensions be extended to horse players. "If a guy who has tried to make a livin' playin' them gallopers all his life ain't in bad shape and an object for pity and first aid I dunno who is," he declares. "And don't tell me he ain't that way through hard work!

* * *

The Shudda Haddim pension plan calls for pensions for horse players at 50. "He is really 65 when he is only 50," he explains. "I have known a lot of players who have been 65 before they was 40, in fact. Furthermore, if he gets $200 a month pension he is the only guy in the whole pension system who won't cost the government a dime, as he will give it all back.

Toasted Pears
(Serves 6)

6 large fresh pears
3 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup melted butter
2½ cups corn flakes
Sauce:
⅓ cup confectioners' sugar
1 cup sour cream
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Peel, halve and core pears. Dip at once into lemon juice in which sugar has been dissolved. Dip in melted butter. Roll in crushed corn flakes. Arrange cut side up on a shallow baking pan. Bake in moderate oven (350°-375°) for 20 to 25 minutes, or until pears are tender but not soft. To make lemon cream sauce, beat confectioners' sugar into the sour cream and flavor with lemon juice.

Fruit Marlow
(Serves 6)

½ pound marshmallows, quartered
1 cup strong hot coffee
1 cup whipped cream
1½ cups fruit cocktail, drained

Dissolve marshmallows in coffee in top of double boiler. Cool until mixture begins to thicken. Fold in whipped cream and drained fruit cocktail. Pour into sherbet glasses and chill.

Caramel Baked Apples
(Serves 6-8)

6-8 medium apples
½ cup seedless raisins
3 tablespoons enriched flour
⅓ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
3 tablespoons butter
¼ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup water
½ cup orange juice

Wash apples and core. Pare about one strip around top. Place in deep baking dish. Fill centers with raisins. Combine flour, sugar and cinnamon. Cut in butter with pastry blender or fork. Add walnuts. Sprinkle crumb mixture over apples. Pour over water and orange juice. Bake uncovered in moderate oven (350°) one hour, basting occasionally. Serve with cream.

Apricot-Marshmallow Betty
(Serves 6-8)

1 pound (3 cups) quartered dried apricots, cooked
5 cups toasted white bread cubes
1 pound (about 16) marshmallows, quartered
1 cup liquid from apricots
1½ teaspoons grated lemon peel
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons butter

Alternate layers of apricots, bread cubes and marshmallows in greased 6x10-inch baking dish. Top layer should be bread cubes. Heat apricot juice to boiling; add lemon peel and juice and butter; pour over. Bake uncovered in moderate oven (350°) about 35 minutes. Note: Add four cups water to dried apricots, cover, simmer tender.

Stewed pears will take on a festive touch if you serve them with chilled custard and then top with meringue, browned until golden.

Mix some herbs with bread or cracker crumbs before breading veal or other meats.

Fried sausages are just as good with fried pears as with apples. Fry the pears in the sausage drippings just as you would the apples.

Smart garnish for a fish dinner uses tiny red beets, cooked and chilled, served in salted soured cream.

MIRROR Of Your MIND ■ ■ ■ How Important Are Souvenirs?

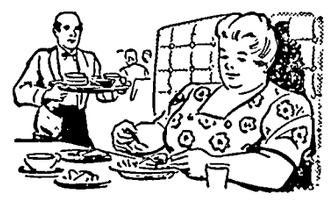
By Lawrence Gould

Is cherishing "souvenirs" neurotic?

Answer: That depends on how important they are to you. We all hate to see happy moments pass, and cling to anything that we think will preserve them, though we usually end by finding that our "souvenirs" are soon forgotten and are thought of only when we "run across them" when we're going through a bureau drawer or closet. The more they mean to us, the more nearly cherishing them is to being neurotic, since a healthy-minded person seeks his satisfaction in what he can do next, not in memories of past pleasures.

Can you love someone you disapprove of?

Answer: Certainly, provided that your disapproval is at bottom a defense against your own unconscious feelings. A person who "stands for everything that you dislike" may have a special appeal for you if the "dislike" represents an attitude which you have assumed because conscience requires it of you, not because you really have it. But to marry under such conditions is a risky business because if you cannot give up your "dislike," you may end by proving its "sincerity" by turning it against the person you "thought you loved."



Is "greediness" the main cause of overeating?

Answer: As a rule, not if what you mean is simple devotion to the pleasures of the table—or the ice-box. A few gourmets may be over-stuffed, but the average person who eats too much hardly seems to know what he is eating. Possibly our earliest "association" is that of a full stomach with security—with the sense of mother's nearness and protection. And it's the unconscious effort to regain that feeling which is most likely to make you eat when you're not really hungry. Too much food won't even "tempt" a secure person.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Method of Preventing Tooth Decay

By Dr. James W. Barton

FOR MANY YEARS physicians have been seeking ways of preventing ill health, which, from the selfish standpoint, is really cutting down on their yearly income. For many years also, dentists have been seeking ways of preventing decay of teeth, which really provides their largest source of income.

The latest discovery in preventing tooth decay is the application of sodium fluoride to the teeth. Various communities have been able to show over the years that applying sodium fluoride in a certain strength reduces tooth decay by 40 per cent.

As long ago as 1947, the council on dental therapeutics, American Dental association, stated that "the evidence is convincing that fluoride solutions properly applied to the teeth are capable, to some extent of reducing tooth decay in children."

Following this the dental section of the American Public Health association unanimously endorsed the proposal that community programs for making this preventive available to children be organized as soon as possible.

And finally the council on dental health of the American Dental association published a recommendation that topical fluoride treatment be used routinely in private offices and in school and community health programs.

I am giving all the above authoritative information about this simple method of preventing tooth decay, so that parents, teachers and the public generally can do their part in organizing or at least helping to arouse interest in this effort to preserve the teeth of children.

The application of fluoride to the outside portions of each tooth takes about 15 minutes, states Dr. John W. Knutson, Washington, D. C., in "The Journal of the American Dental Association."

We should all do our share in getting behind the community drive to make this simple, inexpensive method of preventing tooth decay available to all children.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

When children's specialists taught mothers how to feed their children properly, summer diarrhoea almost disappeared. It was preventing deaths by proper feeding that is still considered the first and perhaps greatest forward step in lengthening the life span of men and women.

Where We Came In

Lesson for Feburary 5, 1950

A CIRCULAR LETTER came in the other day from a stranger who is hot and bothered because he has discovered that Jews and Negroes can belong to Christian churches along with white Americans. The astonishing thing is not that that should be true, but that any man should get excited over it. What astonished the Apostle Paul was not that Jews were in the Christian church but that anybody else could be! We must recall that Jesus was a Jew; that all the apostles were Jews; that the first Christian church at Jerusalem was composed exclusively of Jews.

Dr. Foreman

New Type

THE CHURCH AT ANTIOCH, one of the great commercial cities of the Roman world, was where we Gentiles came in. The writer is indebted to his former teacher, Dr. Charles Erdman, for noting four ways in which that church in Antioch was something new.

They had no Old Testament, they knew nothing of the Old Testament sacrifices, they had no interest in the Temple or in the history of Israel. Like most Gentiles, they had usually thought of the Jew as a quaint but unimportant minority group. Now that these Gentiles were in the same church with Jews, there would be plenty of room for trouble.

Could a church made up of such different races become a true Brotherhood? So the old mother-church at Jerusalem sent up Brother Barnabas to look around. Barnabas was not the church's most brilliant mind, but he had a heart full of faith.

New Leaders

GOD DOES NOT ALWAYS give the greatest successes to the "big names." Nowadays every one who knows his Bible knows Paul and Barnabas; but in Antioch both men were unknown at first, and untried.

When God wants a Reformation he calls forth a Luther, an obscure man who never fitted any of the existing priestly molds. When God wanted to open up Africa he called David Livingstone; when he wanted men for the far interior of Asia he called Hudson Taylor. When he wanted light to shine down into the slums he called William Booth.

These were all peculiar men by the standards of their times; but it takes peculiar men to break away from tradition's hearth-fire and break out new roads for the Gospel.

New Center

FOR SOME TIME Jerusalem was the capital of the Christian world. All roads led out from there, so to speak. With the rise of the Antioch church, however, a new center took the place of the old. Jerusalem withered away. In later times Alexandria led, and then other cities.

For a thousand years Rome and Constantinople were the acknowledged centers of the Christian world. Now we have also London—New York—Geneva . . . Many such centers have small beginnings. In America's early days the churches of Scotland sent over missionary offerings for the help of the struggling little church of New York.

In future years, who knows? Some church in Yunnan may be sending missionaries to the feeble folk left in the war-devastated ex-white world.

New Name

ANTIOCH is no longer a city of any importance. Missionaries go to it, not from it. But old Antioch left us something still cherished, a new name for believers: Christian. That name itself proves something.

It proves that the church in Antioch was something more than an aggregation of "churchmen." It was a family of Christ-men and Christ-women. These believers must have talked and lived something better than mere vague "religion." They talked of Christ, they loved Christ and they lived Christ, till even their busy neighbors took notice.

If your church had no name, and if your neighbors were to name it, and all the neighbors knew about it were you, by what name would they call it?

Dividing A Large Room

QUESTION: We have a large spare bedroom that we would like to divide so that we can make another room out of it. There are only two windows. We have thought of large Venetian blinds and also heavy drapes on a long rod. Do you have any other idea? I want to avoid expense and mess and dirt.

ANSWER: It all depends on how much privacy you want. You would not get much privacy with a Venetian blind or draperies. I believe you would find it more practical to put up studding on which you can nail up a wallboard. For ventilation in the summertime, you could have some of the panels movable, so that if desired, they can be taken out for better circulation of air. You may need to put in another window or two.

STANDBY FOR WINTER MENUS----

TASTY MAIN DISH CASSEROLES

A main dish like this one is sure to be right for winter appetites. There are no hard-and-fast rules for making casserole dishes. There are always new combinations to try and toppings to add to make the dish look extra good.

Cold winds to battle, along with winter's ice and snow, create some pretty hearty appetites.

So what could be more temping when your chilled and hungry family arrives for lunch or dinner than a casserole dish, piping hot from the oven.

In preparing casserole dishes, Jewel Graham, foods and nutrition specialist at Iowa State College, says to keep the pieces of food as large as possible. She explains that many persons, especially men, object to a dish when they can't tell what's in it.

This can be solved with such a dish as the glorified meat stew. To make it, Miss Graham says to cut a chuck beef into serving size pieces. Stew the meat with whole carrots, whole medium-size onions and a liquid of cut green beans and tomatoes. After simmering the meat and vegetables, place them in a casserole dish, top with mashed potatoes and brown in a moderate oven.

Check Protein

For good nutrition, make sure you have protein in your casserole meals by adding milk, eggs or cheese to starchy or vegetable casseroles.

Other suggestions for casserole dishes which Miss Graham offers include scalloped potatoes baked with pork sausage, ham, wieners, vienna sausage, bologna, luncheon meats or canned meats. She cautions that ham may curdle the milk in scalloped potatoes. This can be prevented by adding a little of the milk at a time. Let the milk cook into the potatoes and then add more milk. Mild, cured ham does not curdle milk.

Tuna, salmon, codfish balls and other fish make an unusual casserole when combined with potatoes. Liver, too, may be precooked in serving size pieces and baked with raw potatoes for a particularly nutritious meal.

And of couse there are all the casseroles made with macaroni, noodles and spaghetti. Cheese fondue and souffles are a form of casserole dishes, too.

Serve a variety if egg casseroles, Miss Graham suggests, for eggs will be especiall plentiful and low cost in February.

Topping Adds Interest

One way to make casseroles even more appetizing and tempting is to add interesting toppings. Biscuit dough is one of the more common toppings, but you can make it unusual by adding tomato juice as the liquid, or grated cheese. Vary the way you put the dough on the casserole dish, too. You might cover the dish solidly with the dough, put it on in mounds or run it through a pastry tube to make a border.

Cut the biscuit dough with a doughnut cutter and fill the holes wih green peas for an especially colorful casserole, Miss dough out in various shapes Graham suggests. Or cut the dough out in various shapes with your cookie cutter. Hardcooked eggs make a good topping, too.

Minced parsley, sprigs of parsley, a dash of paprika or pimento are colorful additions to any casserole.

And don't overlook the possibilities of using individual casseroles, Miss Graham says.

Egyptians Were First To Study Perfume Art

Although American women use perfume and fragrance products to the value of 685 million dollars per year, they know very little about the science—and art—which lie behind the lovely scents they buy and wear. Here are a few little known facts about perfume from an interview with Coty experts:

The word perfume (par fume) means "through smoke." It comes from primitive times when the only perfume the cave men knew was the lovely aroma released by burning certain woods and gums. The most precious ones, such as myrrh and frankincense were reserved for religious ceremonies, and only priests were permitted to use them.

The Egyptians were the first on record to adopt and study the art of perfumery as a mark of culture. The Romans developed perfumery as an industry and spread the use of perfume all over the Roman Empire. In the Dark Ages after the fall of Rome, the use of perfume was forgotten. It was brought back to Europe from Asia Minor by the Crusaders. The most ancient perfume in existence (and still fragrant) is an unguent taken from a tomb in Egypt.

France is the modern leader of the perfume industry. The French with their natural love of beauty and luxury realized the possibilities of extracting fragrances from the flowers which bloom so luxuriantly and smell so sweetly in the south of France along the Mediterranean coast.

Australians May Compel Label for Wool Products

Compulsory labeling of wool and other textiles and textile products, produced domestically or imported, is expected to be made effective in Australia, beginning January 1, 1950.

The ruling provides that textile products must carry a trade label specifying fiber content in order of importance by weight.

Under the terms of the ruling, when a fabric contains 5 per cent or less of fiber other than its predominating fiber, the material may be designated by the name of the predominating fiber. For example, fabrics containing 95 per cent wool may be described as "all wool."

The ruling divides textiles into two classes, as follows:

1. Apparel.

2. Woven, knitted and felted materials, including blankets, rugs, tops and yarns.

Wool, reprocessed wool and reused wool are considered as separate fiber classes, under the law. Reprocessed wool is defined as the product resulting from the reduction into a fibrous state of spun, woven, knitted or felted wool never before used by consumers. Reused wool differs from reprocessed wool in one respect: it includes wool products previously used by consumers and reduced to a fibrous state.

Douglas Fir Country

The Douglas fir region alone of Oregon and Washington encompasses over 35 million acres of which less than six million acres are classed either as non-forest land or crop and grazing land, or taken over by townsites. Twenty-six million acres are available for commercial forest use for present and future generations. It is estimated that about 300,000 acres are logged per year; however 50,000 to 60,000 acres of these are only partially cut. This is in sharp contrast to the southeastern United States where as much as five million acres are cut over annually some quite closely and some in very light partial cuttings.

Care of Antiques

You can prevent your handsome antique furniture from warping and cracking by watching the temperature of the room in which it stands. Keep the temperature at 68 to 70 degrees—no higher—and don't subject the room to sudden cold air. Bowls of flowers and pans of water concealed near radiators help keep the air moist. And wax the furniture thoroughly at least once a year. Good furniture wax feeds the wood and helps to seal it against moisture.

Overalls for Children

If you're making overalls for your young child, you'll want to choose the fastenings carefully. Clothing specialists recommend fasteners that are both light in weight and durable. Flat, round buttons, medium in size, are usually easiest for young children to manage. Avoid heavy hardware types like those used on older boys and men's overalls. Select them with laundering in mind. Avoid metals that may rust, bend, or crush in the laundry.

Britain's Roads

The Romans gave Britain her first roads and they built them just about as straight as nature would allow. But it was the first and last attempt to emulate crow-flight. In the centuries since, the British have allowed their roads to flow like rivers, following the charming line of least resistance. Even the modern concrete arteries perform graceful loops round sleepy villages, allowing them to snooze undisturbed.

ROTATING PASTURE AIDS HOG INCOME

Pigs Take Less Feed, They Are Healthier, Crop Yields Increase

Rotated pastures for hogs have helped boost incomes in three different ways on Iowa State College Foundation Farms throughout Iowa.

James J. Wallace, manager of the farms, says the pastures lowered some of the other feed requirements, produced healthier pigs through improved sanitation and brought larger yields in crops following the hogs.

He says these last two advantages didn't show up when permanent pastures were used. Records kept on the farms show that 12 to 14 pigs are about as many as an acre of pasture should handle.

Good pasture actually replaced some expensive protein feeds, but grain requirements for each 100 pounds of grain remained about the same, Wallace says.

Mixture Used

The seeding mixture that has worked best is 6 pounds of alfalfa, 5 pounds of brome, 3 pounds of red clover, 3 pounds of timothy and ½ pound of ladino clover.

Red clover and timothy are included to fill in where alfalfa and brome fail to catch. The brome provides earlier pasture in the spring, but hogs don't eat it after the clovers and alfalfa appear, the farm manager observes.

He says brome also improves the soil structure and prevents muddy conditions underfoot. The ladino clover is especially good in fall and late summer when the alfalfa and red clover fade out.

Fencing, Water Problems

Other management problems that had to be solved is using rotated hog pastures were water supplies and fencing.

On one farm a well was drilled at a point from which 12 different pastures could be supplied by a pressure pump. Wallace says scooped pits worked out all right on farms with tight subsoils. Tank wagons are used to haul water on some of the farms.

Temporary fences are used for rotation hog pastures on Foundation Farms. They are made of short steel posts and 32-inch woven wire, and are moved once or twice a year. Wallace says 7-foot steel posts can be cut in two to make practical poss for temporary hog pasture.

HANDLE MANURE RIGHT TO KEEP ALL OF VALUE

Use enough bedding to absorb manure liquids in barns and sheds this winter, advises Marvin Anderson, extension agronomist at Iowa State College.

A ton of well-preserved, mixed manure contains plant food equal to 10 pounds of nitrogen, 5 of phosphoric acid and 10 lbs. of potash. Anderson says that the average Iowa farm produces $570 worth of manure each year. The big problem is getting manure out to the fields while it's still worth its full value.

Hauling manure directly from the barn and spreading it on fields where it's needed, eliminates some of the loss from bleaching and vaporizing which occurs when manure is piled out in the open in barnyards and feeding lots.

Ideal way to handle manure is to spread it in the field and work it into the soil right away. While it's impossible to get it worked into the soil this winter, Anderson says that it is still a good idea to keep it hauled unless you have a place to store it properly. Manure out in the field will tend to leach into the soil where it will do some good. However, he says that you may lose some of the manure's value if it's spread on top of snow on rolling land.

The farmer who desn't want to haul manure out regularly this winter can return the full value of manure to the land next spring if he stores it properly. Manure keeps well under a roof and on a water-tightfloor. Cattle sheds, where manure is kept well compacted, make ideal storage places if hauling cannot be done until spring.

There is no law requiring Justices of the Supreme Court to be lawyers.

Many Happy Returns

CINCINNATI—June Lambeau dispells the old adage "Finders Keepers, Losers Weepers" by spelling out "D A V" with lost keys about to be returned by Disabled American Veterans to car owners. Key-loss insurance is available to more than 30 million motorists this year who will receive DAV Idento-Tags, miniature car license plates for key rings. More than 5,000 keys are returned each month. Funds realized from tags make possible free service for disabled veterans and their dependents.

New Barber Shop At Goodell

Earl Tubbs, who had been in the barbering business in Dougherty for the past 16 years, has opened a barber shop in the large brick building at Goodell in the section between Urbasch's hardware store and the C. & P. Grocery.

Goodell had been without a barber since A. M. Graeber accepted work in a shop at Belmond several months ago.

TRAGEDIES

Recently, Ralph Young of Sioux Rapids received word of the death of a young cousin, four year old Richard Young of Ralston, due to injuries received when a tractor ran over him. The same afternoon, Mr. Young's brother-in-law. Darrel Argotsinger of Woodbine, contacted a hot wire on an REA line, losing an arm and a leg.

Saber-toothed tigers are now extinct.

PREVENT WATER PIPES FROM FREEZING BY ELECTRICAL HEATING

Use Caution When Using Blow Torch Near Wall

Beat the frozen pipe problem on the farm this winter with insulation or electrical heating devices, advises S. S. DeForest, agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

He says going after frozen pipes from the preventive angle eliminates the unpleasant job of pipe-thawing and may save costly repair bills as well.

Pipes that are apt to freeze may be covered with commercial insulation, or where that's unhandy, burlap or other material may be wrapped around the pipe.

Wooden Housing Helps

If there's plenty of clearance, wooden housing may be built around the pipe and filled with insulation, or an electric heat bulb may be placed inside the housing. For exposed drain pipes, DeForest suggests sliding ordinary drainage tile down over the pipe and then filling the tile with ground corncobs.

Plastic tape that contains an electrical heating element that is thermostatically conrolled also is effective in preventing frozen pipes in farm water systems. This new heating tape also may be used to thaw out frozen pipes.

For pipes that become frozen, DeForest thinks the blow torch is still the best and fastest weapon for most Iowa farmers to use in thawing—that is, providing it can be used without danger of fire.

Caution With Blow Torch

Where walls are so close to the pipe that the hand can't be placed on the wall and held there comfortably while the blow torch flame is directed on the pipe, DeForest recommends using another method. He points out that dust or dirt in wall cracks or crevices may catch fire and smolder for some time before breaking out into a full-fledged fire.

Another caution for blow torch users—don't hold the flame in one spot too long. Steam may build up pressure and the pipe may burst if both ends are still frozen.

Heat lamps or hot water are other methods that can be used in thawing-out operations. DeForest advises against using an electric welder for thawing out farm pipes. He says both the welder and the farm transformer may be damaged by such a practice.

Comparatively Speaking

If we consider the entire time that the earth has been in existence as a hundred years, then the time from the beginning of the human race to now would be about four seconds. Small wonder we have trouble taking care of ourselves. We just haven't been here long enough to know much.

TOO LITTLE SEED OF FORAGE CROPS

Supply Not Likely To Catch Up With Demand Next Several Years

Iowa farmers are faced with a shortage of forage crop seed during the next several years, according to J. M. Scholl, Darrel Metcalfe and V. B. Hawk, Iowa State College agronomists.

The expected shortage will result from an increased demand rather than from a decrease in production, the agronomists say. They point out that the 1949 production of six leading forage seed crops was 8 percent greater than 1948 production. But, in most cases, it doesn't equal the expected need for this year.

Enough Alfalfa

The record breaking 1949 alfalfa seed crop was the only major forage seed crop which was large enough to meet the 1950 demand. Production of red clover seed was only slightly over 60 percent of the amount of this year.

Farmers are paying the highest prices on record for timothy and brome seed—two important Iowa forage crops. Last year's timothy seed production was less than half of the amount needed for this year. And bromegrass seed production was less than one-fourth of the 1950 need.

The agronomists point out that Production Marketing Administration surveys indicate a continued increase in forage seed needs. By 1955 the forage seed demand will be 40 percent greater than this year. And by 1960 it will be 60 precent greater than in 1950.

Iowa Importer

These comparisons are based on national production and needs. But the agronomists think they are of particular importance to the Iowa farmer because Iowa always imports a large amount of forage seed. The state has never produced enough of most forage seeds to meet its own demands.

The forthcoming government curtailment of corn acreage is one of the big reasons for larger forage seed needs, the agronomists believe About 2 million Iowa crop acres may be changed from production of corn to some other crop. A good share of that average will probably be seeded to forage crops.

Signs of Normal Person Listed by Psychologist

If you feel inferior to other people, if your moods change several times a day, if you forget where you parked your car after a movie —don't think you're slipping. Actually, it's all quite normal, according to Edward A. McFaul, former head of the academic department of the Army School for the Blind at Avon, Conn.

McFaul lists certain feelings and actions as "normal abnormalities," not signs of cracking up. Among them is the feeling of inferiority, a sensation which he says comes over most of us at some time. But he adds "No human being can long feel inferior without doing something about it."

Another normal abnormality is that of sudden mood changes without any apparent reason. "All of us are subject to emotional ups and downs, these mood swings. The more intelligent you are, the more frequently you will experience the swings from bottom to top, or vice versa, and back again. Don't let them get you. They are a normal abnormality."

McFaul distinguished between what he called "good and bad fears." "Good fears," he said, "are why some of us have lived as long as we have. We are afraid of the right things at the right time. But bad fears thwart and prevent a human being from flowering in the fullness of his capacity. That's the kind that prevents the foreman from taking the superintendent's job because he doesn't think he can handle it.

Western Red Cedar Famed For Resistance to Decay

The Western red cedar is among the largest and finest of the cedars produced anywhere in the world, its heartwood being famed for extraordinary resistance to decay. This tree is one of the foremost species of the Pacific Northwest forests, and reaches its peak development in the moister regions of Oregon and Washington.

Western red cedar is a distinct species, possessing virtually all the desirable qualities of the other cedars, and additional advantages besides. Its wood is of exceptionally light weight—one of the lightest of all commercial species—of soft texture and close, even, straight grain.

It is very easily worked, can be finished to a smooth, silky surface with little effort; is free from pitch, takes and holds stains, paints and enamels excellently, and has superior gluing qualities. Its coloring is particularly attractive, varying from the almost pure white of the narrow sapwood to the light straw shade or dark reddish-brown of the heartwood.

The wood contains a natural preservative oil which renders its heartwood virtually immune to decay and gives it extreme durability without artificial preservative treatment. Painting cedar to preserve it is unnecessary since it does not deteriorate appreciably even under severe climatic changes. When left in its natural state, it weathers to a beautiful soft driftwood gray.

How "Silencer" Acts

How does a silencer eliminate the report of a gun? The usual report comes from expanding gases of the explosion which drive the bullet forward. As they leave the muzzle these gases form a high pressure wave, and when this reaches the ear we hear the "bang." When you inflate a paper bag, and suddenly burst it, you hear a report for similiar reasons. The silencer, however, holds back the gases so that they leave the barrel more gradually and the pressure wave is not as sharp. Also, it cools the gases somewhat, so that there is a smaller volume to escape. When this wave reaches the ear there is no sudden push on the ear drum, and so the report is reduced greatly. If you punch an inflated bag with a pencil as you squeeze it slowly, you get an analogous effect.

Chemical Plant for Britain

Opening in Britain of the new 16,000,000-dollar Shell Chemical Solvents plant at Stanlow in Cheshire, is an event of major importance to British industry. The potential demand of modern industry for petroleum: derived chemicals—which have extensive uses in industries as diverse as paint and leather, food processing and photography — is enormous. The annual production of the plant will be some 24,000 tons of various types of solvents. Up to the present most of Britain's organic chemicals have been manufactured either from indigenous coal by distillation, or from imported molasses or other carbohydrates by fermentation processes.

Compass Needle

The compass needle points to the north magnetic pole of the earth, which is located in northern Canada, near the Arctic Circle. If you are close to this point the needle tends to point downwards, and an ordinary compass, in which the needle is balanced to move in a horizontal circle, is unreliable. However, from other points on the Arctic Circle it works better. In the northern part of Norway, for example, it points to the true north, that is, across the geographic pole towards the magnetic pole.

AROUND IOWA

LONG WAIT

Gus Mundt, now of Glidden, used to "court" Marie Nuppanau but they "broke up." This was back in 1894. Recently they were married, in Manning, with the bridegroom 73 and the bride 69. Both married others originally and are great-grandparents now.

DIDN'T PAY

Sometimes it doesn't pay to be a good fellow. Lloyd Wamdem of Cedar Rapids stepped out of his home the other night, to help push a car which was being vainly pushed by a second car. When Mr. Wamdem put his shoulder the task, the first car started up and the second car ran over him, breaking his leg. Neither car stopped.

LETTER

Mac, a Marengo spaniel belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Bill Huebner of Marengo, received a letter from his "brother" recently, addressed to him simply as "Mac, a Springer Spaniel, Marengo, Iowa." The letter Mac that he and his brother "Pat" were a year old today. Written, evidently, by Pat's owner, an Iowa City woman who became curious as to what had hpapened to the other puppy.

FOUR-LEAF CLOVERS

Mrs. Echo Foran, now of California but previously a farm wife near Ruthven, has a collection of some four thousand four-leaf clovers, framing them in three 3x5 foot panels. All were picked up by her on the Ruthven farm.

TROUBLE

A car and truck belonging to Bruce Miller of Cedar Rapids and Marvin Eihausen of Rock Rapids collided at a filling station in Rock Rapids recently. They got out to talk it over. While they were talking, the truck started to move again, knocked over a gas pump, took a second swipe at the automomile it had already hit once and mashed the service station's sliding doors.

CHRISTMAS PRESENT

Mrs. Robert Beal of Red Oak presented her husband with a fine Christmas present last month, a new baby daughter. Three years ago she presented him with a son, also born on Christmas day. Birthdays will be easy to remember in this household.

SHOT TOES

When 10 year old Larry Rutledge of Tama got a new 410 guage shotgun for Christmas, he put it to work right away. His first shot on a hunting trip ripped off the end of his new four-buckle overshoes and the tip of his toes.

OLD GO-CART

Infant Randdolph Wilson Lyon of Traer is using a combination high-chair and go-cart originally purchased for his grandfather 68 years ago. Aside from its age, the go-cart is unusual in that it can be quickly converted to a high chair.

MEETING

At Decorah recently, Lars Seim had the pleasure of meeting Lars Seim. One Lars Seim is a well known contractor there; the other was his 20-year old nephew, just arrived from Norway on a visit. He is a member of the Norwegian merchant marine.

CENTURY

After over a century in the possession of one family, a 170 acre farm in Van Buren county has been sold to J. F. Dunshee. The farm was owned by Elmus, John and Walter Bennett and had been in the Bennett family since before 1850.

BURNED

Paul Baker, 14 year old Dunlap youth, has been laid up with second-degree burns received on an overnight camping expedition. A kerosene stove in a cabin exploded as more fuel was being poured in, with Paul receiving the full force of the blast.

TALKS TO FRANCE

Jean Labrat, 18, French youth who lives with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Slessor of Reinbeck, talked to his parents in France a few days ago. The three-minute call cost $15 and Jean says it was worth it. Jean has been in the States for the past two years.

LEMONS

So that he won't envy those living or vacationing in California, Dr. R. E. Gray of Eldora is growing lemons and oranges in his office. He purchased the trees in California two years ago.

BANK

When Ed. Arnold closed the business day at the Union State bank at Bridgewater recently, it marked the end for him of 44 years in the banking business, 30 of them at Bridgewater. He has sold his interest in the Bridgewater bank.

PERFECT

Al Bailey of Emmetsburg drew a "perfect" cribbage hand in a recent game. It contained the 5 of spades, hearts an' clubs, plus the jack of clubs, and other player "cut" the 5 of clubs. It was the first perfect hand for Mr. Bailey in some 30 years of cribbage playing.

HERO of the Month
AS SELECTED BY THE DAV

William Patrick O'Connell of Silver Springs, Maryland, came out of World War II paralyzed, blind and with a partial loss of memory. He didn't care much about living.

That was five years ago.

Duke O'Connell

Today, O'Connell is district manager of the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company, happily married and the proud father of a baby boy.

Because of his ability to cope with serious handicaps caused by war service and become self-sustaining, the Disabled American Veterans has selected O'Connell as "The Hero of the Month."

The selection is part of a national program to honor each month a seriously disabled veteran who has successfully rehabilitated himself.

Duke attributes his rehabilitation to specialized training under Public Law 16—the disabled veteran's law—and the assistance given him by the DAV in assisting him with his compensation claim. He is a member of the DAV National Service Chapter No. 9 in Washington, D.C.

O'Connell's service record is an amazing story of heroism. A top notch baseball, basketball, boxing and sharpshooting champion in high school and service competition, Duke served with the Ranger Battalion and took part in the invasion of Normandy on D-Day.

He was in the first wave. Objective; knocking out big coastal guns. Objective accomplished, despite heavy casualties. O'Connell was in combat until September—three months later — when a sniper's bullet in Alsaice Lorraine lodged in his thigh.

O'Connell was hospitalized for two and a half weeks and sent back into action with his leg still bandaged. More action through December . . . and more heroic service that included falling through the roof of a no[illegible] and helping in the capture of [illegible] Germans.

Near Saarbrucken, Germany, a power patrol had to [illegible]. About half way across [illegible] was cut down by machine gun fire. He fell, and in falling, was turned around. Thinking he was crawling toward his own lines he was inching toward the enemy and was shot through the head, left for dead.

He was hospitalized . . . blind, paralyzed, very little memory. He wanted to die. But finally his sight was regained and following months of hospitalization he was released.

The future? Duke wanted a job where he could be on his own. Taking advantage of the government's educational program, he enrolled at Purdue University for training as an insurance underwriter. When he completed his college courses his record was so impressive that Jefferson Standard employed him as an underwriter and shortly after that made him a district manager.

The suit was brought by the plaintiff on an account. Greiman did not appear in defense.

"KEEP GOP. AGENCIES OUT OF POLITICS" SAYS FARM BUREAU

Iowa Farm Bureau resolutions for 1950 call attention to the dangers involved if governmental agencies move into policy-making fields and into partisan politics, according to C. A. Bird, who served as voting delegate from this county at the Iowa Farm Bureau convention in Des Moines, last fall.

"Our resolution on agricultural agencies pointed out that Farm Bureau has always supported legislation in behalf of agricultural agencies," Mr. Bird said.

"We believe that it is the responsibility of independent non-governmental farm organizations to secure needed and justifiable appropriations for these agencies. By the same token we must constantly examine these programs to see that they serve the need for which they were intended."

Mr. Bird called attention to the following paragraphs, which he said outline the position of the Iowa Farm Bureau on governmental agencies.

"In the main, our agricultural agencies have been well administered. Most governmental employees and administrators are capable and conscientious, working longer hours than required and often times for less money than they might earn elsewhere. There is a tendency, howver, for some administrators to attempt to expand the activities fo their agency into fields improper for that agency. The following are three examples:

1. The unnecessary expansion and the duplication of the efforts of other agencies.
2. Entering the policy field and using public funds to influence public opinion.
3. Becoming involved in partisan politics.

"Farmers are a minority group and cannot expect to obtain the cooperation of the general public in securing appropriations for agriculture agencies if we allow overlapping and duplications of functions."

Bogey and Pandas Were Tame Compared to J. Brutus Booth

By BILLY ROSE

There was a lot of talk on Broadway in recent weeks about the incident at the El Morocco club where Humphrey Bogart was caught with his pandas down, and to hear the prissy boys tell it, unless Bogey stops acting up he's a cinch to finish behind the well-known eight-ball.

Well, mebbe so, but I wouldn't bet on it. It's my belief that, if anything, his daffy didos will help his pulling-power at the box office, very much as they helped John Barrymore, W. C. Fields, and other talented screwballs who had the nerve to do what the rest of us only daydream about.

And don't let any old-timer with braid on his vest tell you that the entertainment business wouldn't have tolerated a Humphrey Bogart in the dear, dead days. According to the record, the antics of yesterday's stars make our present crop of performers look as pale as a ghost who has just seen a man.

Billy Rose

For easy example, take, say, the great tragedian, Junius Brutus Booth—a name to conjure with and make faces at.

JUNIUS BRUTUS was born in England a few years before the 19th century made its bow, and by the time he was 13 a servant girl had accused him of being the father of her out-of-bounds baby. During the next four years, among other things, he took a crack at being a sailor, a sculptor and the husband of two ladies, without the customary divorce in between.

None of this stunted his growth, however, because by the time he was 20 he had become one of the great stars of the London stage. He appeared at Covent Garden as Richard III, and the following season at Drury Lane as Iago to Keane's Othello. And, unless the record is lying, his success was so great that a group of envious actors started a riot in the theater and tried to burn it down.

Offstage, Junius Brutus was even more spectacular than on, and if Lauren Bacall's husband had been sampling the flesh and winepots of Piccadilly at the time, chances are his capers wouldn't have rated a morning-after thought. Booth, so goes the story, made so many passes and passed out so many times that finally, at the insistence of husbands, bartenders and bobbies, he packed and skedaddled to New York.

Here, he proceeded to revolutionize most of our acting techniques and, despite the enormous quantities of woozle-water he consumed, he never let his audiences down. At one matinee, he was literally carried into the theater, and while the manager was splashing water on his face the customers began to yell for the show to go on.

Annoyed by their catcalls, the tragedian stuck his face through the curtain and roared, "I'm drunk now, but in ten minutes I'll give you the greatest King Lear you ever saw." And he did.

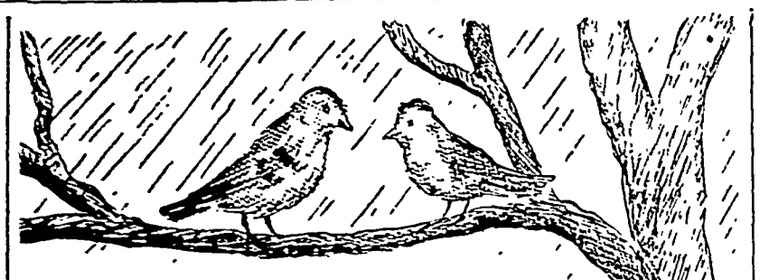
Another time, he went into a pawnshop to borrow $10, pledged himself as security, spent the tenner on Jersey applejack, and then, as per promise, came back and squatted in the pawnbroker's window until his manager redeemed him.

One night while playing "Richard III," he suddenly decided to revise Shakespeare's script, and when it came to the duel scene in the last act he began slashing away at the young actor playing the role of Richmond. The episode ended with his chasing the kid out the stage door and several blocks down the Bowery.

AS THE YEARS leapfrogged on, Booth's capacity for nuttiness became something of a national legend, and any theater he was scheduled to play generally sold out the day the engagement was announced. Stories about the capers crackpot were repeated around every pot-bellied stove—and little wonder. For instance, while taking an ocean voyage, the ship passed the spot where an actor named Conway had committed suicide by drowning. Junius Brutus suddenly appeared on deck and yelled, "I have a message for Conway," and dove overboard. And for the next 30 minutes, he played water-tag with the sailors who jumped in to fish him out.

In his finale years, Booth took up the study of Buddhism and developed so great a horror of inflicting death that he would burst into tears if someone happened to step on a bug. He financed a campaign against hunting and, while on tour one autumn, enraged at the wanton killing of birds, he bought a cemetery plot and held a funeral for some pigeons a sportsman had shot.

Despite all this hi-jinks and hoopla, however, he was quite a family man, and the 10 children he raised were devoted to him. Unfortunately, the final curtain on the career of the inspired looney who hated killing was that one of his children, John Wilkes Booth, was the man who assassinated Abraham Lincoln.



IT HAS TAKEN LONG

I T has taken long for me to learn
The simple lessons that the Master taught.
To consider the lilies as their petals burn
Among the wayside grasses, to take no thought
Of a tomorrow that may never bring
Some direful, long anticipated thing,
To mark the sparrows on a windy stem
Lashing and dipping in a day of storm,
And to remember that He cares for them,
And shelters them and keeps them from all harm;
And that I am more valuable than they
To Him who walks beside me day by day.

"Let not your heart be troubled . . ." —these His words
Should have been learned and heeded long ago.
I should have lived light-hearted as the birds,
I should have marked the lilies—Ah, too slow
Has been my heart in learning how to live.
Dear God, You tried to teach me. Please forgive.

ENTERPRISE PAYS

By Richard H. Wilkinson

PAUL SPARROW'S vaudeville act wasn't especially good, nor was it especially poor. He did a couple of trick dance steps, told some fairly funny stories and sang a couple of songs There were dozens better than he Yet Paul always played the big time, always got the best money. We who were in show business at the time, wondered.

The answer was simple when you stopped to think about it Paul was enterprising He gave himself a build up. For one thing he selected his music with care. He instructed the orchestra what to play and how to play it before he came on. He made a stooge of the drummer. He sold the idea, generally, that he was terrific.

3-Minute Fiction

We all expected that Paul would be among the first to go. But he wasn't. I didn't see him for almost a year, then one fall up in San Francisco, I ran across him again. It was rather a unique experience, because the gag he pulled that night was epic.

It seems that, despite his enterprising faculties, Paul was due to get the air. He had exhausted his bag of tricks. Managers were getting wise to him. On this night he was trying out at the Olympia Theater. Most of us thought it would be his swan song. On the other hand, if he went over big with his audience it would mean a 40-week contract. There wasn't a chance.

We watched him come out from the opposite side of the wings. He was doing a quick little dance step. There was a smattering of applause that almost instantly died away.

"Well," grinned Paul, "If you're serious, that's fine . . . if my gag took in an old trouper like you, it worked better than I thought it would."

Paul hesitated, then went into a routine. It was pitiful, because the step was rotten and he had apparently lost his self-confidence to boot.

I was standing so I could see Paul's face. For the first time since I'd known him I saw anger in his eyes, a red flush in his cheeks. He stopped dancing.

"All right," he said. "All right, wise guys, I'll show you."

The hecklers booed at him, shouted catcalls. Paul's face went livid. He suddenly galvanized into action.

I HAVE SEEN some good trick dancers in my day, but I've never seen anything to equal the antics of Paul Sparrow that night. Thoroughly aroused, he became a contortionist. He performed feats that were unheard of in the art of dancing. He threw himself around that stage like a madman. It was marvelous to watch. Superb!

Paul came out for three encores. He was a man inspired each time, and each time the audience gave him an ovation. They clapped for five full minutes after his last appearance.

After a while I strolled back to Paul's dressing room. The manager was just leaving. Inside, Paul was happily folding up a sheet of paper. I could tell by the expression on his face that it was the contract.

"Hello, feller," I grinned. "You killed 'em. I guess the thing to do if you want to stay in vaudeville these days is get mad."

"Why," he said, surprised. "Did you think I was mad? I wasn't."

"Don't kid me. Those hecklers had you down for the count."

"Well," grinned Paul, "if you're serious that's fine. I mean, if my little gag took in an old trooper like yourself, it even worked better than I thought it would."

"Wait a minute," I said, beginning to feel funny. "What are you getting at?"

"It was a gag, old horse. I hired three hecklers to do the job—you know, make the audience feel sympathetic toward me by having scathing remarks hurled at me. Then I pulled my trick. My new step. It really wasn't much of a step, you know. It only seemed that way. The audience was sympathetic. They would have liked anything I did." He grinned broadly. "You see, I was on the skids. I had to think of something. I tell you, friend, if you want to stay in vaudeville these days, you've got to be enterprising."

By INEZ GERHARD

"A DAY in the Life of Dennis Day" recently included the arrival of his second son, Eugene Dennis, not long after Patrick James McNulty celebrated his first birthday. The birth of that high-pitched speaking voice Day uses on the air was accidental. Mary Livingston heard one of his records and got Jack Benney to audition him when a new singer was needed for the Benny program. Day had been singing only on a small station, and was nervous and excited. Benny, in the control room, said sharply "All right, Mr. Day!" and Dennis' voice came out in a squeak as he nervously replied "Yes, please!" He got the job and the voice stayed in.

Danny Kaye has never made a funnier picture than "The Inspector General"; in fact, it is doubtful whether anyone has. Kaye is at his best, and has wonderful material. The scene in which he appears as himself and three other people is inspired. As usual, his wife, Sylvia Fine, wrote his songs. Henry Koster's direction is superb, the cast excellent.

Population Moving

WHILE ALL the attention and shouting about the 1950 census right now seems to be over the questions to be asked about income, the real political significance of this census is in what it will do to congress after the reapportionment as a result of the census

This second session of the 81st congress is sitting for the last time as now constituted, for as the saying goes, there'll be some changes made. For instance the migration from rural areas into the cities will make a definite impression on the complexion of congress and more representatives will come from the urban centers.

New York state, for instance will lose three congressmen; Pennsylvania will lose two. Indications now are that Illinois, Georgia, Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee and Oklahoma will each lose at least one congressman.

California will be the big winner with an increase of eight more congressmen. Florida, Indiana, Michigan, Texas, Oregon and Washington will each gain at least one And there may be other shifts as the population moves from East to West.

Seed Shortage Seen

The department of agriculture is deeply concerned over the fact that up to 100 million acres of land may go seedless as a result of a combination shortage of about 446 million pounds of grass and legume seeds and the new decrease in acreage allotments of basic crops.

In other words, some 30 million acres will be released from the production of wheat, cotton, tobacco, potatoes, rice and other allotment crops in order to prevent surplus in those crops and the estimate for needs of grass seeds stands at about 756 million pounds whereas the production this year amounted to only 310 million pounds. Whether these acres will stand idle subject to weeds or erosion, depends upon whether or not the farmers will plant more acres this year to Ladino clover, brome, sweet clover, alfalfa or other legumes.

Huge Pig Crop

The department of agriculture forecasts a record crop of pigs going to market in 1950 with the first wave to reach the market in the late winter or early spring at a reduction of about 10 per cent in price. The present 90 per cent of parity price support will be maintained through March and an expected reduction in the price support is expected beyond that date.

REA Gets Help

Approximately 800 applications are on file with the rural electric administration from companies seeking to give rural telephone service under the law enacted by the last session of congress.

And apparently there is an entirely different feeling between the private telephone companies and REA as compared to this government agency and the private power companies. Perhaps the telephone companies are taking a page out of the book of experience, for as a matter of fact they are offering REA every facility and help as a result of their long experience, instead of attempting to bloc the program as did the electric utilities.

Most applications for extension of phone service to the farms is coming from established private firms. The private companies say they installed 350,000 rural telephones in 1949 without REA. One advantage the private companies have is that REA seemingly does not want established electric Coops to handle telephones. So new telephone coops must be organized.

Would Widen Security

One of the "must" bills insofar as the administration is concerned and a likely campaign issue is the bill to extend social security to the tune of about 11 million additional persons and to increase its benefits. This measure (HR 6000) already has passed the house and carries increased payroll deductions to be borne by employers and employee alike. It would up the average payment from about $26 per month to about $44.

Another on the administration time table is the aid to education bill which passed the senate last session carrying an appropriation of about 300 million and which became all snarled up in a religious controversy in a house committee.

It will be remembered that the senate in the 80th congress passed a similiar bill introduced by Senator Taft, and which was never reported out of a house committee. It seems almost certain that some kind of education bill will pass this session.

Isotopes

More Uniform Tobacco

BOSTON. — Americans soon may be smoking cigarettes of more uniform quality because a group of young scientists here has developed a way of harnessing radio-active isotopes from Oak Ridge, Tenn.

The inventors, founders of Tracerlab, Inc., have perfected a measuring device known as the beta gauge which can detect within five millionths of an inch any variation in material. In cigarettes, for example, it can measure a fraction of a grain of tobacco, assuring uniformity in pack.

W. S. Barbour, Jr., president of the company, believes the beta gauge is only one step toward more extensive use of atomic energy in precise measurement. Coupled with a Brown electronic recording instrument, the device can be used for material control in manufacturing paper, aluminum foil, asphalt and rubber floor tile, cellophane, leather, paper board, textile yarn, tinplate and other similar products.

This method of measurement in industrial processes is said to be superior to others especially where it is important that no physical contact be made with the material to be measured, the engineers said.

America's Kitchens Of All-White Seem Losing Out to Color

The all-white kitchen may soon join the buggy and gaslight as a relic of the past, according to a recent survey of housekeepers' kitchen color tastes in the Midwest.

Over 65 per cent of homemakers polled by the color engineer Howard Ketcham expressed preference for colors other than white. Gray was most popular, chosen by 15 per cent. Cream was second, selected by 14 per cent. Nine per cent picked blue-green, and nine per cent preferred yellow.

The modern housewife, aided by psychological factors such as colors of her own choosing and work savers such as electric dishwashers, easy-to-clean clay tile walls, and automatic dryers, should run her kitchen more efficiently and enjoyably than her mother and grandmother, says Ketcham, noted designer of industrial products and the new Stratocruiser airliner interiors.

Recently developed household aids are a big help to the postwar kitchen pilot, but the atmosphere she works in can also improve her efficiency. Color plays an important part in creating that atmosphere, Ketcham says. Nowadays, with kitchen equipment and building materials in full production, the housewife can have a kitchen in any color she wants. For instance, clay tile, a leading kitchen wall and floor covering, is now available in more than 200 shades.

Kittens in Heating Unit Chill Church Congregation

DETROIT.—The Oak Park Christian chapel finally got the kittens out of the heating pipes and now the congregation assembles with certainty of more comfort than had previously been the case.

For an entire week, the congregation had been shivering at the nightly services because there were kittens in the pipes of the heating system. The Rev. James B. Shallow feared that firing the furnace might suffocate the kittens and—well, that would be unpleasant.

He and the congregation had learned that a white Angora cat had a litter of kittens in the heating duct of the newly-built church. No one was sure just how many. So when the weather became cold, the cat and kittens became a real problem.

The mother cat, Snowball, and two kittens finally were lured out. But meowings from the pipe indicated there were others. At last all were out, apparently, but one. It refused all blandishments.

An electrician heard about the church's problem and offered to help. His technique was simple. He rattled a long wire inside the ducts. The kitten skipped about just ahead of the wire and—at last—popped out among the pews.

Just to make sure all kittens were accounted for, the electrician checked all the ducts with mirror, flashlight and the long wire.

Jail Inmate Passes Time Knitting Wool Wearables

OSHKOSH, WIS.—Harold Harnitz is not one to just sit around in jail with time hanging heavy on his hands. He hangs yarn there instead.

Serving a drunken driving term under a special act, Harnitz hustles back to the Winnebago county jail each night to go on with his knitting.

Mrs. Grace Cooper, the jail matron, taught the 31-year-old Oshkosh man the intricacies of knitting and purling after he started his term.

So far, Harnitz has made argyle socks, a sweater and a shawl.

JUST BETWEEN

Mr. Jones squinted into the ing room where his daugh young man was comfortably sconced in the most luxur chair in the house. He frowned turned to his wife.

"Ye Gods," he grunted, doesn't she marry him and him out of my easy chair?"

"Now, now, dad," she remin him, "you were young once yo self, you know."

"Yes, I do know," he mutte "but you didn't keep me wa that long. After all, the only t she has to decide is whether loves him or not."

"Well," she replied, "she's to wait a while to see if she ca any better."

Big Ten Envious of South's Gate

By GRANTLAND RICE

POSSIBLY the sordid mention of money and money distribution shouldn't come into the matter of college football. But when over a million dollars is being passed around it might be worthy of mention.

Oddly enough, the richest bowl of the lot—the Rose Bowl—doesn't help to make any team rich. Around $500,000 was collected at the gate but California and Ohio State only got a comparatively small cut of this amount. Part of it went to the Rose Bowl association but the major part went to the various universities making up the Pacific Coast conference and the Big Ten. So the Rose Bowl with its huge crowd and its immense gate can't be named as a clean-up for any single entry.

Grantland Rice

"The Big Ten really went into the Rose Bowl agreement," a leading member of the organization tells me, "to keep the south away from these big $100,000 pots. The southern institutions would then use a big part of this money to raid the North for material and build up stronger clubs. So we decided to cut off this source of revenue, without building up any single Big Ten team, or any small group of teams."

The South's response to this act was to build large plants for three bowl games that will pay handsome returns. For example, in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, both North Carolina and Rice were expected to take home over $100,000 each. At $4.80 a ticket and a paid admission of 76,000, this was an easy trick.

The Sugar Bowl claims a total of 83,000 with a top price of $8 a seat. This means $415,000, yielding a neat chunk for both teams The Southeastern conference may have some rule of conference distribution, but if so the plan hasn't been widely advertised At the Orange Bowl, the guarantee is around $75,000 for each team.

So the past season the South and the Southwest have North Carolina, Kentucky, LSU, Rice, and Oklahoma raking in the gold, which could permit an even rougher invasion of Big Ten territory.

I haven't any idea what Big Ten teams have as a budget or expense pool in the way of securing talent. Maybe it is largely an alumni matter. But many southern teams have well over $100,000 on tap, I have been informed by various southern coaches and I don't think these pools are there to buy watermelons. One of these coaches told me recently that his university had only $65,000 with which to work. "How can I compete," he asked, "against rivals with $150,000.

It is my idea, however, that all sections are just about the same when it comes to the sanity code. The alumni are upsetting the sanity chart.

Buffalo and Pro Football

If any city belongs in pro football, it is Buffalo. The Buffalo Bills, far from any championship squad, frequently outdrew the Giants and Yankees in New York. They always outdrew the Bulldogs, about 6 to 1.

Buffalo is a hustling city with close to a million souls, plus a civic spirit many other cities lack. It is certain that a league of 13 cities will be a failure. It is still our steadfast belief that there must be two leagues with eight teams in each circuit—a copy of baseball's highly successful plan.

Certainly Buffalo belongs in one of these leagues. Pro football has been so incredibly stupid in the past that it is impossible to forecast any future act. But it is difficult to believe that pro football will continue this stupidity If it does, a flock of owners will again wind up swimming in red ink.

The game has a great chance if handled correctly. This means two leagues of eight clubs each, meeting in a football world series, with exhibition games in between. If the new organization is handled as one league, a few teams will make money but the big majority will lose, just as the big majority have been losing heavily for the past 26 years.

Goodell Basketball Team Should Have Trophy

If the Times had anything to do with it, we would present the Goodell basket ball team with a "good sportsmanship" trophy for their play in the tournament.

Goodell entered the tournament under terrific odds of not winning and came with six boys on the team. In the last quarter they had lost two men by he foul route and finished the game with 4 on the team . . but instead of laying down, they really put on a rally and the crowd went wild, but Corwith their opponent, had too big a lead to overcome.

We admire the spirit of those Goodell boys. If more teams had half their willingness to play the game that Goodell showed, we would see some fine games. Let's give the Goodell boys a big hand!

SEEKS OFFICE AS SHERIFF

MILLARD M. BROOKS of Garner announced Tuesday his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Hancock County Sheriff.

A resident of Hancock County all his life, Brooks has had varied occupational experience, including ten years with the Iowa highway patrol.

He was appointed to the highway partol in September, 1937, after attending the highway patrol training camp. He has worked in the Des Moines and Ft. Dodge districts until June, 1942 when he enlisted in the U. S. Coast Guard.

Upon his return from service he was with the highway patrol for 13 months.

During the time he was a patrolman, Brooks attended and completed three peace officers short courses at the University of Iowa.

For two years subsequently he traveled for the Ford Motor company out of Algona. Then, with J. C. Reed, he built and operated the "Shamrock" restaurant in Garner until he sold out to Reed in February, 1949. Since then he has been employed as a farm machinery salesman for the Urich Implement company of Garner.

Now 38 years old, Brooks moved into this county from Belmond with his parents when he was a year old. The family located in Hayfield, where Millard graduated from high school.

His service in the coast guard included three years and four months, a year of which was on a navy fireboat in the south Pacific. His service years were credited on his highway patrol tenure.

He is a member of the American Legion and of the F.V.W.

Brooks is married and has three boys.

The Friday, February 17th program will be at the Fort Des Moines Hotel as originally planned and will include such speakers as: Chester W. J. Parker, Sir Herbert Broadly, Oscar Heline and Wayne Taylor of E.C.A.

The Saturday main speakers will be Allen Kline, National President of A.F.B.F. and Charles Branannan, secretary of agriculture. The program will start at 1:00 at the KRNT auditorium followed by a panel dicussion on the farm program.

I know, said Mr. Shurts, that a great many Hancock County people will want to hear these great speakers and make plans to be in Des Moines February 17 and 18.

HIGHWAY USERS PROTEST WARTIME FEDERAL AUTOMOTIVE EXCISE TAXES

Des Moines, Iowa, February 8 SPECIAL - Highway users are protesting against the wartime emergency Federal automotive taxes, John Gillespie, Chairman of the Iowa Highway Users Conference said today.

It was pointed out that attention by Congress is being given to federal taxes on luxury items but little or no attention is being given to repeal of he Federal excise taxes on the motor vehicle operator, whose operation in most cases is a simple and sole necessity.

Gillespie pointed out that when you buy a car that costs $1,500 at the factory, you pay 5105 in tax to the Federal Gop. alone. This is a 7 per cent tax. Many people don't realize that they are paying these taxes because they are included in the price of the item one buys.

Likewise, there is a 1½ cent per gallon Federal tax on gasoline; 6 cents a gallon tax on lubricating oil; 5 per cent on trucks, busses, tractors and semi-trailers; 7 per cent tax on motorcycles; 5 cents a pound tax on tires; 9 cents a pound on inner tubes and 5 per cent tax on all parts and accessories.

These emergency Federal taxes cost citizens who use the highways an estimated $1,285,000,000 in 1949. Iowa people paid an estimated total of 26 million of this.

Mr. Gillespie said that Highway User Organizations in Iowa are urging Congress to include consideration of these taxes in their repeal of Federal wartime excise taxes. Highway User groups feel that repeal of these taxes are important if business activity is to be maintained at a high level, Gillespie said.

FOREST CITY WOMAN HAS UNUSUAL BATAM HEN PRODUCER

Quentin Stille, who hauls cream for the Klemme Creamery ran onto an interesting story on his route up near Forest City.

A farm lady, Mrs. Raymond Gamble has some bantam chickens. Last spring in May one of the hens hatched out a brood of some seven chicks. Those seven chicks grew up and in December, just before Christmas, one of those hens from the May hatch, came out with a brood of six chicks of her own. That might be some kind of speed record or other in the poultry world.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

The things a man leaves behind him are usually inherited by those who were close to him. Too many persons have inherited things on our highways that had none of the real or sentimental value the term implies.

Take the case of the motorist who one morning a few winters ago was following a semi-trailer truck approaching an Iowa town. The highway was covered with a thin layer of fresh snow. Beneath the snow were ice patches left by a previous storm.

Though the driver was almost home, he decided to pass the truck. He went around leaving behind him a trail of snow that temporarily blinded the truck driver.

Then our motorist decided - sensibly, but much too late - that he was driving too fast for road conditions. He took his foot off the gas and his car slowed down abruptly.

The big semi came on from behind through the snow cloud. The driver could not see that car ahead and slowed down so suddenly until he was almost on top of it. He had to hit the air brakes sharply on that snow and ice.

That was enough to jack-knife the truck. The trailer slid across the left side of the highway and an approaching bus hit it head-on. The engine of the bus was driven back even with the front axel.

The driver who had created the accident situation was untouched by the violent crash. Those who had been close to him on the highway inherited the tragedy of his mistake. He left behind him one man who lost both legs, 12 other injured persons and thousands of dollars in property damage.

OFFER SWINE PRODUCER MASTER AWARD IN 1950

Iowa farmers who do an especially good job of raising pigs will have a chance to receive recognition in 1950, E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at the Iowa State College, announced this week.

The Master Swine Producers' project in which recognition is given to efficient hog raisers will be continued for its ninth consecutive year.

Quaife says that it's open to any market hog producer in the state who has at least eight sows farrowing this spring. The awards are made on the amount of pork produced per sow, on pigs marketed per litter and on total amount of pork produced. Consistency in being a good hog raiser also is taken into account.

Organizations cooperating to give the Master Swine Producer recognition again this year are the Iowa Swine Producers' Association, Radio Station WHO, and the Extension Service of Iowa State College. Purpose of the project is to improve the feeding and management of hogs throughout the state by locating top-notch producers and citing their operations as examples of what can be done in efficient pork production.

Information on rules and the records needed for the project may be obtained by writing to Quaife or any one of the cooperating organizations.

DON'T SELL SEED WITHOUT TESTING

Must Have Results Of Test On Label In Order To Be Sold Legally

If you are selling farm crop seed in Iowa and want to keep out of trouble, have the seed tested and properly labeled.

That's the advice of E. P. Sylwester, head of the Iowa State College Seed Testing Laboratory. Unlabeled, untested seed which contains over three percent of any kind of weed seed, or seed of any noxious weed, can't be legally sold in Iowa. Selling or offering for sale makes the seller liable if a buyer brings action in the courts.

Trouble Each Year

Farmers selling unlabeled crop seed over the back fence open themselves to legal action and have no recourse if action is brought against them, Sylwester points out. Instances of seed growers getting into trouble because they have not complied with the state seed law are reported each year. The Iowa seed law requires that seed for sale be labeled as to its purity and germination.

Tests made at the Iowa State College Seed Testing Laboratory satisfy the requirements of the law, according to Sylwester, If seed is tested by the laboratory and labeled according to the test results, the seller is protected against court action brought on by a dissatisfied buyer.

Show Germination

Purity tests determine amount of other crop seed and foreign material as well as weed seeds. Germination tests are set up so that the germination percentage means the percentage of seed that will produce strong, healthy plants. Weak sprouts are not counted.

Sylwester urges seed growers to send in samples for testing now to avoid delays in getting back results and to avoid the rush just prior to seeding time. The laboratory now is handling samples as they come in and growers are getting back results about 2½ weeks after the sample is sent. That is about as fast as ressults can be obtained because germination tests alone require from 7 to 10 days.

Alcohol Added To Gasoline Ends Moisture Troubles

Adding alcohol to gasoline may solve the problem of water and ice in car and tractor fue' systems, according to information received this week from Dale Hull, extension agricultura' engineer at Iowa State College

Low temperatures cause water condensation in fuel tanks. This may mean trouble in starting and operation either as water or ice.

One way to get relief from moisture is to add 1 quart of wood or denatured alcohol to a tank of fuel. The alcohol will pick up the moisture, which then will be mixed with the gasoline in such proportions as to be burned by the engine without difficulty.

Then, as insurance, add a quart every second week while cold weather continues.

NEW LIBERTY-ELL FIRE TRUCK ARRIVES IN KLEMME WEDNESDAY

The new fire truck purchased by the farmers in Liberty and Ell township arrived in Klemme last Wednesday from LuVerne, Minnesota and is now housed in the fire station.

The new fire fighting machine is built on a Dodge truck chassis and is the most modern piece of fire fighting equipment that can be purchased and the entire community is real proud of it. The truck is especially designed to fight rural fires. It is equipped with all the modern devices, aluminum ladders, nonsplashing water tanks, high pressure pumps and hose and everything needed to fight a fire quickly.

The entire outfit can be efficiently manned by three firemen. The Town of Klemme will build a new fire-proof garage for the truck and the Klemme Fire Department will furnish the men to operate the truck for the farmers.

The old fire truck will be taken to LuVerne to be overhauled and repaired and put in first class condition so that Klemme and community will have two trucks if needed in an emergency.

All Relative

"What will happen to a bullet fired directly to the rear from an airplane traveling with the same velocity as the bullet?"

This is a question frequently asked, and is apparently of increasing interest due to the part the airplane played in the last war and the esuing public attention.

The answer is simply that the bullet will, with a certain amount of irregularity due to its spin, drop vertically to the ground from the point at which it leaves the muzzle of the gun. In other words, the plane runs off and leaves the bullet! Sounds impossible, but it's true.

"The first thing which must be made clear," says Dr. C. S Cummings, supervisor of ballistics standardization at Remington Arms company, "is that there is no such thing as 'motion' by itself. Motion must always be relative to some other object. We are so used to using the earth as the object relative to which we consider all motion to take place that we usually lose sight of the fact that other reference points may be adopted in this case.

"Probably the confusion which seems to exist concerning the bullet-plane problem is due almost entirely to this failure to be specific as to the points of reference concerned. As in many other instances, a proper phrasing of the question almost supplies the answer.

"Instead of phrasing the question as we did originally, it should be asked as follows. 'What is the motion, relative to the earth, of a bullet which is fired in a rearward direction from a plane whose forward velocity relative to the earth, is equal to the velocity with which the bullet leaves the gun?'

"To be specific, let us imagine that we are in a plane traveling 800 feet per second due north The bullet is one which, when fired, will leave the gun at a speed of 800 feet per second relative to the gun. Picture now the situation just before the shot is fired The plane, gun and gunner are all moving due north at the speed of 800 feet per second relative to the earth. The gunner pulls the trigger. The bullet starts to move down the gun barrel, that is, changes its position relative to the gun. Since the gun is presumed fixed, relative to the plane, the bullet is not moving north quite as rapidly now as the plane and gun. By the time the bullet reaches the muzzle of the gun, it is traveling with its full velocity of 800 feet per second away from the gun in a direction due south. Relative to an observer on the ground, the velocity of the bullet is zero. Hence, the bullet will drop vertically to the ground from the plane.

"On the other hand," continues Dr. Cummings, "if the bullet were fired from the nose of the plane, it would move 1,600 feet per second due north relative to the plane, since the gun is already traveling 800 feet per second due north and the bullet leaves the gun at 800 feet per second relative to the gun.

"If we assume that the air is stationary relative to the ground, i.e. no wind, then the above discussion is equally applicable to the motion of the bullet relative to the air.

"In other words, depending upon the direction in which the bullet is fired, it will have a velocity of from zero to 1,600 feet per second relative to the air, thus very much complicating the problem of trajectories of bullets fired from rapidly moving aircraft."

Tough Problem

In their efforts to maintain and increase fish, game and other natural resources, the sportsmen's clubs of the nation are dealing with one of the most complicated problems known Wildlife and its soil and atmospheric environment are of an order of difficulty approaching the problems in human life. All are extremely sensitive to conditions around them, and improving conditions is not simple.

It closely resembles the problem faced by a physician and surgeon in trying to cure a patient suffering from an obscure disease. The game manager specialist should be the most important person in the community in any effort toward building up local game supplies.

Duck 'Hospital'

A duck "hospital" has been set up at the Tule Lake wildlife refuge to take care of botulism-poisoned ducks in that area, according to a report by the federal fish and wildlife service. The Tule Lake area, like many others in the West, is especially susceptible to botulism which forms in rotting animal and vegetable matter.

The sick ducks are picked up by a flat-bottom boat powered by ar air thrust motor.

May disabled children get too much attention?

Answer: Yes, writes Dr. Roger G. Barker of the University of Kansas in the Journal of Social Issues. Even the extra care and attention a disabled child must get tends to handicap his emotional development. He is likely to become too dependent on the society of adults and leave it to them to decide what he'll do next instead of planning his play for himself. This leaves him unconsciously frustrated, yet afraid to face new abled child is quite as much a mental problem as a physical one.

KEEPING HEALTHY

ion, Neurosis Cause Tiredness

By Dr. James W. Barton

NE MORNING a neigh- e to my summer cot- sked me to go fishing. why he had come for of his regular fishing He complained that fishing companion eep all day and didn't up in the morning.

eeks later his fishing died of heart disease several infected teeth. nd sleepiness is per- mmonest sign of infec- ere in the body.

al individual who has ained of tiredness and gins to feel tired and the day, an immed- or infection should be ysician and dentists ge to the heart and occurs.

t the individual who he time, in fact has tired? In "Clinical question is asked as for tiredness in one ys been tired, yet in examination reveals iredness.

The answer which follows states that the most important diagnostic method in the case of the tired patient is the asking of three questions: "Have you been more or less tired all your life? Does rest or a night's sleep help your tiredness? Are there any new complaints in the last few months?" This latter question is to rule out any new condition that may have developed, in addition to the chronic tiredness.

Patients believe that their weakness and tiredness is due either to a physical condition or to overwork. "In the great majority of cases it is neither the one nor the other. Tiredness is, next to pain, the most common symptom of neurosis. Work, instead of making fatigue (tiredness) worse, often relieves it."

It is easily understood how an individual, who thinks he has an ailment, when one exists, worries just as much as if a disease were present and what makes him more worried and upset is that he can expect no sympathy from family or friends.

CANASTERS

Peace Looms In Card War

NEW YORK.—Peace, at last, is reported coming to the front in all the squabbling over canasta, the new card game that is sweeping the nation.

Up to this point, people who played this game fought over everything—the rules of play, scoring methods, the origin of the pasttime. The only thing they could agree on was that "canasta" meant, in Spanish, "basket."

But, according to reports, all the chaos and confusion are ending. Sectional interests are going to be sacrificed to the common weal. For there is now a national set of canasta rules.

The last stubborn pockets of resistance are being silenced. The majority has spoken. The move to ban freezing of the deck has been stifled. A canasta bonus will be 500 points instead of 700. Four jokers will be used, not two. Sequences will not be credited, only combinations. You can add a discard to a completed canasta and anyone who says "no" is wrong.

Rules Nationwide

The national set of canasta rules was drawn up at the Regency club in New York and adopted by the "national canasta laws commission" headed by Oswald Jacoby, expert at bridge and other card games. Most of the authorities now abide by the rules, although they don't always agree with every detail.

Ely Culbertson, another contract bridge expert who now has a book out on canasta, echoes the new spirit of compromise:

"It is better, far better, to have one imperfect code of laws than two perfect codes If I had my way, I would make a few minor changes but in the interests of stability I accept the rules as now laid down."

The alternative, Culbertson warns, is a hopeless, endless series of regional differences. He calls them "localisms."

"Localisms almost ruined contract bridge," he says. "They did choke off Oklahoma I have every hope this won't happen to canasta. I don't foresee any changes in the game during 1950 and few thereafter."

"The worst is over," says Jacoby. "The great majority of players abide by the Regency rules. You may say the game is now being standardized."

Culbertson attributes the original confusion to the "excessive nationalism" of the Latin American countries which claimed canasta as their own. All had different rules and each refused to yield.

Confusion Imported

"The confusion was imported to the United States," he adds. "Different groups wanted different scoring systems. This was like devaluating the pound in some countries but not in others. The freezing of the deck was the great American addition. This is the source of the game's excitement. In Uruguay, they don't freeze the deck."

The ranks of the rebels are thinning but at least one is still making his cause heard. He is David Salinas, a lawyer of Laredo, Tex., who is stumping the country for his version of canasta. He happens to have a book out on the subject, too.

Salinas feels there are too many restrictions, too many penalties in the North American version. In Uruguay, he says, people are nicer.

"If you make an improper meld or any other mistake you are forgiven," he says. "The offender merely apologizes and the game goes merrily along."

This Worker Will Keep Job As Long as His Nose Knows

SAN PEDRO, CAL.—As long as Johnny Bumanglag can keep his nose in tip-top shape, he doesn't have to worry about a job.

Naturally, it doesn't take an expert to tell when canneries are working in this harbor town. But persons with sensitive noses are needed to pick bad fish from good fish and prevent canning of spoiled fish.

That's Johnny's job. He's a fish smeller, one of the few employed here. Although science has developed mechanical processes to detect spoiled fish, there's nothing as sure or as quick as a sensitive nose.

The fish pass by Bumanglag on a conveyor belt. He pulls a small section from the stomach of each fish, whiffs it, and passes judgment. If it's O.K., he lets the fish continue to the cooking room. But if he detects anything amiss, the fish is yanked from the conveyor and tossed into a pile to be converted into meal.

Johnny figures he smells 35 to 50 tons of fish a day, working from 14 to 16 hours at a stretch. Averaging 24 fish a minute, he can sniff 23,400 fish in a 16-hour period.

The job has occupational hazards. For example, smellers are plagued by neck muscles which ache from the constant intake of air, averaging one smell every 2½ seconds.

Gospel Goes West

Lesson for Feburary 12, 1950

SO YOU DON'T BELIEVE in foreign missions? Then you can't read the New Testament with any comfort. Every book in it was written either by a missionary, or about missionaries, or to missionaries, or to be used in mission work. Chapters 13 and 14 of Acts tell us about the first organized foreign mission project in the history of the Christian church. It is the story of how the Gospel was taken out of the narrow strip of coastland along the eastern shore of the Mediterranean, where it was born, out into the western world.

Dr. Foreman

The Best They Had

THE FIRST missionary party were not raw untried men. They were Barnabas and Saul, the top leaders of Antioch. These men had done a great work in Antioch; their usefulness there was not at an end by any means. But the church sent them away to win souls elsewhere. It is a mistake to suppose that just anybody will do as a missionary.

Ignorant people who suppose that missionaries are only the "culls" of the church don't know the facts. A few years ago a scientist, Ellsworth Huntington, made a study of the graduates of Yale and Harvard who were successful enough to be written up in "Who's Who in America." He found that missionaries' sons furnished the largest proportion of those successful men.

The reason for this, he believed, is that only in missionary families do you find that both parents, and not just one, have to go through a rigid sifting process. Only the best—mentally, morally, physically—are accepted by the church today as missionaries.

Strategic Centers

SAUL, or Paul, who came rapidly to the front in the missionary team, was all for efficiency. He never did a thing the hard way if an easier way would save his energy. So we find him heading for the great centers of population.

In the synagogues he would find the most religious people in the city, people who already believed in the One God and who took seriously the Law and the Prophets.

Barnabas and Saul stuck to cities for another reason also. Not that they despised small-town folk, but they knew that cities are where the crowds are. For every dozen people they could reach in a village, there were hundreds to be reached in the cities. So today, mission work has generally concentrated first in the most heavily settled regions.

The Follow-Up

SAUL AND BARNABAS also set the example for later generations in their use of the "follow-up." They did not suppose that simply converting people was enough. There had to be second visits. Some churches Paul visited as many as five times. They would appoint officers in every church. They knew that organized religion is more likely to last than disorganized religion.

They were not fly-by-night evangelists, leaving behind them only an ebbing wave of emotional excitement. Every rose grower knows that it is better to put a 10-cent rose in a 50-cent hole than to put a 50-cent rose into a 10-cent hole.

So Paul did not stick little seedlings of new Christians into barren ground at random; he took pains to see that they were solidly planted in good rose-beds.

The Holy Spirit

THERE IS ANOTHER, and most important, way in which this first missionary effort has set the pace for all since: From beginning to end, they depended on the Holy Spirit. It was the Spirit who first suggested the idea; it was the Spirit who gave the power, and furnished the guidance. Not that the Spirit was or is a substitute for human effort.

But to this very day, if you want to find persons who know about the Holy Spirit at first hand, who know what it means to depend on the Spirit and to be used by Him, then get acquainted with your church's missionaries.

What to so many of us churchgoers is only a name, to them is the deepest reality by which they live.

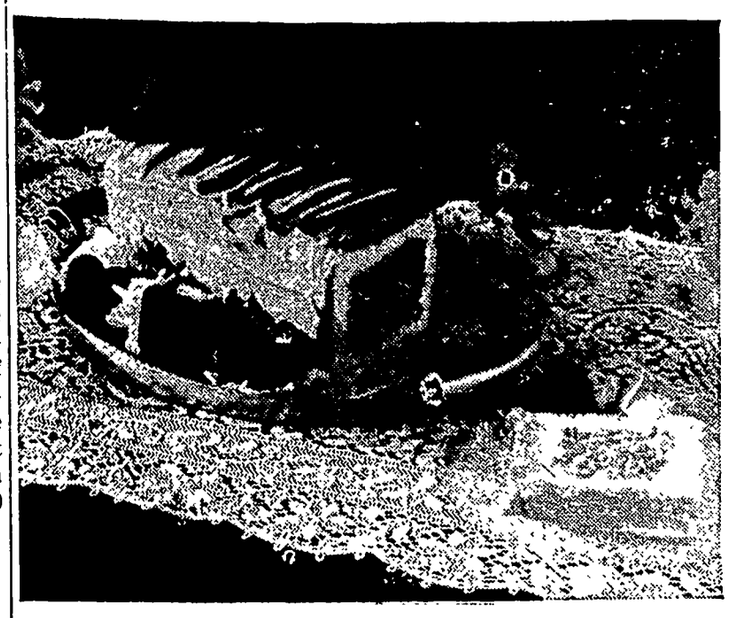
YOUR BEST VALENTINE----

PARTY FARE SUPREME



Be it main dish, dessert, or fruit beverage, give it a valentine touch and join in the family's celebration. There's nothing like a heart-warming home valentine party to make the winter days seem shorter.

Valentine's Day is a party day. For the youngsters it means exchanging lots of "Be Mine" valentines, heart-shaped candies and sugared cookies.

Even Dad, though he may say it's "just for kids," enjoys a fancy, heart-shaped cake on Valentine's Day.

So February 14, like Christmas, Easter and all the other holidays, can be a special occasion for the family or friends, says Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist, Iowa State College.

It's an especially good time for a children's party, and Valentine's Day offers no end of ideas for refreshments and decorations.

Bright Place Mats

For place mats, cut out large hearts from red construction paper. That means no laundering to do afterwards and no careful watching to make sure the children don't spill. Don't worry about making the place mats fancy. Younsters enjoy simple, colorful decorations just as much.

Valentine-shaped cookies with a child's name on each one make fine place cards as well as good eating.

Your color scheme—pink, red and white—is pretty much set by custom. Using these colors, among the foods you might serve to children are pink ice cream, red gelatine or a plain or sponge heart-shaped cake, and pink lemonade to drink.

Any pink fruit mixed with milk will be a colorful, as well as healthful, addition to your children's valentine party. With eggs so low in cost, pink eggnog is another beverage idea.

If you don't have a heart-shaped cake pan, cut out a heart shape from a square cake. Use a cardboard pattern. Save the cake scraps for an ice-box pudding.

Top the cake with red coconut. To color the coconut, put it in a jar, add red food coloring diluted with a teaspoon of water and shake. Or decorate your cake with white, swirling 7-minute frosting made colorful with heartshaped candies or small valentines cut from red canberry sauce.

Valentine Cake

On Cupid's day, there's one cake that will take the heart of both young and old. It's a Cranberry Heart Cake with crimson red cranberry filling, and petal pink puffs of frosting or wripped cream. Here's the recipe for making the cake.

Turn on oven and set at 365 degrees F.

Line two 8-inch layer cake pans or an 8 x 12 x 2 inch loaf pan with waxed paper that is cut to fit the bottoms. Grease lightly.

Sift together 2 and two-thirds C cake flour; 3 t tartrate baking powder or 2½ t double acting baking powder; ½ t salt. Put in bowl ½ C soft butter or fat. Add gradually, mixing together until light and fluffy, 1½ C sugar. Add gradually and beat in vigorously 2 well-beaten eggs, ½ t vanilla. Add flour mixture to creamed mixture alternately (in thirds) with 1 C milk.

Use a total of 225 to 250 strokes to mix in flour and milk. Use a round and round motion to stir batter. Pour into prepared pans and bake on oven shelf slightly above center for 20 to 25 minutes.

Our Blind Spots

Jim nearly had an accident last week. The streets were slippery, but that wasn't the trouble.

Ed swung right out in front of Jim in a line of traffic, and there was nearly a crash.

Now Ed isn't a reckless driver. He just happened to be thinking of something else. And when he gets day-dreaming, he sort of gets a "blind spot" to what's going on around him.

Lots of us have "blind spots" like that, without realizing it. And it's mighty important to be on guard against them.

We've got to be sure we're respecting the rights of the other fellow . . . or some day he may forget to respect ours. If Jim likes classical music, while Ed likes the movies, that's their right of choice. If Jim prefers a pleasant glass of beer, while Ed enjoys coffee, that's their right, too.

Those sound like little things, but such "blind spots" can add up to big things if we don't watch them.

FOR WELL-FED CHICKENS HAVE PLENTY OF WATER

Only well watered chickens can be well fed, says W. R. Whitfield, extension poultryman at Iowa State College.

Birds drink 2 pounds of water for every pound of grain they eat, he explains.

He thinks automatic watering systems do the best job of keeping good supply of water before Iowa poultry flocks.

Lack of water at any time during the day is often responsible for low egg production in flocks where water is hand-carried, Whitfield says. He points out that a flock of 100 hens will drink 8 to 10 gallons of water per day when they are in heavy production.

Chickens may drink as often as every 15 minutes if water is handy, but they lengthen this interval considerably when water isn't easy to get to.

In narrow poultry houses, Whitfield recommends a drinking vessel every 15 feet throughout the length of the house.

About 44 percent of Iowa's poultry raisers now have automatic water systems. The poultry man points out automatic waterers also remove a large part of the chore that goes with poultry raising.

He says they are comparatively easy to install. A float control of a cutoff that works when the drinking vessel contains a certain amount of water will keep flocks well supplied.

Water troughs with grills to keep the birds out the of the water work best. They provide maximum drinking space, and the high grill prevents the chickens from wasting as much water as they do with a round-type fountain.

DEER

Little Linda Mortenson, of near Jewell, recently asked her parents if Santa Claus was coming back again . The question was inspired by the arrival of a herd of 10 deer at the Mortenson farm. After a brief "visit" the deer went their way, leaving the parents of Linda to explain that Santa Claus won't be back until next Christmas.

Iroquois 'Constitution' Is Traced to Its Source

An essentially new version of the "epic of the Iroquois" has been traced to its source by a Smithsonian institution ethnologist.

It is a 300-page manuscript which apparently has served for years as a sort of Indian Magna Charta on the Grand River reservation of the Iroquois in Ontario. It came as a temporary loan to the Library of the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia, was microfilmed, and since has been returned to its Indian owners.

Written in Indian-English in the bold style of a scribe, the manuscript tells the story of the legendary Iroquois lawgiver and prophet Degandawida, founder of the celebrated League of the Five Nations, which was one of the great original political systems of the world. It also describes, in considerable detail, the wanderings of the lawgiver's disciple Ayonwhathah, better known as Hiawatha, who was the chief missionary of the remarkable religion of peace and brotherhood which arose in the North American forests before the coming of the whites.

The manuscript consists largely of the texts of the chants which accompanied the Iroquois ceremonials and the "constitution" of the League. This was perhaps the first constitutional government to arise in the New World. Its 30 articles, sometimes extended to 72, defined the rights of the original five tribes and of the tribes which later were admitted to the confederation. Few modern Americans realize how the workings of the league affected the thinking of the framers of our own Constitution.

'Real McCoy' Originated In Corner Saloon Brawl

According to research experts, the expression "the real McCoy" is believed to have come to our language because of a brawl in a saloon.

The story goes that a gentleman by the name of McCoy one afternoon was minding his own business drinking a schooner of beer in a corner saloon. He was approached by a drunk who, in a loud tone and for no reason at all, said very unkind things about McCoy and his ancestry.

Friends of the drunk tried to drag him away, explaining that this was the great McCoy—one of the top prize fighters of the day. The drunk snorted his disbelief and continued his abusive tactics until McCoy turned and flattened the heckler with one punch.

When the heckler came to, he shook his head, rubbed his jaw and said, "You're right; he's the real McCoy."

This story was repeated over and over until the expression "the real McCoy" came to mean "genuine."

Artificial Respiration

When breathing has ceased in any human being because of electrical shock, asphyxiation, or submersion in water, immediate effort should be made to start breathing again. The time element here is of utmost importance and artificial respiration should be commenced immediately without losing time in transporting the patient from one place to another, or in waiting for a physician. Many lives have been saved by the prompt efforts of those who knew how to apply the Schaeffer prone-pressure method of resuscitation, and many lives have been lost because no one present had that knowledge. Boy scouts and girl scouts are now generally trained in that method of resuscitation and their services may be called upon when there is no adult present who is familiar with that method.

Origin of "Hubba-Hubba"

"Hubba - hubba," the popular "wolf call" of World War II, started in much the same manner as the word "barbarian." The ancient Greeks felt that foreigners spoke in nonsense syllables, and foreign languages sounded like a series of "ba-ba" sounds to them. So, they called the foreigners "barbarians." Illustrating that human nature doesn't change much over the centuries, the American soldiers in the Pacific considered foreign languages just so much "hubbub." Basing his choice on this word G.I. Joe picked up two nonsense syllables of his own to describe a pretty native girl—"hubba-hubba."

Famed Bridge Painted

For someone who wants to do something big, the humorous injunction to "go paint an elephant" doesn't compare with a challenge to "go paint a bridge"—especially if the span should be the magnificent George Washington bridge that links New York and New Jersey. Considering that it takes 30 men around four years to paint the six million square feet of this mile-long structure—and that its span of 3,500 feet is the longest in the world next to the Golden Gate Bridge at San Francisco—it's no mean task which has recently been completed. Painters who worked on the job were selected for their ability to work at high altitudes and then carefully trained by the bridge management.

1. Permanent Crib. (Basic Structure.)
2. Complete 40 Ft. Farmer's Friend Cup Elevator.
3. Easy-to-Follow Erecting Instructions.
4. List of Local Materials Needed.
5. Instructions on How to Secure Government Loan.

With the government's long-range program of parity price support and sealing loans, "grain storage on the farm" is becoming more and more important to profitable farming. Farmer's Friend brings you a lifetime Elevator, Crib and Granary that solves your grain handling and storage problem for only a few cents a bushel more than temporary makeshifts... and liquidates its cost in approximately 5 years with storage earnings.

Based on the past 2 years, you can easily figure how one of these permanent buildings will pay for itself in a few years. This is true with corn, soy beans, wheat, oats or other crops. In many cases, because of lack of storage, "free grain" that can't be sealed may sell for 30¢ to 50¢ per bushel below government loan price.

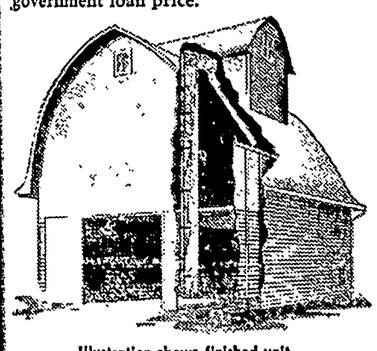

Illustration shows finished unit.

A 40-FT. FARMER'S FRIEND CUP ELEVATOR—The complete unit is designed around this dependable elevator for perfect handling and storage of crops... To reduce grain handling and labor costs for the lifetime of the crib.

FERTILE INDIANS FIND PICKING SHAMROCKS BAD BUSINESS

The Fertile Indians invaded the local field Tuesday evening with the brilliant thought of picking themselves a nice bouquet of Shamrocks. They ran themselves into a nice patch of poison ivy instead as the Shamrocks reversed the procedure and have some nice Indian scalps hanging on the wall.

The Klemme Rockettes gave the Fertile lassies a rough time and just about upset the old apple cart on them as Fertile managed to squeeze out of a tight spot and win the game with one point, 41-40.

A Good Ball Game

The Shamrock-Indian game was a good game all the way, was a good clean game with very little fouling and both teams displayed some fine floor work and good shooting. It could have been anybody's ball game.

The Shamrocks took no chances. The center tip-off netted them a field goal and they quickly hit for some more buckets to give themselves a fat 10-point lead, 16-6 over the Indians to end the first quarter. The Shamrocks never trailed and kept their lead throughout. They were ahead 25-18 at the half and 33-27 at the end of the third.

Fertile was within 3 points of the Shamrocks at one time but the locals immediately widened the margin and with 5 minutes left to play the Shamrocks had a 15 point lead. The game ended with the Shamrocks in front 50-42, which they figured was plenty to avenge an earlier season defeat.

The first-grade room at Eldora received two new pupils recently, Helde and Haedo Asu, who are 14 and 11 years of age. The children are Estonians, recently arrived from Europe and neither speaks English. As they qualify, the two pupils will be advanced individually until they reach the proper class for their ages.

St. Bernard Dogs Resume Old Keg-Toting Chores

PARIS, FRANCE—After a lapse of nearly 50 years, the dogs of the hospice of St. Bernard in the Alpine snows are to be equipped again with the little kegs of liquor to wear in their rescue work. The St. Bernard dogs, famous in story and cartoon the world over, were relieved of the liquor barrels in 1900.

In the last year, so many persons have been lost in the Alps that the monks of the hospice have decided to restore the liquor. It is not brandy, and never was, but marc, a cheap distillation of grape skins or a sweet beverage distilled by the monks from herbs grown in the valley below their monastery.

Sometime ago a party of 30 Italians seeking to enter France, where they hoped to find employment, were stranded in the St. Bernard pass and were rescued by the dogs. When two monks carrying flasks to revive the half frozen travelers arrived later, some of the party were in bad condition.

The dogs used now are not of the St. Bernard breed, but a cross breed, part bulldog, part terrier and part Pyrenees shepherd.

Elizabeth, Philip to Get Hunting Lodge in Africa

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh will get a $5,600 hunting lodge in darkest Africa.

A government announcement said Kenya colony in British East Africa had decided to build the lodge as a wedding present for the couple who have been married some two years.

The lodge will stand on the lower slopes of 17,040-foot Mount Kenya. There is good fishing in the river just beyond the front yard and big game is not far away.

The building project is no "hurry-up" job. The London announcement said there was no indication at present of any projected visit of her royal highness to Kenya.

Art Is Long but Life Is Short, Full of Lumps and Black Eyes

By BILLY ROSE

"If you can come quick," my Aunt Frieda said over the phone, "come quick. Your Uncle Charlie is in trouble."

Half an hour later I was in the flat on the lower East Side where Frieda has been keeping house and hearth for my uncle for the past 30 years.

"What's up?" I asked.

"Charlie is hiding in Brooklyn with his brother," said Frieda.

"Hiding from what?"

"From Herman Schloomp, the butcher, who is telling how he is going to knock out your uncle's eye."

"What did Charlie do to Schloomp?"

"What didn't he do!" said Frieda. "But better I should tell it to you in sequins. . . .

"So happens last summer your uncle and me, we are one afternoon taking the air on Delancey Street. On the sidewalk, like always, is all kinds chalk-marks and scratch-ups from children, which your uncle has been seeing all his life.

Billy Rose

"'Is very touching,' says Charlie. 'Is here on the sidewalks the soul of the East Side trying for some kind expression. Some day should be a real paintner to draw up the neighborhood.'"

"WELL, LIKE YOU KNOW, with Charlie to think is to do something crazy. The next night he is going to the settlement house and joining a art class. And in the room is sitting a fat girl in a kimona on a platform, and the scholars are holding out their thumbs and squinting with the eyes.

"'Draw exactly what you see,' says the teacher.

"Half hour later, when the teacher comes for a to-look-see what your uncle has done, he begins making noises like busting. On Charlie's drawing board is a picture of a thumbnail sitting on top a big pencil.

"'This is a class in drawing, not manicuring,' says the teacher. 'Take your business someplace else.'

"When Charlie comes home mad, I tell him, 'Let sleeping dogs stay sleeping.' But you know your uncle—next day he is going uptown to the Museum from Modern Art, and when he gets back he is all agoggle.

"'Frieda,' he says, 'to be a paintner, a man don't need perspective. What he needs is guitars. A picture can be a piece fruit or a chair with one leg—makes no difference so long as in the corner is a guitar.'

"So, for the next week he is painting guitars—Moon Over Stanton Street with Guitars, Baby on Pushcart with Guitars, and even a picture, Guitar with Guitars.

"THEN, A FEW WEEKS later as the crow flies, is opening in the Metropolitan for 50 cents a show from a Frenchman — Van Glick, Van Goldberg, something—"

"Van Gogh?" I suggested.

"What's the difference so long as you're healthy," said Aunt Frieda. "When Charlie is coming from the museum he is saying, 'Today I find out something absolutely hair-racing. This Van Cook is all his life selling one picture for few measly dollars, but now when he's dead and can't eat, his paintings is worth 30 million. No wonder he is cutting off his ear and they got to drag him to a asylum.'

"Your uncle mills and mulls for a few days and then he is making a decision. 'Frieda,' he says, 'it doesn't pay a man should be like this Van Cook. Supposing I sell, maybe, one picture for five dollars during my lifetime entire, and then when I'm dead and gone the pictures is worth 30 million. By the time I am dead and gone, you will be likewise dead and gone, so who gets the 30 million? My brother. Why should that loafer get my 30 million? Let him go out and make his own 30 million. From now on, I am strictly a old-stylish realist and making pictures with cash value like Grandma Moses. Which I am signing Grandma Moishe.'

"Next day Charlie is going to see our butcher. 'I'm going to paint a muriel on your wall,' he says, 'a whole panorama all kinds succulent meats. Will be good for the cash register.'

"Schloomp says, 'What I got to lose,' and so Charlie paints him a muriel which he calls by name, the Spirit of Meat. When it is finished, Schloomp is saying when he sees your uncle he knocks out his eye."

"Was it that bad?" I asked.

"A man could go bankrupt from such a picture," said my Aunt Frieda. "In Herman's strictly Kosher store, your uncle is painting on the wall nice cuts Rinderbrust, chuck steaks, first-class plucked chickens. But in the middle is the Spirit of Meat holding a 15-pound—you should excuse the expression—Virginia ham."

For One Who Is Tired

DEAR child, God does not say today, "Be strong."
He knows your strength is spent; He knows how long
The road has been, how weary you have grown,
For He who walked the earthly roads alone,
Each bogging lowland, and each rugged hill,
Can understand, and so He says, "Be still,
And know that I am God." The hour is late,
And you must rest awhile, and you must wait
Until life's empty reservoirs fill up
As slow rain fills an empty upturned cup.

Hold up your cup, dear child, for God to fill,
He only asks today that you be still.

Who'll Make Diamond Headlines?

By GRANTLAND RICE

HUDDLING with a group of veteran ballplayers and managers we finally steered the argument in the general direction of headline makers for 1950.

Who would they be? From the American league you start right off with Ted Williams, Joe DiMaggio, Tommy Henrich and such pitchers as Mel Parnell, Ellis Kinder, Joe Page and possibly Rae Scarborough, Bob Lemon and Ed Garcia.

Grantland Rice

In the national league you had Jackie Robinson, Stan Musial, Ralph Kiner, Enos Slaughter and such pitchers as Don Newcombe, Preacher Roe, Ken Heintzleman, Howie Pollet and one or two others.

"There won't be much change among the top bunch," Frank Frisch said. "Ted Williams still has a few big seasons left. DiMaggio has one or two after 18 years in baseball. In the National league, Jackie Robinson will be hard to head off again. He has shown Musial and Slaughter, who are not getting any younger (who is?), that both will have to have even bigger years to beat him. Some of the fellows out front last season may not repeat. Kinder at 35 or 36 is no kid. Neither is DiMaggio. For that matter Robinson will be 31 in January."

"The younger fellow with the best chance is Don Newcombe," another manager cut in. "This big fellow has had less than a year in big league baseball and yet they are all talking about him. If we are going to have any 30-game winner in 1950 it will be Newcombe. He'll be the best pitcher in either league."

What about Mel Parnell? Parnell is only 27 years old. He is with the best run-making club in either league.

"I'll bet you 10 dollars Parnell finishes above Newcombe," an American leaguer cut in. "I mean that he'll win more ball games." The two shook hands.

"How can you tell?" another said. "Kell has a lifetime big-league average of .297. Ted Williams has one around .354. Yet Kell outhit Williams last year.

"He won't come within 25 points of Williams this year," a Red Sox entry cut in. That led to another 10-dollar bet.

"And I'd like to bet that Stan Musial gets more M.V.P. votes than Jackie Robinson," some outsider said. "Robinson is good but he isn't any Stan Musial." There are not many Stan Musials lying around loose. After all, Musial is only 29 and he has known only eight big-league seasons. That's little more than a warm-up. Or at least it should be.

Other small bets made: Kiner to beat the 50-home-run mark again; Williams to hit over .350; Robinson not to lead the N.L. at bat; Newcombe to win 25 games. Two bets on Joe DiMaggio to play in 120 games.

Dyer and the Cardinals

Eddie Dyer, the crack blocking back from Rice some years ago, feels that his Cardinals are about due again. Eddie won the pennant his first year out in 1946. He finished second to the Dodgers in 1947. He ran second in 1948 and last year he was beaten on the final day by a lone game.

"We'll have at least four .300 hitters next season," Eddie said. "Who are they? Musial, Slaughter, Jones and Schoendienst. It's true that Jones and Schoendienst hit only .299 and .297 respectively last year but they'll pick up those extra points sure. They are really .310 hitters. As a matter of fact we have another good kid who should hit better than .300. His name is Ed Kazak, our third baseman. Ed hit .304 in 92 games last year before he was hurt. This would give us three infielders and two outfielders in the .300 or better class."

"What's the doubtful side of your outfit?" I asked.

"The answer is nearly always the same," he said. "Pitching Last season we landed Lanier and Martin well into the season."

For Double Platoon

"A year ago I was dead against the double platoon," Wes Fesler of Ohio State said. "Since then I have changed completely. I'm all for it. I believe those coaches who dislike it haven't given it a fair trial. I know I hadn't when I was against it. Since then I've discovered most of the players want it. That's a big reason for liking it. I know it produces faster, better football. I also know it gives many more students a chance to play football."

INA'S REVENGE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"I'M GOING TO GET EVEN with that man if it's the last thing I do!" Ina Carlton's eyes were blazing, cheeks flushed.

"I presume," said Marlene Dale, "that you refer to Boylston's famous bachelor, Phil Bacon?"

"You know very well whom I mean! You were there. You saw him snub me! Right in front of all those other girls! Oh, I can still see their hideous, laughing faces!"

Marlene sat down on the edge of the divan. "You're a little idiot to act this way, Ina. And you're not playing fair with Phil. He didn't snub you. He merely treated you as he does all the other girls in town. We all like him, we'd all like to know him better. The fact that he's trying to stay a bachelor until he gets his real estate business built up, doesn't justify your anger."

3-Minute Fiction

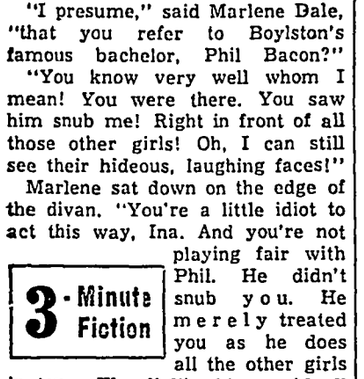
This from her best friend, was small consolation. Ina began to scheme for revenge. Secretly she loved Phil Bacon.

An idea came abruptly. It took form slowly, but by the time she had reached home, she had formed a definite plan.

Early the next morning Ina entered the office of Phil Bacon & Co. Phil, good looking, friendly, greeted his visitor warmly, though with a certain reserve.

"Good morning," said Ina brightly. "I'm Ina Carlton. Perhaps you remember that we were introduced two days ago at Mrs. Whipple's party.

"Indeed I do remember, Miss Carlton. Is there anything I can do?"



"Don't you see? Father doesn't own this place! . . . It was a mean, silly trick, I'm sorry."

His business-like tones were discouraging. "Yes, there is. You see, we have a piece of property—an old house—out on the Mendon road. Last night father decided to dispose of it and asked me to drop in and see you about the matter."

Phil's eyes shone. "Miss Carlton, I believe I can dispose of that property for you within two days. A man was in here yesterday and asked about it. Do you think $10,000 would suit your father?"

"I think," said Ina, "that would be fine."

Phil smiled. "I'll get in touch with my prospect today." And, he looked deep into her eyes, "I'm mighty grateful to you for this opportunity, Miss Carlton."

"I'm glad," said Ina, "of the opportunity to help you."

INA LEFT the real estate office and went in search of Marlene. She felt the need of congenial company. But Marlene wasn't home, and so she strolled out on the Mendon road. Her thoughts were disturbed.

The seriousness of what she had done, now that her anger had cooled, began to develop in her mind. After all, she thought, it was only her own selfishness that prompted the idea.

By the time she had reached the old colonial house, Ina had about made up her mind to swallow her pride and confess to Phil.

She shuddered at the thought, and then suddenly her heart ceased beating. Phil's roadster was in the drive. Moreover, there was Phil himself talking with a stranger in the front yard.

Ina ran up the drive. Phil turned at sound of her cry, left his companion and came to meet her.

"Phil—Mr. Bacon! Don't let him buy! Don't! You'll be arrested." She was breathless. "I wanted to get revenge because you snubbed me, so I—I—"

Phil stared at her. "I don't believe I understand."

"Don't you see! Father doesn't own this place! I merely said he did so you'd sell it and get in trouble with the real owner. It was a mean, silly trick. I'm sorry."

Phil's features relaxed. "Why, I'm glad you told me, Ina—Miss Carlton. And about that snubbing, too. I really wanted to know you better; but—well, it didn't seem possible that such a pretty girl would be interested in me."

"But—but—then you haven't sold the house?"

"Well, not exactly. I bought it myself a week ago. That man you see up there is my architect. I was explaining to him some changes I wanted made."

EDGAR BERGEN has what many a man longs for, an outlet for a side of his character that otherwise would be buried. Bergen isn't funny; Charlie McCarthy, Mortimer Snerd and the other Bergen-created characters are. Bergen is polite; Charlie is the rudest person on the air. People look forward to tuning in on CBS Sunday nights to hear him say the kind of things they'd like to say. Bergen is kind; the Bergen Foundation lends money to student nurses, without interest, to finish their training. He also maintains 12 scholarships in speech at Northwestern university — the school where he couldn't finish because he had not quite enough money.

BERGEN AND McCARTHY

For a scene in Goldwyn's "Our Very Own" Ann Blyth was to be licked on the cheek by Rags, a shaggy canine. He did fine until it came time to kiss Ann; heartily disliking the makeup she wore, he refused to have anything to do with her. Trainer Jack Pack solved the problem by rubbing her cheek with a chunk of beef, and Rags' performance was enthusiastic.

Lou Steele was just visiting the Paramount studio when Hal Wallis spotted him. Steele was given a screen test which resulted in a supporting role in "September Affair"; Wallis saw the rushes and put him into "The Furies."

Demand for Insulin Increasing, Supply Dropping

A growing demand for insulin hrough which more than one million Americans with diabetes are able to lead useful lives, is reported by American Meat institute.

The institute recommends to its members that every effort be made to save all pancreatic glands from cattle and hogs in view of the increase in the number of diabetics.

"We have been informed," the institute said, "that the insulin supply is not keeping pace with the growing demand. The meat-packing industry processes livestock not for meat alone, and insulin is one of the many vitally important medicines derived from meat-packing operations. The expected reduction in livestock numbers in the months ahead create the necessity for every possible gland to be saved.

"We are developing directions for saving and shipping glands under all conditions of operations and volume of production."

A SOUTHERN PECULIARITY

I have mentioned before a speech peculiarity heard principally in the South—that of saying "pin" for pen, "cint" for cent, "din" for den. I am unable to account for this short "i" sound, although it may be a survival from the Elizabethan speech of Colonial days brought from Southern England to Virginia and spreading thence to other southern states.

At any rate, Southerners should watch their tendency to say, "minny min have sint for pinny pincils and tin cint fountain pins."

I know from first-hand observation that the habit is an extremely hard one to break. But it can be done, and the consequent improvement in speech will make the effort more than worthwhile.

A. A friend insists on calling a sick person an "in-VAL-id." How can I convince her that she is wrong?—Mrs. O.

Answer: Take her gently by the hand and lead her to the nearest dictionary where she will find that there are two "invalids." The first is an adjective, meaning "not valid; void; null," pronounced: in-VAL-id. The second is a noun, meaning "a person disabled by a chronic illness," pronounced: IN-vuh-lid.

Coach Pat Patterson And The Klemme Shamrocks

SHAMROCKS ENTER STATE SECTIONALS WITH FINE RECORD

Coach "Pat" Patterson

When the Klemme high school hamrocks enter the State Sec- onal next Monday night at elmond, they are going into ay with one of the finest Class team records in North Iowa.

For the season's play the hamrocks have won to date of their 21 games and on top that copped the Hancock ounty Championship by, de- ating Britt, a class A team in e finals. They have knocked f Belmond, No. 2 Class A team the North Iowa Conference, d tipped Ventura, high power- B Cerro Gordo County hampion, and for good mea- re handed the Fertile Indians, nother top B team a sound ubbing. The Shamrocks had st to Kanawha, Fertile and elmond, but have also won om those teams. The defeats ffered by the Shamrocks were ring the time "Red" Schmidt as absent from the squad be- use of illness.

Since Coach Patterson took er in Klemme his Shamrocks ve won 111 gamts and lost ly 30, which is better than erage considering that the hamrocks have played against lot of Class A teams.

Patterson's regular performers e "Red" Schmidt at center, e of the best rebounders in rth Iowa; Merlin Brinkman d Cal Josten, both red hot rers; Dick Kaduce and Nor- e Pearson, guards and who n both sink buckets when the fense needs drawing out.

To round out this squad Pat- rson has some other good ys that can take over when eded: Harley Barz, Luverne hmidt, Lyle Goll, Larry Stille, lly Waddingham, Roger How- d and Gene Albers, who have seen service on the squad.

The Shamrocks this year are e of the smallest teams in rth Iowa. They will average ly about 5-9 and with "Red" hmidt the tallest of the five 5-10½. But what they lack height they make up in speed d smart playing and ball ndling.

Klemme Meets Meservey

The Class B sectional at Bel- nd will be practically decid- on the first night, Monday, en Klemme meets Meservey 8:45 p. m. Both of these top- tch B teams are in the lower cket, with Kanawha domi- ting the top bracket.

Meservey has a tall, powerful m with a fine record. The ms averages 6-1 in height, ich will be handicap for the amrocks to overcome. They o have a couple of hot-shots ich might give the Sham- ks a rough time.

The winner of the Klemme- servey game should have easy ling to win the Sectional and on to the District.

GETTING HOLD OF FARM ISN'T EASY

Takes Outside Help For Most Young Men In Midwest Who Want Land

Young men who want to own farms face a tough proposition, unless they can get outside help.

So says a circular published jointly by the agricultural experiment stations of 13 midwestern states, including Iowa. Called "Can You Own Your Farm?" the circular discusses farm ownership in the Midwest.

For several reasons, farm ownership is more difficult to achieve than ever. Competition for farms is strong, both among farmers and between farmers and city people who buy land for investment.

Price High Now

Land prices are high—in the Midwest about double the prices of 1935-39—and farms are larger. Also, livestock, machinery and other equipment are costly. So it now requires a great deal of capital to start farming, if the farmer is to succeed.

The trend in the Midwest is toward fewer and larger farms. A good many landowners have several farms, and there is some tendency to combine farms into large ownership units. Six percent of the landlords own nearly a fifth of all the land held by landlords.

"Ladder" Little Used

The "agricultural ladder" has changed. It is next to impossible to start out as a hired man or renter and finally own a farm. Only two owners out of every hundred climbed the ladder from farm laborer to tenant to owner without the help of gifts, inheritance or nonfarm work. More than two out of five farm owners received family help in buying land.

Getting in with landowner on a share basis may be one way to get together some money with which to buy land. Another way is to work off the farm in industry, business or in a salaried job.

Obituary Of Emma Stille

OBITUARY OF MRS EMMA STILLE, 79

Funeral services for Emma Stille, 79, a former resident of Liberty Township, were held at DeRidder Louisiana, on Sunday afternoon, January 22, 1950, from the home of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Paul Stille, with the Rev. Jones, pastor of the Baptist Church in charge.

Mrs. Emma Stille was born March 23, 1870 at Lansing, Iowa, the eldest of six children born to her parents, Rev. William Koerner and wife Mary Venneholt Koerner.

Her father, Rev. Wm. Koerner was one of the early "Circuit Riders" for the German Methodist Church. He brought German Methodism to Hancock County, when in 1871, he called at the farm home of Sebastian Ell and organized a small group of interested neighbors into a Methodist Church Society.

Later Rev. Koerner was sent here as a pastor and during his pastorate in 1885 the Liberty Church was built.

During her childhood, Emma Stille attended school wherever the family happened to live, and then took her teacher's training at a Methodist College in Galena, Illinois. She taught school one year in Galena, and then came to Hancock County, where she taught for several years.

In November 1891, Emma Koerner and Herman Stille were married at the home of the bride's parents at Flood Creek, Iowa, the service being read by her father. They commenced housekeeping on the farm north from the Liberty Church, and for 29 years Herman and Emma Stille were a part of Liberty Township life. They were helpful in church activities, and were always interested in our schools, and were an influence for good in the community and loved by everyone who knew them.

They were the parents of two sons, Herbert and Paul.

In 1920, the Herman Stille family moved to Colorado, and after a few years they returned to the town of Klemme, Iowa in retirement.

In 1927, Mrs. Stille lost her eyesight and was blind for 23 years. In 1943 Mr. and Mrs. Stille moved to DeRidder, La., to make their home with their son, Paul and family.

Two years later, in 1945, Mrs. Stille suffered a stroke which left her more or less helpless. The year 1949 brought a double tragedy to the Stille home when her son Paul died in February, and her husband died in April.

And now, on January 20th, 1950, Emma also received her final summons, having reached the age of 79 years, 9 months and 28 days.

She leaves to mourn her passing: one son Herbert, Polsum, Montana; one sister, Mrs. J. E. Stille, Klemme; one brother, Albert Koerner, Klemme.

Four grand children: Mrs. Erwin Priebe, Goodell; Mrs. Virginia Shirley, DeRidder, La., Miriam and Barbara Stille, DeRidder, La.

Two great grandchildren: Eleanor Priebe, Goodell and Terry Shirley, DeRidder, La.

The following from this community attended the funeral services at DeRidder.: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Koerner, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Koerner and family and Mrs. Elmer Beier.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

After he retired from the farm he lived for years in the small town that had always been his trading place." On Sunday afternoons he would drive his perfectly-kept automobile into the country to visit his sons or farmer neighbor.

He liked to tell about how he came to Iowa as a young man from a Dutch community in Pennsylvania and how, in those times, an occasional Indian would come to his smoke house begging meat.

People liked to listen to him because "he still talked sort of dutchy." And they knew how to touch his pride. "How's the car running," they would ask. Then the old man would smile and shake his head. "He's a good one," he would say. "He's a good one."

Early one spring he was taken to the hospital and then returned home because he was incurably ill. It was a wasting disease but one that did not immediately confine him to bed.

Every afternoon during the early stages of the sickness he would dress in his best suit, put on a hat and top coat and go out to the garage to see "him" the car.

He would sit there in the drivers seat, holding the steering wheel, probably telling the car that "he was a good one." He made his last visit to see "him" about two weeks before he died.

Perhaps this story - though true in every detail - is not quite in keeping with what has appeared previously in this column. It illustrates no dramatic point or tragic error. It is simply the story of one man who found the automobile so worthy of his respect that he never learned the arrogant, domineering attitude that is the mark of some drivers today.

THOSE COMICS; HO, HO, HO FOR A GOOD TIME READ THE FUNNY PAGE

Everybody reads the comics.

That's what our readers tell us. If you don't have this weekly habit we're suggesting that you give it a try.

Turn to the inside pages of The Klemme Times. There's a sprightly family of comic characters awaiting you. After you've read the local news and ads get acquainted with them.

The Klemme Times funny page is crowded with the kind of fanciful people and happenings that are really funny. The tendency of many comic strips to be more tragic than comic is not present in our nationally syndicated funny page.

For the characters who cavort and amble through the funny page panels are kindly, very often muddled friends at whom you can laugh without fear of their resenting it.

There is "Grandma," the old lady who is a young lady; "Virgil," who is any boy and every boy; 'Sunnyside," in which Mr. Dee just barely manages to keep his drugstore going and keep out of a straitjacket at the same time; "The Old Gafer," possessing a magnificent beard of a thousand uses.

Also, you'll find "Bouford," the friendly introvert with the violent family; "Mutt and Jeff," eternal veterans of good, rous- ing slapstick; "Jitter," the mis- chievous monkey, and "Wylde and Wooley," two industrious boobs as western as 'They went 'hataway."

In addition to these eight top quality strips, three are two nationally famous cartoon panels—"Bobby Sox" by Marty Links and "Cross Town "by Roland Coe. They're as good as you'll find anywhere.

To say that The Klemme Times comic page in honest-to- Times comic page is honest-to- Turn to it inside the paper now. You can't beat it for laughs.

Marjorie Lau Bride Of Floyd Veldhouse Jan. 26

Miss Marjorie Lau

THE GIRL MARRIED AT THE LITTLE BROWN CHURCH

Miss Marjorie Lau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Lau of Klemme, became the bride of Floyd Veldhouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Veldhouse of Clarion, Thursday, January 26, 1950.

The wedding ceremony was performed at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon at the Methodist Church in the Vale near Nashua, Iowa, with the Reverend F. L. Hanscomb, pastor of the church, officiating.

Nuptial music was provided by Mrs. Hanscomb at the organ. She also sang a short prayer at the cloese of the ceremony. The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Velhouse of Humbolt, brother and sister-in-law of the groom.

The bride wore a red suit with black accessories. Her corsage was of yellow and white carnations. The bridesmaid wore a dark green dress and her corsage was a pink and white carnations.

The bride is a graduate of the Klemme high school, while the groom graduated from the Kanawha high school. After a short wedding trip through southern Iowa the couple has returned to Kanawha where they will make their home.

CHOOSE SOYBEANS FITTED TO STATE

Recommended Lincoln, Hawkeye Adams, Earlyana and Chief For 1950

Soybean varieties "tailer-made" by plant specialists to fit various sections of Iowa will be the best for growers in 1950, says C. R. Weber, State College agronomist.

Adams, Hawkeye, Lincoln, Earlyana and Chief are varieties recommended in Iowa for the coming year.

Adams was released to Iowa growers in 1949. It grows well in central and southern Iowa, but it is not generally recommended for the northern three tiers of counties in the state. Weber reports that Adams will yield slightly higher than Lincoln, an older variety recommended for the same area.

Adams Seed Limited

Adams ripens a few days earlier than Lincoln, is the same height and has a little higher oil content. It is being recommended to share the Lincoln acreage for the coming year. Seed of Adams for 1950 must be obtained from your county seed distribution committee.

The Lincoln variety is the most extensively grown in the Midwest. It has gained recognition because of its high yield, ability to stand until combined and because of its high oil content.

Weber recommends Hawkeye soybeans for northern and central Iowa. He says they yield 4 to 6 bushels more per acre than the Richland variety which was once popular in the same area. Hawkeye is 4 inches taller and has a higher oil content than Richland.

Hawkeye For Richland

Hawkeye should replace all the Richland acreage and may be used for delayed planting in southern Iowa. When Hawkeye is grown in extreme northern Iowa, Weber advises planting a little early — May 10-20.

He says that the Earlyana variety is best suited for planting on soils of medium fertility in northeastern and Northern Iowa.

The Chief soybean is well adapted to less fertile soils in the southern tier of Iowa counties.

KLEMME SHAMROCKS ALL THUMBS IN DOWNING ROWAN HIGH HERE

Rowan high school gave the Shamrocks a rough time here Tuesday night in the season's worst game for the locals. Red Schmidt was injured in the warm-up practice and held down the bench with the exception of about 3 minutes in the last quarter when he went into the game to help pull it out of the fire.

The Shamrocks got off to a good start, 9-1 to end the first quarter but from there on out they simply could not click. Rowan breezed through with 17 points in the second quarter, while the Shamrocks hit for 10 to hold a slim 1 point lead, 19-18 at the half.

The Shamrocks missed plenty of buckets but managed to rack up 11 points in the third against 7 for Rowan and stayed ahead 30-25 at the end of the third quarter. The last quarter was a bit better but the Shamrocks were threatened as Rowan pulled up with 3 points at one time. Klemme made 13 while Rowan sank 12 points, but the Shamrocks were ahead 43-37 as the buzzzer sounded to end the agony.

The Shamrocks had 29 chances at the free throw lane and made only 7, which is the season's record for bad shooting. Rowan had 16 chances at the free throw and grabbed off 9 points, not bad. Brinkman and Josten each accounted for 16 Shamrocks points, Kaduce 7. Schmidt and Pearson each 2.

Rockettes Win

The Klemme Rockettes after being behind 11-14 in the first quarter, commanded a lead which they held throughout a close game with the Rowan girls. The Rockettes were ahead 27-23 at the half, 36-34 at the end of the third and 50-44 to win the ball game. Greiman sank 27 and Schaefer 14 to lead the Rockette attack.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

No Wasted Time

One of the hardest things an avid hunter or fisherman has to face is the lack of activity engendered by bad weather or improper stream conditions.

After the turn of the year, when January crawls by with maddening slowness, February is speculated upon only dimly and March and April seem so far away as to be entirely visionary, the sportsman is hard put to find anything to interest him or anything to occupy his time

It seems an interminable wait between monthly issues of the outdoor magazine. Tackle and equipment manufacturers haven't issued their alluring new catalogues yet and it seems there is absolutely nothing to do.

But there is, for here is the opportunity and the time—if properly employed — when the sportsman can take steps that will insure him many happier hours afield or on the stream.

These periods present the opportunity, too, to clean that gun which has been neglected.

During the long evenings there is time to get rods and reels in order and to check lines, go over the tackle box and fly book to determine the need for new lures, and, in general, plan the coming season's campaign.

These periods present the opportunity, too, to clean that gun which has been neglected, to chart future trips afield as the open seasons wane and to get special shooting equipment in shape for early spring forays after "varmints."

It is an old adage that acquiring new equipment is a major factor in the enjoyment a man gets from hunting and fishing—and there is an almost equally great satisfaction in keeping that equipment in good operating condition.

To the sportsman, there are few exasperations that can match that of a reel breaking down on a fishing trip, a ferrule loosing on a fly rod, or a casting line breaking just when a good fish is well-hooked. These are some of the things that can be prevented by the sportsman who gainfully occupies the dead-of-winter months by seeing that his equipment is maintained in the best possible conditions.

Game laws are made to protect your property. Respect and obey them as every good citizen does.

Firebug Facts

Here are some pointers for the inveterate "firebug" who isn't happy unless he can start a forest fire somewhere:

Before going into the woods, he should notify the nearest forest ranger of the address of his next of kin in case he gets trapped in his own fire.

He should tell millions of duck hunters to stay home and shoot at cans and bottles, for waterfowl won't nest and breed in foodless, fire-scarred mudholes.

He should tell the fishermen, too, that he is doing his best to shrivel their bass streams to dust.

He should notify all citizens hoping to have new homes soon that he is burning up their lumber supply, so they might as well be prepared to wait awhile longer.

He should tell resort owners to seek some other business, as he's intent upon destroying their's by burning up the woods and forests that attract the vacationers.

And, last, he should make a will, bequeathing to posterity and his own children, blackened hillsides, disemboweled farmlands, devastating floods and a wildlife blackout.

These recommendations come from one who has had long experience with the "firebug" type of outdoorsman. They were written by Richard H. D. Boerker, retired Missouri forester.

Lake Trout

Lake trout is the fresh water fish that is most like "deep sea" fish. They have a desire for the deeper waters of the lake and thus taking them has some similarity to the long-line fishing necessitated by those fishing in salt water

There are a few weeks each spring and fall when the lake trout will take surface lures, but the opposite is generally the rule. A salmon spoon is a good lure for lake trout

The old Manassa Mauler is still in fine health. He isn't so old at that. He moves along with a free-swinging stride and usually looks to be in a hurry. He is still refereeing wrestling and boxing matches and keeping busy one way or another. What a harvest a 22-year-old Dempsey could reap today—as much as he wanted to carry away.

Looking Back at Some Bowls

Taking a fairly long look forward, it was Bud Wilkinson's Oklahoma Sooners who proved to be the top of all bowl entries. Oklahoma deserved equal rating with Notre Dame and Army this last fall and crushing L.S.U., 35 to 0, confirmed its high ranking promotion. For after all, L.S.U. had whipped North Carolina, Rice and Tulane, three conference champions.

Oklahoma starts 1950 with 21 straight. But the Sooners lose more than a few stars, including some high grade backs and star linemen, so Wilkinson can hardly expect to keep his 1949 pace.

Just when the West coast is going to break up Midwest domination is anybody's hazy guess. It will be interesting to see whether the Big Ten and the Far West will renew the fading five-year contract on the same basis. It is well known that the Far West wants only the two champions to meet every year. The Big Ten still wants the three-year clause inserted. The contract has another year to run.

One of the original ideas of the Big Ten entry into the bowl list was to prevent the South from cleaning up at the Rose Bowl year after year. This idea failed to work on New Year's day when North Carolina, L.S.U., Rice and Kentucky all took away large bags packed with gold. North Carolina carried home over $120,000. Ohio State and California got little money comparatively.

The Giants of 1950

Being a smart baseball man, Leo Durocher is indulging himself in no idle dreams about his pitching selection for the next world series. Not with the Dodgers, Cardinals, Phillies and Braves barring the road.

"We've lost a little of our punch," Leo says, "but after all, the Giants were not so hot when they were breaking all past home run records. We'll have a much stronger defense."

Weather

Old Proverb Half-Right

NEW YORK.—Don't sell the old-time weather proverbs short, for it has been found they are 56.9 per cent true—a batting average almost as good as that of the scientific forecasters.

This was reported by Dr. Vaden W. Miles of Wayne university, Detroit, to the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He said a jury of three qualified teachers judged 333 different proverbs. Of 153 dealing with weather phenomena or changes, 56.9 per cent were true according to scientific principles.

So you could probably use them with reasonable accuracy to predict the weather, he said.

But proverbs dealing with aches and pains, or with long-range seasonal forecasts, don't have scientific merit, Dr. Miles said.

Crystal Ball Failure In Forecasting Blaze Which It Originated

CINCINNATI, OHIO.—A bargain $7.50 crystal ball—"possessed of true clairvoyance"—which he had bought in 1933 failed to foreshadow a mystic $100 fire which it caused in the apartment of the man who purchased it, Garrett Jacobs.

The origin of the fire was shrouded in mystery, puzzling firemen, police and the occupants for more than an hour before Jacobs recalled purchasing the ball from a medium 17 years ago.

While Jacobs was away at his sign-painting shop, his wife, Ada, industriously polished windows in the apartment. Behind her, an overstuffed davenport burst into flames.

Mrs. Jacobs, attacking the burning couch with her bare hands, lifted an object from the divan and placed it across the room. She was surprised to see burns on her hands. She notified her husband and he called the fire department.

Marshal Dan Vogel and his firemen extinguished the blaze, gave first aid to Mrs. Jacobs and then began questioning her. The fire marshal, a reasonable man, suspected a smouldering cigarette. Did Mrs. Vogel smoke? The answer was no. Had she enterained visitors earlier in the afternoon? No.

The marshal looked carefully at the couch, bathed in bright sunshine. No electric wires near by, plenty of ventilation in the room.

Meantime, Jacobs had dashed home. He related that he had left home at 11 a. m. without having smoked in that particular room. Marshal Vogel looked skeptical.

Somewhat discouraged, but knowing the cause of many davenport fires, the marshal left the apartment and told his boys to go home.

While the marshal was downstairs giving orders, Jacobs was doing some investigation on his own hook, mainly interrogating his wife.

"Tell me the truth!" demanded Mr. Jacobs. "Did you smoke? Did you have anyone in here?"

"You know better than that," replied Mrs. Jacobs.

"What was on the davenport?"

"The only thing on it was that old crystal ball," Mrs. Jacobs said.

Her spouse, looking around the room, saw his crystal ball. "It was red hot and smudged black," Mr. Jacobs said later.

And that was the answer, said Marshal Vogel. Concentration of the sun's rays through the crystal ball.

New Chemical Discovery Cleans Metal With One Dip

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—The Batelle Institute here has announced a new chemical that will polish metal with one dip.

The research center said any metal product, no matter how intricately carved or designed, would achieve a mirror-like luster a few minutes after being immersed in the chemical.

In practice, the report said, it has been found that chemical polishing may eliminate from one to five production steps in the finishing of a metallic product. This means a reduction of as much as 50 per cent in finishing costs.

Metals successfully chemically polished include brass, copper, nickel-silver, monel, nickel and aluminum. The action is a true polishing process—not a deposited coating of a different metal.

Used by a luggage lock manufacturer, the process saved five buffing operations in finishing locks and hasps—a saving of $65 for each 1,000 locks and hasps.

Chemical polishing baths are mixtures of acids, including phosphoric, nitric and acetic acids. They operate at from room temperature to 200 degrees fahrenheit.

Reds Reported Seizing Men To Work in Uranium Shafts

BERLIN.—According to two west German newspapers, the Russians have conscripted 150,000 men for work in the Saxon uranium mines, and explosions within the shaft are taking a toll of almost 1,000 casualties each month.

These reports were published by the official publication of the Socialist party and an American-licensed Berlin newspaper.

Fight for Freedom

Lesson for February 19, 1950.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS of problems with living things. One is the kind of problem caused by its growing too fast; the other is the problem caused by not growing fast enough. The early church had mostly the first kind of problem. At any rate it was taking in a lot of members whom the older Christians found strange. At first all Christians had been Jews; no one thought of anything else. But in Antioch, as we have seen, and even more as the church spread westward around the edge of the Mediterranean, the Christian churches were filling up with non-Jewish members, just as they are today.

Dr. Foreman

It is no secret that in the Masonic order there are 33 degrees. It is not possible for a new member to be taken right into the 33rd degree the first night. Everybody has to go through the lower degrees which are called the Blue Lodge. Now many persons in that early church thought of the Jewish faith as a sort of Christian Blue Lodge.

All the very earliest Christians had been members of that lodge; why shouldn't every one else be the same? So when Paul and Barnabas came back from that historic missionary tour of Cyprus and points north, telling about the large number of new Christians, these old-style Christians shook their heads.

Paul was by-passing the Blue Lodge; he was taking in members who had not gone through the proper preliminaries, the first degrees.

What Makes a Man A Christian?

PAUL KNEW a real Christian when he saw one. So did Barnabas. And the two of them knew, right down in their souls, that they had seen real conversions, genuine cases of persons coming out of pagan darkness into Christian light, without being Jews at all, even for five seconds.

The vital question was simply this: What makes a Christian? The old-style Christians, who had been Jews themselves and still were, for all their Christian faith, said: Unless you are circumcized and keep all the laws of Moses, you cannot be saved—you cannot even begin to be a Christian. Paul and Barnabas—not alone, but as spokesman for many others in the church—said: You are saved by faith.

The Jerusalem Christians said: Yes, you are saved by faith, AND by keeping the law of Moses. Paul said: you are saved by faith, period.

How They Settled It

THE WAY that problem was settled is a model for all Christian churches with problems on their hands. First of all, the argument was brought out into the open; it was not a whispering campaign. Second, it was settled after giving both sides plenty of opportunity for full discussion in public. Third, it was settled not informally but by a church council, a group of representative leaders, not by a simple majority vote of all church members indiscriminately. Fourth, it was settled (as the reader of Acts 15 may see) by appeals to fact and to Scripture.

Finally, once the leaders had made up their minds, the church at large accepted their decision promptly, without further bickering. This has been the pattern for the Christian church ever since, though alas! it has not always been followed.

There would have been fewer church splits if the example of the early church had been more seriously taken.

Faith and Obedience

ESSENTIALLY, that first great church council decided on the side of Paul and Barnabas. But they did not throw the Old Testament overboard. The moral law was as good as it ever was. But the council showed, once and for all, the true relations between Christian faith and obedience to the law of God.

There is just one doorway to the Father's house, the doorway of faith. We do not have to keep the law of Moses, or any set of laws, first. We are saved BY obedience.

We are not saved FROM obedience. But we are saved FOR obedience. A Christian's obedience to God is not a way of earning God's good-will. It is a grateful response to God's grace. And that makes all the diffeernce in the world.

Diesel Replacements

The U. S. department of labor points out that the current and the most important technological change in railroad operation, the replacement of steam locomotives by Diesel-electric engines, tends to curtail railroad employment. Change in motive power reduced the amount of work for skilled shopworkers, particularly boilermakers.

FIFTH AND SIXTH GRADE NEWS

The fifth and sixth grade enjoyed a skating party at Garner Thursday evening. Thirty boys and girls went along. The mothers and dads drove cars and everyone had a wonderful time.

The sixth grade health class made a large poster. All the vitamins and protein foods are pictured on their poster.

A committee of fifth grade girls made and decorated our valentine box.

The sixth grade have completed their first two units of Iowa History and they find it a very interesting subject.

JUNIOR HI NEWS

Well, everyone in the eighth grade can now, or should be able to tell anyone anything about history that they might want to know. In our review of the book we are learning the presidents of the first to the thirty first. And we are learning all the important dates in history.

The seventh grade health class is studying about the vitamins and calories the body should have. They are learning what kinds of foods should be included in each meal and how much they need.

Thursday everyone was satisfied when Dean Burgess came in with the movie projector and screen. We saw the movie "Working On Air" which anyone interested in airplanes would enjoy.

The motto for this week is: "Any job looks easy to do when someone else is doing it."

Four Commanders Seek Unity

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Top officials of the four major veterans organizations join hands to demonstrate unity on a program of rehabilitation for veterans. Left to right, David M. Brown, national commander, Disabled American Veterans; Harold Russell, national commander, AMVETS; George N. Craig, national commander, American Legion Clyde A. Lewis, commander in chief, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The road back from the infamous Bataan death march is a long one but James R. Hartman of Stratford, Conn., despite his 100 per cent disability, has covered most of the ground.

James Hartman

Medical authorities tell Hartman that he will not recover from the effects of his Japanese imprisonment for another 10 years with the possibilities that his condition might even worsen.

However, that has been no barrier to an active mind and a successful career as a free lance writer, volunteer charity worker and Commander of the Disabled American Veterans Chapter in Stratford.

Because of his ability to cope with serious handicaps caused by World War II service and become self-sustaining, the DAV has selected Hartman as "The Hero of the Month."

The selection is part of a national program to honor each month a seriously disabled veteran who has successfully rehabilitated himself.

In addition to the ravages of malnutrition, disease, intolerable living conditions and mistreatment, Hartman suffered a broken back during his imprisonment. He must wear a full length back brace.

The former Infantryman has written a book titled "Laugh, Tojo, Laugh", and he, himself, laughs off his disabilities.

Is the disabled veteran a good bet as an employee?

"Look at me," muses Hartman. "I have malaria, a broken spine, shrapnel wounds plus a rare bone disease with a 100 per cent disability, yet Raybestos Manufacturing Company hired me for an important news writing job for their plant paper."

Hartman began his military service before World War II and most of which was in the Philippines.

He served in China and Asia and was stationed at Clark Field in the Philippines when war began. He was in the retreat to Bataan, the death march and numerous Japanese prison camps.

His most treasured possessions are personal letters from General "Hap" Arnold and President Truman, both delivered on his wedding day in 1945.

As Commander of the Charles K. Merritt Chapter No. 20 of the Disabled American Veterans, Hartman has devoted many hours to furthering the cause of the war disabled veteran. He is also active in his local Red Cross.

Short Trip

Mrs. Verle Ralston, German wife of an American soldier, visited her parents-in-law at Mount Vernon recently. Her trip from Berlin took only a day and a half. Corporal Ralston will be back in the states soon.

QUITE A DAY

January 16 was quite a day for the Gerald Siegler family at Schaller. Mrs. Siegler gave birth to a son, another son Ernest ran his arm into the washing machine wringer and Mr. Siegler mashed a finger between two pieces of iron at his shop, all but losing his finger. Otherwise, it was a quiet day.

FIRST FOR YOUR MENUS—

EGGS--ANY DAY AND EVERY DAY

Spanish eggs are just one of the easy-to-make main dishes to vary your list of egg recipes. You're including more than the usual egg-a-day in your menus just now, if you're price and nutrition wise.

There's no better food investment on the market right now than a dozen eggs. Current prices are averaging around 37 cents, some 8 cents less than the 1949 national average support price and the lowest in several years.

The record egg production is expected to keep on right through the spring according to nutritionists at Iowa State College. Estimates are that everybody can have at least 425 eggs, scrambled, boiled, poached or dried, in the coming year.

Take a good look through your recipe file, the nutritionists suggest. Feature eggs often as a main dish for dinner, and to give "staying quality" to breakfast and lunch. Of course you'll use every chance to tuck egg into desserts, sauces and casserole dishes, too, to take advantage of the food value they have to offer.

Top-Quality Protein

Even when they're not so low-priced eggs are a thrifty buy, say the nutritionists. They give us the very best quality protein. In addition, two to three eggs offer a third of your daily vitamin A requirement, as much or more iron than a serving of lean meat or chicken, and rich supplies of thiamin and riboflavin.

There's nothing more appetizing than an omelet topped off with creamed peas or Spanish sauce, hot deviled eggs in tangy cheese sauce, or that old favorite, eggs a la goldenrod. And of course the family never gets tired of French toast served with jelly, of egg salad sandwiches or scrambled eggs with bacon.

But for a change, try baking eggs, the nutritionists suggest. Put a tablespoon of cream in the bottom of a custard cup, drop in an egg, and bake in a slow oven. Or bake eggs in a nest of spinach, hamburger, corned beef hash or mashed potato. They're good baked in shells made by hollowing out dinner rolls.

Spanish Eggs

To make Spanish eggs, first brown diced onion and green pepper in about 6 tablespoons of bacon fat. Add 6 cups cooked rice, three-quarters cup tomato juice, 1½ cups diced American cheese and seasoning. Heat this mixture thoroughly. Then remove from the heat, and make hollows on top of the rice. Break an egg into each one and bake at about 350 degrees F. for 30 to 35 minutes.

Curried eggs on rice can be baked and served in individual casseroles. Top off the casseroles with grated cheese, and just before serving put them in the boiler tray for a quick exposure to broiler heat.

You may like omelets fluffy, or you may like them French style or flat. For fluffy omelet, beat the egg yolks and whites separately. The omelet will have a smoother consistency if you heat the milk before mixing it with the eggs. For a flat omelet, pour the egg and milk mixing into a hot greased omelet pan and cook it slowly. When it's brown on the bottom roll it in the pan like a jelly roll and turn onto a hot platter.

Don't forget about the main dish custards. There are recipes which include beef broth, carrots, corn or cheese.

A corn-egg pudding is a good budget right now, as corn is one of the most plentiful canned foods on grocers' shelves.

POISONING SPARROWS PROTECTS FARM GRAIN

Now is the time to rid your farm of sparrows which eat valuable grain and leave unsightly droppings in barns and machine sheds, says Robert Moorman, txtension zoologist at Iowa State College.

The common English sparrows found on most farms are not protected by law. Moorman thinks they should be controlled where they are a definite nuisance. He advocates strychnine poisoning as the most effective method of control.

They're Hungry

During the late winter or early spring, the food supply for the sparrows is short, says Moorman. That's why it is the most effective season for poisoning. After prebaiting for a period of 4 to 7 days, most of the sparrows on your farm will be killed by poisoned bait.

Here's the recommended procedure for preparing the poisoned bait: Dissolve one-eighth oz. sulfate of strychnine in a cup of boiling water. Then pour the strychnine over 1 quart of thoroughly dried oats or wheat in a half-gallon fruit jar. Cap the jar and shake at intervals until all the liquid has been absorbed by the grain. The grain should then be dried before using.

Holds Dangers

Because strychnine is extremely poisonous to all birds and animals, every precaution should be taken to keep it away from farm poultry, pet pigeons and songbirds, warns Moorman. Excess bait as well as sparrows killed by the poison should be picked up and buried.

Ideal sites suggested by Moorman for the prebaiting and poisoning operations are unused poultry runs. enclosed barnyards or flat roofs of chicken houses, or any place not used by birds other than sparrows for a period of several months to a year.

GOOD MILKHOUSE HELPS IMPROVE MILK QUALITY

The better your milkhouse, the better your chances of a high dairy income in the years ahead, says C. H. Van Vlack, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

You need a grade A milkhouse if you want to produce Grade A milk, he observes, explaining that clean milk and a well arranged milkhouse go hand in hand.

Size, location, interior arrangement and equipment are all big factors in planning a milkhouse, Van Vlack says. He thinks it's a good idea to consult your local milk inspector about rules and regulations before you draw any definite plans.

Most milk regulations require that the milk be taken from the barn right after milking. Separating, cooling and storage of milk must be done in a special room outside the milking barn. That means the milkroom might be in a separate room within the barn or it might be in another building, Van Vlack points out.

He says the main thing is to locate it so that it's handy but still properly isolated from the stable and the barnyard. If the milkhouse is attached to the barn, an open or ventilated passageway with a self-closing door should separate it from the stable.

Walls and ceilings of the milkhouse must be smooth, and waterproof, suitable for painting and easy to clean. The floor needs to be made of smooth concrete with 4-inch drain in the floor.

Van Vlack advises having the milkhouse well lighted, with screened windows which can be opened if necessary. Doors should be planned to open to the outside to help keep out flies.

Recommended equipment includes a divided wash sink, a source of heat for hot water and room heating, and a cooling tank large enough for both morning and evening milk.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Washington's Birthday

Bill Higgins, our school principal, got to arguing about Washington's birthday with Cousin Ed.

"You can have your Cherry Tree story," said Ed. "But, to me the great Washington story is Valley Forge.

"It was the turning point that led to winning American freedom; our right to govern ourselves, think for ourselves, live our own lives."

I agree with Ed. And I hope we never let go those rights which our forefathers fought to win — the right to live our own lives, believe our own beliefs, whether in politics, the work we choose or what we eat, or drink, or wear.

Ed works in a garage, drinks coffee, loves to go hunting. I work in an office, enjoy a temperate glass of beer after a day's work, and my hobby is fishing. That's fine with both of us, for each has the right to his own choice.

It's the American way. We fought hard for it. Let's hold onto it, equally hard.

DISCUSS 4-H CAMPING CENTER PROJECT

"Hawkeye state 4-H club members can build their own camping center," Carol Legg historian of the Iowa girls' 4-H organization, told Hancock County 4-H club officers at a district meeting held to discuss the project at Garner, February 9th.

She explained the proposed Iowa 4-H Camp Center and plans that have been laid for developing the 200-400 acre camping and training area. "If we club members raise the money to acquire the camp site," she explained, "other groups and individuals interested in the development of the club program in Iowa will help with further improvements."

Taking part in the discussion were Carol Meyers, Corwith, president; Mary Ann Blumer, Klemme, vice president; Rachel Brown, Garner, secretary; Darlene Nelson, Garner, historian; Mrs. Dale Newell, Garner, Co. chairman; Lyle Goll, Klemme vice president; Clarence Brcka, Britt, reported; Aaron Stromer, Garner, co. chairman.

The camp will be centrally located in the state, the Hancock county representatives were told, will serve as a camping area for 300 members at a time, will be an important link in expanding the Iowa 4-H club camping program and will serve as a top-notch leader training area.

Margaret Johnson, 4-H member from Minnebago County, gave talk on camping to representatives of the 5 counties attending.

First step in camping center movement is to raise $5.00 or more per club throughout the state to be used in acquiring land for the center. This money will be avaible by May 1 so that the camp site can be announced at the annual boys' and girls' convention in June.

A suggestion that our 4-H clubs set up lunch counters at farm sales etc. to raise the money to make their contributions, was made by Aaron Stromer, the boys co. comm. chairman.

Aaron Stromer of Garner made the first donation in the state outside of 4-H clubs, contribution was $50.00.

TIME TO BE GETTING BROODER READY

It's time to start thinking about chick brooders, says Paul Henderson, county extension director.

Of the three types of brooders commonly used, gas or oil, electric, and coal, the electric offers the least labor. Reason is that it is not necessary to make special trips to the brooder house to check temperature and fire. Also, there is not fuel to haul or ashes to clean.

Chief disadvantages of the electric brooder is that it does not keep down humidty as well as other types, or maintain satisfactory brooding temperature in severely cold weather. However, the Iowa State College poultry department says there is indication that the humidity helps feather chicks earlier, but litter should not become too damp.

Advantage of the other types of brooders mainly is in keeping down humidity and assuring heat in extreme weather, Henderson points out. Also fuel costs are not as high, and there is more assurance of a constant supply. Some folks don't like to gamble with electric power being cut off.

Regardless of the type brooder used, it is wise to start it a day or two ahead of chick delivery. This will allow time to check thermostats for proper adjustment (check with an accurate thermometer), and get rid of any odors from new paint or accumulated dust which may be harmful to chicks.

Temperatures should be 90 to 95 degrees at edge of hover and 2 inches above the litter. Temperature should be reduced 5 degrees each week until it gets down to 70.

Henderson points out that checking temperature of an electric brooder is rather hard to do accurately because electrcity produces a different type of heat than does conventional brooders. Best thing to do is watch chicks. If they go in close, there is too little heat, and if they stay at the outer edge of the house, the heat is too great. Poultrymen at Iowa State College recommend 10 to 12 square inches per chick inside the hover.

Fish Ranches Held Soon to Be Common As Cattle Ranches

MIAMI BEACH.—If many experts are correct, it won't be long now until fish ranches will be as common as cattle ranches.

Dr. Harold Vogtborg, president of the Southwest Research Institute in San Antonio and Houston, tells of experiments in herding and fencing fish.

The day is fast approaching, he says, when there wil be huge shallow- water fish ranches with the "fish ranchers" devoting their efforts to scientific breeding and harvesting of fish.

"Fish are intelligent," he reports. "Sometimes I think they are more intelligent than some humans. They have eating habits that most resemble the hog's.

"Like the hog, they like corn and eat great quantitites of spinach. A fish's favorite meat is hamburger."

He said many experiments were being made in cross-breeding and artificial insemination.

Dr. James Nelson Gowanlock of New Orleans tells of the spectacular growth of the menhaden fish industry. He said the menhaden industry produced 49 per cent of the 56,200 tons of fish oil last year.

Menhaden, which is not edible, is used in the manufacture of poultry feed, paint, fertilizer, and even lipstick, he said.

Women Have Changed Ideas About Decoration Colors

CANTON, OHIO—During the past three years, women have changed. Not psychologically, but certainly in the matter of taste in decoration.

You can't sell the little woman those "tenement tans" anymore when she decides to redecorate her house.

No, indeed! Take it from Spencer Stuart, Chicago promotion manager for a paint firm:

During the period from 1946 to 1949 women's taste in interior decoration changed. Now they want greens and grays for their living-room walls. And they want cheery yellows for their kitchens.

Before the war, Stuart said, the nation's housewives wanted colors like cream, ivory, buff and putty. These are the tints called "tenement tans."

80-Year Old Office 'Boy' Takes Delight in Tasks

NEW YORK, N.Y.—In the course of his 80 years, Orley J. Church has sold everything from groceries to life insurance. He has been a farmer, a soldier, an undertaker's assistant and a shipping clerk. But it wasn't until he reached 71 that he found the job he says he likes best.

Five days a week, Church takes the subway from the furnished room where he lives alone here to the Cushman baking plant in Long Island City. He walks briskly up two flights of stairs, hangs up his hat and coat and assumes his duties as office boy.

Like most businesses, Cushman's general office opens at 9 a.m. Church is always there at 7. Startled company officials first tried to point out he wasn't expected that early, but it didn't do any good. "I enjoy it," the office boy told them.

He joined the baking firm following the death of his wife, Effie, after a prolonged illness which took most of his savings. All his close relatives are dead. A fellow church member helped him get a job with Cushman's and the arrangement turned out to be a happy one.

Upon Church's 80th birthday, a special cake was baked in his honor. The company's top officers invited him to luncheon. They gave him a raise and a letter from Gordon S. Cushman, the firm's president.

"You have always created an atmosphere of enthusiasm and exuberance, which has been extended to all those around you," it said.

Frank Rollent, the office manager, is constantly thwarted by Church in efforts to keep the office boy from running up and down stairs.

Girls Crash Barracks Site In New USO Try-Out Plan

FORT DEVENS, MASS. — The hardest gate for any girl to crash is the entrance to the men's barracks on a military post. For any girl, that is, except a strawberry blond named Alice Lutz and 199 other New England girls.

Alice and company not only crashed the gate—they took it over. The army bowed to femininity and put shades on the windows, a frippery unheard of in male barracks. There was also a large "Off Limits" sign and an equally large MP at the front door.

The girls were some of the new crop of USO hostesses taking over for wartime volunteers who have become "too old" for today's teen age servicemen. And for the first time in either army or USO history, they were getting on the spot training at a military post to see what army life is like and how USO girls should behave, look, talk and dress while on duty.

The army gave it to them straight. In four wooden barracks, unused since wartime, the 200 girls from three New England states slept on GI cots. They made up by distorted tin mirrors and bathed in the tin GI shower.

Brooklyn 'Hermit' Has Changed View; Talks of Romance

NEW YORK.—The Brooklyn hermit, Paul Makushak, who was dug from a 10-year exile in a cramped, filthy hole in the wall almost a year ago, now has a new slant on life.

He is living a normal life, he says, and wants to "forget" the past. He is a husky, 33-year old man who now works in his father's tailor shop.

His ill kempt beard is gone. His tangled hair of the hermit days has been cut and now is kept neatly combed. Neat clothes have replaced the rags he wore.

"I was contented in there," he recalled of his strange exile. "I did not want to come out. I was tired. I was sick of the world. I enjoyed the rest. I did not like the way the world was going. I never had a desire to leave the place, but I would not want to go back. Now I have different ideas."

Makushak was sealed in his cubicle in 1939. It had no running water, no toilet and only a dim light. His mother lowered food to him through a hole and guarded the secret of his existence for years.

He finally was dug out by police after his mother went to a hospital.

Makushak said he is interested now in the outside, in radio, television and store windows filled with articles he had forgotten.

The future?

"I hope to get married," said the onetime hermit of Brooklyn. "I want my own home. I want to live a normal life."

New, or 'Lost' Comet Discovered Near Pisces

PASADENA, CALIF. — The California Institute of Technology has reported that a new, or "lost" comet has been discovered by astronomers at Mount Palomar observatory.

Dr. Albert G. Wilson and his assistant, R. G. Harrison, identified the comet from photographs taken by the giant Schmidt telescope.

At first they believed the heavenly body was a minor planet, but changed their identification when later photographs showed a tail. Distance and size of the comet were not determined, but Dr. Wilson said it is in the constellation of Pisces and was moving away from the sun.

The discovery was made from some of the first photographs taken with the 48-inch Schmidt telescope for the five-year National Geographic society survey of the universe.

Treasure In Old Jewels Found In Mansion Trunk

CHICAGO, ILL.—A treasure in diamonds has been found in the false bottom of a trunk in the cluttered old mansion of a 94-year old widow who died recently.

Ralph Berkowitz, attorney for a trust company, disclosed the find. He said the diamonds weighed about 1,050 carats and were set in 300 pieces of jewelry.

The gems were found stuffed into medicine bottles and match boxes. Some were wrapped in yellow, crumbling newspapers. The value of the treasure had not been determined.

Berkowitz estimated that the diamonds, together with uncrated antiques which filled many rooms of the rambling mansion, would bring the estate of Mrs. Linda Bell Titus Knox to more than $500,000.

Mrs. Knox died in a small third floor room in the mansion in a once prosperous west side neighborhood.

Neighbors knew that Mrs. Knox was wealthy. Her estate included 27 pieces of real estate in the Chicago area. She also owned homes in River Forest and Wilmington, Ill. Not even her lawyers knew of her treasure in diamonds.

In addition to the gems found in the house, 75 pieces of jewelry, about half containing diamonds, were found in her bank vault.

A search of littered desk drawers in her home turned up $5,000 in cash and $22,000 in uncashed checks and money orders. Berkowitz said many of the checks were so old they could not be cashed because of the statute of limitations.

Badge-Flasher Maneuvers Poolhall Out of $5,000

KLAMATH FALLS, ORE.—A distinguished looking gentleman walked into the crowded Klamath billiard hall, flashed a badge at two employees and said: "This is it, boys. Come along with me."

District Attorney Dayton Van Vactor, in reporting the event, said the visitors then picked up the poolhall's strongbox containing $5,000 and led the puzzled employees to the county courthouse.

There he told them to be seated outside Van Vactor's office. He asked Van Vactor for the city attorney and was directed down the corridor. With the strongbox under his arm, he walked out of sight down the hall.

After a time, the two employees left their seats and asked the district attorney for an explanation. Then the search began.

Van Vactor said the man was traced to the airport — but that was the last seen of him and the $5,000.

GET FARROWING HOUSE READY AHEAD OF TIME

Start your 1950 hog raising program out right by getting farrowing houses ready well ahead of time, advises E. L. Quaife, extension animal husbandman at Iowa State College.

He says time spent in repairing and cleaning the houses early will pay dividends at farrowing time. It's an especially wise move for farmers who expect to have all their pigs arrive within a short period of time, or who have farrowing scheduled when spring field work will be going on.

Houses need to be cleaned out thoroughly first, and then scrubbed down with hot water and lye. Quaife recommends 1 can of lye to 15 gallons of water. Pens should be checked to make sure they are in good repair.

Farmers who intend to use pig brooders can get wiring and sources of heat ready so they will be handy when pigs arrive. If pig brooders are to be used, Quaife says make sure they are installed according to safety recommendations.

He points out that portable houses can be towed into place for spring farrowing, and any necessary arrangements to have feed and water supplies handier to the farrowing house area can be taken care of before the pigs arrive.

Patrons Aged 30 'Forgotten' Class Of Movie-Attendants

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—The forgotten man of the movies is the theatre-goer over 30 years of age. That's the contention of Maxwell Shane, producer, who declares the movie industry will boom when it realizes that fact.

"People over 30," he says, "are finding it more comfortable to sit at home in the evening instead of going to a movie scaled to the mentality of a 15-year old." Shane's observation was made after a survey tour of movie-going habits in 24 states.

"These people of 30 are the customers the movies are losing," he said, "and the ones we have to reestablish in the movie-going habit."

The movie industry can stop worrying about customers under 30, Shane believes. He said he's found they'll go to the movies anyway, regardless of what may be playing.

"Children go to the movies no matter what the picture is," he said. "They just go to the pictures. They like the cowboy pictures, of course, but the fact is they'll go to anything that's playing on the Saturday matinee.

"When they're a little older they go to pictures largely as a social function. They go with their gang or their school club. Hollywood can't lose them."

Shane's next classification of movie-goers is the older juvenile-young adult age.

"They're having dates and they go to the movies because it's a relatively inexpensive place to take a girl and a dark place to hold her hand."

But the folks who are making the dents in the box-office returns, he insists, are the ones over 30 who won't go out to a show unless they're sure it's a good one.

"They are more selective," says Shane, "because they go to fewer shows and also because their taste is more mature."

Glamour Girl Makes Sure, Has Job for Real Security

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. — A movie actress, Jacqueline Dalya, who has the big brown eyes of Gene Tierney and the curves of Maria Montez, isn't attempting to rely on glamour alone in making her way in the world. So, she got her a job selling brake linings.

Miss Dalya still plays the sultry, come-hither siren of the movies, but as insurance against the day when nobody wants to see her in pictures, she's sales-manager of a California auto-parts manufacturing company, with a staff of 20 working for her.

"I've pushed sales up 22 per cent," she says, "and I believe I can increase business by 2 per cent a month for another year.

"I gave up pictures several months to attend strictly to business. Then I suggested to the president that I be sales manager between pictures. He said that I'm doing so well, he doesn't mind at all."

'Dark Horse' Wins Prize At Pancake Eating Test

WINTER, WIS.—Robert Massey, Mindovi, a comparative dark horse among pancake eating specialists, won Winter's national pancake eating contest with a meager score of 33.

Veteran observers conceded, however, that the pancakes were larger than in previous contests.

The record holder, William R. Copple of Winter, who downed 69½ pancakes a couple of years back, was not in form and finished a poor third after dropping out on pancake No. 26.

Charles Edwards of Radisson took second place with 30. Oric Hoffman of Exeland, with 23, and Clifford Holmberg of Winter, with 19, finished fourth and fifth.

A number of other aspirants to the title began too fast and fell by the wayside in a welter of syrup and butter.

The contest, an annual affair, is sponsored by the local American Legion post. It was held in the high school gymnasium. In case any of the contestants worked up an appetite, there were plenty of pork sausages and gallons of coffee at hand.

Woman Discovers She Meted Out Punishment in Error

ATLANTA, MICH.—Mrs. Bruce Underhill set an apple pie on her window sill to cool. Shortly afterward she found it had disappeared and spanked her three young sons, Elmer, Leo and Phillip.

Two days later Mrs. Underhill placed a mince pie on the window sill and it also was gone when she looked for it an hour later. This time Mrs. Underhill used an ax handle on Elmer, Leo and Phillip.

When she baked her third pie Mrs. Underhill decided to catch the culprits. She hid in the haymow and watched. Just before dark a small bear came out of the woods, grabbed the pie and took off for a feast.

Elmer, Leo and Phillip now attend a weekly movie.

'Dear Old Golden Rule Days,' Help Resolve Labor Difficulty

By BILLY ROSE

The following story was passed on to me by one of the field men of the national labor relations board. I'm running it, not because I'm jumble-brained enough to think it proves anything, but because it's an interesting yarn. If you find any moral or message in it—well, remember you're strictly on your own. . . .

In December of 1947, a strike was called in a textile plant in New England, and when the picket lines first appeared everybody thought they were only part of the usual bluff and bluster that went with contract-renewal time. But as the days added up to weeks and the weeks to months, the townspeople began to worry.

The strike, as far as anyone could make out, had nothing to do with wages and working conditions, but seemed to be based on the inability of labor and management to sit at the same table without throwing four-letter words at each other. Albert Hanson, president of the textile company, had one meeting with Burt Murphy, recently elected head of the union, but after a few minutes of invective and table-thumping, both men had stomped out and from then on had refused to talk to each other except through local headlines. And when a national labor relations man had offered his services as mediator, he had been told to peddle his papers elsewhere.

TO A FEW insiders, however, the animosity between Hanson and Murphy was nothing new; in fact, it had been going on since they were kids in a village 60 miles north of the mill town. They had competed for the same position on the school baseball team (Albert had gotten it), and pulled the pigtails of the same junior miss (Burt had married her). And they had continued to cat-and-dog it during the years when Hanson was fighting his way up from salesman to plant president and Murphy was organizing the workers.

One day, as the strike was going into its fourth month, the textile man got a note from old schoolteacher. "Dear Albert," it read, "I haven't seen you in almost 40 years, and I'd appreciate it if you would come by the schoolhouse at 10. Sincerely, Anne Peck."

Hanson chuckled at the precise, schoolmarmish handwriting, but he remembered the old lady kindly, and so on Saturday he got up early and drove the 60 miles to his home town.

The schoolhouse looked much as he remembered it, and so did the room inside with its neat rows of desks. But the thing that hit him right in the nostalgia was the sight of Miss Peck herself, still sitting behind her desk on the raised platform in front of the blackboard.

"It's been a long time, Albert," she said.

"Not so long as I thought," said her old pupil. "Let's see. Seems I used to sit right over there."

He walked to a desk near the window and wedged his bulk into the seat.

"That's right," said Miss Peck. "Helen Brennon used to sit in front of you and Burt Murphy had the desk on your right. Now, just excuse me until I finish correcting this paper."

FIVE MINUTES later, Burt Murphy walked in. There was a grin on his face, but when he saw the textile man he stopped smiling.

"I'm glad you got my note and could come," said Miss Peck. "Do you remember where you used to sit?"

"What's this all about?" asked the union boss.

The old lady looked at him over her glasses. "If you'll take your seat," she said, "the class will begin."

Murphy, to humor her, sat down next to Hanson.

"Things haven't changed much, have they?" said Miss Peck pleasantly. "You're still throwing spitballs at each other, only now they hurt a lot more than they used to. Do you remember how it was with you two in the old days? Most of the time you were pretty good friends, but every now and then you'd get into an argument and make so much noise that none of the other pupils could do any work.

"And when you did, I'd just stop the class, make you stand up, and tell you to go outside and not come back until you had straightened things out. Sometimes you'd go out in the woods and settle it with your fists, and other times you'd go down to the brook, sit on the bank and talk it out, but you'd always come back smiling. Stand up, you two."

The two men got to their feet and walked out of the room.

"You heard what the teacher said," said the labor leader. "Do we go into the woods and slug it out?"

"You always had a pretty good left," said the textile boss. "How about letting a conciliation board settle our argument?"

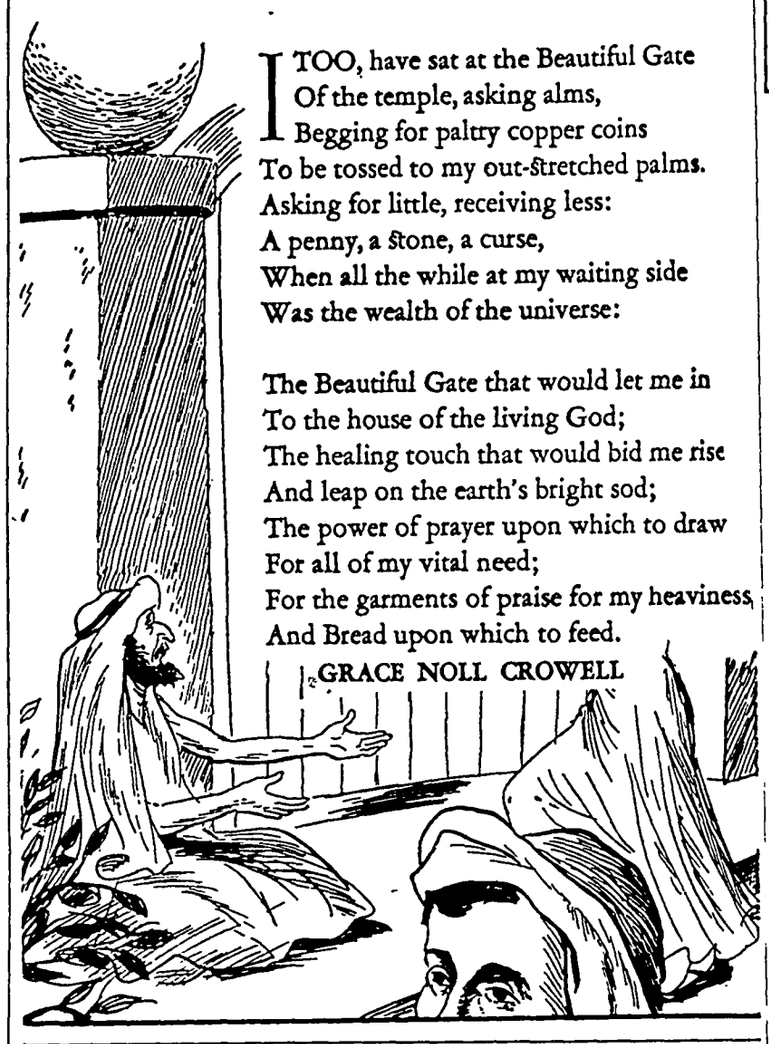
"Fair enough," said Murphy, "but I still want to play first base."

"All right, if you'll keep away from Helen Brennon."

"Seeing as how she's my wife," said Murphy, "that's going to be tough. But if you're still stuck on the girl, drop around tonight and I'll get her to fry up an extra chop."

Then the two men walked back into the schoolhouse to report.

At the Beautiful Gate



I TOO, have sat at the Beautiful Gate
Of the temple, asking alms,
Begging for paltry copper coins
To be tossed to my out-stretched palms.
Asking for little, receiving less:
A penny, a stone, a curse,
When all the while at my waiting side
Was the wealth of the universe:

The Beautiful Gate that would let me in
To the house of the living God;
The healing touch that would bid me rise
And leap on the earth's bright sod;
The power of prayer upon which to draw
For all of my vital need;
For the garments of praise for my heaviness
And Bread upon which to feed.

★ MAIL RIDER ★

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

YOUNG EBEN CLIFFORD drew rein and studied the broad valley of the Hoosick at his feet. An hour ago he had abandoned the trail made by his predecessors on their ride from Bennington to Albany, and skirted the western shoulder of Mount Anthony. If Indians were waiting to ambush him, Eben felt sure they would choose the Hoosick. It offered a means of escape, should the mail rider by any chance be accompanied by an escort.

Eben felt once more of the leather pouch that was tied behind the saddle. Contained therein was a dispatch of the utmost importance for Gen. Newton at Albany. Col. Albee of the Bennington garrison had called Eben aside that morning.

"No one is supposed to know you're carrying the papers, Eben. An escort would only excite suspicion. You must go alone. There is, of course, the possibility that Bonney, the white renegade, and his Indian cutthroats, have learned what I'm up to. In any event, if you're attacked, destroy the papers."

He sat for a long time studying the valley without moving. A curious sense of excitement stirred his blood. Without knowing why, he sensed danger. A minute later he glimpsed a column of smoke rising from the summit of a hill across the valley.

A signal fire! They had sighted him. Eben sucked in his breath. Well, his chances of getting through were pretty slim now. There was only one ford in the Hoosick that was accessible at this time of year. They'd never let him cross it. The sensible thing to do was turn back and insist upon an escort.

A thin smile played across his lips. Sensible, but not advisable.

Eben explored the river for half a mile in both directions, then urged his mount into the stream.

THE WATER WAS ICY, breath taking. In another moment the horse's legs went out from under him, and the swift current was carrying them rapidly down stream. Eben did all he could to help the noble beast in its fight to reach the opposite shore. He was beginning to think he had underestimated the strength of the current, when they struck a sandbar. The horse floundered, nearly lost its footing, then gripped hard and held. Eben breathed a sigh of relief.

After a momentary pause he urged the beast toward the west bank. Ten feet from his goal he drew rein sharply. A loose stone had come tumbling down from the high bank. Eben sat very still, his heart pounding. A feathered bonnet showed above the embankment.

He tried frantically to get his mount toward the east bank, but the river sheared off there; the strength of the current was against him. The Indians were running along the bank, howling and screaming their triumph. In another moment he'd be swept against the high west bank and they'd be upon him.

Remembering Col. Albee's instructions, Eben unwrapped the leather mail pouch, gripped it tightly and flung himself from the back of the floundering horse. Instantly water swept over his head. He swam as long and as far as he could beneath the surface. Then he bobbed into view and a sense of dismay sent his heart downward. He was within three feet of the west bank. A leering Indian was reaching out toward him.

Dimly, as he went under again, Eben heard a chorus of wild shouts.

He was far below the spot where the Indian had stood, but equally as close to the bank. To his amazement there were two soldiers standing there yelling and gesticulating. One of them was Gen. Newton. The sound of gunfire came from upriver.

"Thought you might have seen their smoke signal and realized they had sighted us," Gen. Newton was saying. "Figured Bonney would be up to something, so I led a detachment out to meet you."

Eben sank to the ground. It was good to rest.

about 25 minutes. "Some of Hollywood's top stars are interested in appearing in them," said Siodmark, "as an experiment in handling roles vastly different from the assignments they get in feature films." Some of the world's best literature is in the short story form; filmed as they should be, as shorts, they can substitute for a second feature on double bills.

Ben Grauer, whose first film for the U.S. Bureau of Census will be used to prepare census takers for the work that begins April 1, has completed two additional films. His first training film was reviewed in Washington by the Bureau's top executives, who requested supplementary films to present other aspects of census-taking.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Overcome Fear Of Being Hurt

By Lawrence Gould

Can the fear of being "hurt" be overcome?

Answer: It's not easy. One main reason why so many people do not marry—and why those who do can't "let go" enough to enjoy and truly love each other—is fear of the power to hurt your feelings which loving another person gives him. But remember that what makes this kind of hurt so terrifying is a childish sense of helplessness—it's a relic of the time when you felt unsure of your parents' love because you could do nothing to deserve it. Realize that as an adult you're worth loving, and you'll be less vulnerable.

May childbirth unhinge a woman's reason?

Answer: Only in the sense in which a spark may be the "cause" of an explosion—that is, when it falls on explosive material. A girl who was given the impression as a child that "having a baby" is a subject about which she must not ask questions (which she takes to mean is something to be ashamed of) may be driven to mental illness when she faces the experience herself, especially if her labor is a difficult one. If you fear approaching motherhood unduly, go to a psychiatrist and get your childish fears "out of your system."

Has everyone a "neurotic conflict"?

Answer: Practically everyone, writes Dr. H. Giltay in the Netherlands Journal of Psychology. For what makes a man neurotic is an undeveloped personality, and he's held back mainly by the conflict between his instinctive urge to grow up and his wish to cling to the emotional security of childhood. The fact that we humans are dependent on parental care so many years longer than the animals is what makes this conflict uniquely severe. Helping children to enjoy the sense of independence is a vital goal of education.

KEEPING HEALTHY

We Fight Nature's Healing Methods

By Dr. James W. Barton

I OFTEN WONDER how nature puts up with our blundering ways of what we consider wise or sensible methods of preserving health.

For instance, something irritates the small and large intestine and diarrhoea occurs. This extra water manufactured by the lining of the intestine is to help wash or clean away the irritating substance, yet we do our best to try to stop this extra flow of water; the diarrhoea must be stopped.

A little head cold occurs and the lining of the nose manufacturers an antiseptic juice, which, if left alone, will put up a great fight against the organisms what are causing the cold. Our first thought is to shrink or "dry up" the nose instead of letting nature's antiseptic nose juice do its fighting without interference on our part.

Similarly with a cough in its early stages, nature manufactures extra juice on the lining surface of the little tubes which are branches of the large bronchial tubes. Nature then makes us cough up this mucous while it is in liquid form.

Of course, where the cough is not loosening up the sputum and is just a "nervous hacking" cough, drugs to quiet the nerves and the muscles of the chest are prescribed by the physician to "quiet" the cough and give the patient rest.

Similarly with a rise in temperature, our first thought may be to try to reduce the temperature whereas the rise in temperature is nature's weapon against harmful organisms which are causing the ailment.

Of course where the temperature becomes very high the physician prescribes drugs to reduce it, control it and save life. Another thing we forget is that when eyes are irritated nature causes an extra flow of tears. It is known that for most disease-producing organisms, normal tears are much more effective in protecting the eye than solutions of drugs, which are apt to be too strong.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

Just as infantile paralysis does not cripple every patient, so also rheumatic fever seems to leave some hearts undamaged.

Infected tonsils cause rheumatism and rheumatism causes heart ailments.

Heartburn may be caused by emotional disturbance.

While there is apparently no symptom of indigestion, the fact that the aging individual is not getting the full value of the food eaten may cause tiredness early in the day.

D FROM EVICTION BY FEDERAL JUDGE . . . "Four little nuisances," so-called by their landlord, ore like four little angels as they thank God for a place to stay. The children's parents, Mr. and arrett J. Barry, Chicago, were saved from eviction by Federal Judge Sullivan, who issued a tem- order restraining city bailiffs from throwing them out. The case was the first in which a U. S. court erruled a municipal court under the 1949 rent law. Left to right are Jimmy, 3½, Patty, 16 months, Jimmy's twin, and Bonnie, four months.

Seek Conditions Under Which Cows Yield Most Milk

Agricultural engineers of the department of agriculture have undertaken an ambitious research program to learn if possible under what working conditions a cow will give the largest pailful of milk on the most favorable cost basis.

It is known that cows respond to the discomfort of either heat or cold by producing less milk. However, quantitative relations between temperature and humidity levels on the one hand and milk yields on the other never have been exactly determined.

Small groups of dairy cows will be kept in rooms where conditions can be exactly controlled. After an adjustment period, with conditions alike in both rooms, one factor—temperature for example—will be shifted up or down in one of the rooms while the other remains unchanged, as a control. Changes in milk yield will be noted and the resulting data studied.

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT!

LET'S LEARN A NEW WORD

The adjective "subversive" is actually not a new word; but it is only lately that the average American has been seeing the word in print and hearing it on the air, and understanding only vaguely what it means.

Since it is a word of deep significance to this democracy in its determination to preserve the American way of life, each of us should add the word to his vocabulary.

The adjective subversive derives from the verb subvert, from the Latin sub, "under," plus vertere, "to turn"; hence, to overthrow, to ruin or destroy. So, anything that is subversive is that which seeks to undermine and destroy completely.

In American usage, "subversive person, subversive elements, subversive movements" refer to persons or groups of persons that openly or secretly seek the overthrow of our government so that Communism, Fascism, Naziism or some other non-democratic rule may be imposed upon us.

We Americans like one-word labels for almost everything. We have therefore, begun to use the word subversive, especially in the plural form, as a noun, meaning, "a person (or persons) who indulges in subversive practices."

You will not find the noun subversive in any dictionary; but it already is so well established that it must be admitted to good usage.

No matter how much purists may rant, there is nothing sinful, illogical or ungrammatical in forming nouns from adjectives. We have been doing it for centuries. Here are just a few of many that now are sanctioned by highest authority (all these nouns were formerly adjectives only): Progressive, directive, abrasive, collective, objective, corrective, protective, radical, fundamental.

So it is quite within the genius of English, and American English especially, to speak of "Communists, fellow travelers and other subversives."

Omaha: Why are carnations often called "pinks" even when they are white or red?—Mrs. H. di P.

Answer: This particular word pink does not refer to color. It is from the verb, to pink: "to cut small scallops in the border or edge." If you will examine a carnation, you will find that the edges of the petals appear to have been pinked.

SEEKS NOMINATION FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

G. W. "Bill" Templeton

G. W. "Bill" Templeton, young Garner attorney, is this week announcing his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the office of County Attorney. Templeton has practiced law in this county since January, 1946 and is well qualified for the office.

"Bill" is a graduate of the Drake Law School in the class of 1942. He enlisted in the Air Corps and served for 42 months as a pilot instructor and in the Air Inspectors office.

He is 31 years old, married and has a son four months old. He is a member of the Garner Methodist Church and a Steward on the Board; belongs to the Masonic lodge, Lion Club and American Legion. Mr. Templeton is active in community affairs and is at present Secretary of the School Board.

As to his political faith, he is a staunch Republican and for the past two years has served the party as County Chairman.

TIME TO ORDER GARDEN SEED, NURSERY STOCK

With garden catalogs out and February well under way, it's time to start thinking about ordering seeds and nursery stock for 1950, says Ed Cott, extension horticulturist at Iowa State College.

He says to order fruit trees, raspberries, strawberry plants and other nursery stock now, in order to get shipment by the time they need to be set out. Ordering right away also gives you a better chance to get the varieties you want.

Cott thinks it's a good time to start making other garden plans and order seeds, too. By planning now, a good gardener can order the right varieties in the right amounts he points out.

The varieties which grow best in Iowa are listed in the Iowa Garden Guide, which may be obtained at county extension directors' officers or by writing Cott at Iowa State College, Ames.

By making a diagram of the garden and figuring out what is to be put in each row and how long each row will be, it's pretty easy to figure out how much seed to order by using the Garden Guide. For each kind of garden crop it tells how much seed to plant in a row of given length.

Except for sweet corn, garden vegetable seeds left over from last year may be used again this year. However, if there are just a few seeds left, Cott says it may be more practical to throw them away and order a fresh supply.

Our Number One Shamrock Fans

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Goll can be listed among the real Klemme Shamrock basket ball fans. They have attended every Shamrock game this year, both at home and away. Those are the kind of fans the boys like to have as boosters.

HANCOCK COUNTY SPELLING CONTEST TO BE HELD MARCH 18TH

The Hancock County Spelling Contest will be held in the Garner high school gymnasium on Saturday morning, March 18, 1950, beginning at 9:30 a. m. Contestants should be there by 9 a. m.

Two contestants may be entered from each township group, or three contestants from two townships, and one from each town school with an alternate from each unit. Township chairmen should plan to have their respective contests before March 11, 1950.

There will be a written test in which each contestant will spell 100 words, ten at a time. The pupils missing the fewest words will be declared the written champion.

The words for the written tests will be taken from Horn-Ashbaugh workbooks, first 24 weeks, grades 3, 4, 5, 7.

The ten best spellers in the written test will spell orally to determine the oral champion. The words will be taken from a Horn-Ashbaugh list until the word list is exhausted, or until the pronouncer chooses to use the Eaton contest speller, 1948 edition.

The written and oral champions will spell orally to determine the county champion who will represent Hancock County at the state contest in Des Moines.

To determine the first ten places, except first and second, the following procedure will be followed:

1. Rank each person in the written and oral spelling, then add the two ranks. The person with the lowest total will rank the highest.

2. First and second places will be awarded the winner and loser in the final spell-down between the winner of the written and winner of the oral spelling.

3. In all other particulars the contest rules as printed in Eaton's contest speller, 1948 edition, will be used.

If any dictionary reference is requested, Webster's unabridged will be in the auditorium for immediate use and final authority.

The Garner Lions club is again offering $10.00 in cash prizes to the winners.

Ribbons from the county and certificates from Des Moines will be given to all contestants. Last year the best spellers in rank were:

1. Shirley Meyer, Bingham 3, Woden; 2. Marian Nedved, Garfield 5, Garner; 3. Eunice Hueneman, Liberty 6, Garner; 4. Mona Mikkelson, Crystal 9, Britt; 5. Marcella Wellik, Britt 6, Britt.

Note: The first two rounds in the oral contest will be practice words and any words missed will not count against the contestant. The contest words in both written and oral will begin with third grade words.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Smith was hungry. He had been in the small Iowa town all afternoon talking to the students in the consolidated school and the high school. That evening he had scheduled an adult meeting. But first, he wanted a quiet half hour and a warm supper. He found a small cafe.

Then Smith nearly lost his appetite. Four teen-age sat along the counter near his booth. They were talking loudly about a new game they were playing with their cars.

On dark nights they were driving out to a spot where a railroad track crossed a county grade. There they would partially deflate the tires and drive their cars down the rails. letting the rails guide the wheels.

One of the boys said it was best not to touch the steering wheel or use the lights while going down the tracks. They all agreed the biggest thrill came when you had a car full of kids and could get to the place where the embankment fell away from the tracks, sharp and sheer on either side. That was where the girls always screamed.

When Smith heard all of this he had little appetite left for supper for he is a traveling field representative for the safety education division of this department.

Later that evening he went to the adult meeting and told his audience what he had heard in the cafe. The 175 persons who attended that meeting made up nearly half of the town's entire population. No one there had heard what was happening on the railroad tracks so close to home.

ANNUAL CREAMERY MEETING WAS HELD AT COMMUNITY HALL

The annual meeting f the patrons, directors and officers of the Klemme Cooperative Creamery Co. was held at the Community hall with a good attendance.

A good program of speakers had been arranged and the following men were on the program: Leo Benson, manager of the Iowa State Brand Creameries, Inc.; Frank Barker, manager of the Iowa Dairy Association; Ernest Smith, a state dairy inspector; John Christiansen, the manager of the Supply Department of Iowa State Brand Creameries, who told a number of funny stories in connection with the dairy business. The several talks were greatly enjoyed and were educational in their presentation of dairy subjects.

Kenneth Medin, manager of the local creamery gave a report of the past year's business in which he emphasized a very important item in that the company showed a 25 per cent increase in the milk business and very substantial gain in the amount of butterfat purchased. This is very encouraging and shows that more farmers are going into the dairy business which was curtailed during the war. Total butter sales this year hit $187,808.06. Cream and milk sales totaled $16,632.20.

Fred Klinge, Elmer Beier and Melvin Buseman were re-elected to the board. Other members of the board are Alvin Goll, Mitchell Bock, Dwight Helps, Clarence Lenz, John Kaduce, Jr. and Cecil Katter.

Employees are Kenneth Medin, manager, Karl Huenemann, Harvey Barkema, Mervin Barkema, Eugene Beier and Quentin Stille.

HISTORY REPEATED AT BELMOND MONDAY EVE

Shamrocks In Lead With Two Seconds, Lost By Single Point

History repeated itself in the sectional at Belmond Monday night when the big tall Meservey Rockets staged a repeat performance in the final seconds of play to win over the Shamrocks by one point, exactly as they did last year at Belmond, in the Sectional.

The last quarter was a see-saw game, first one side and then the other was ahead by one point. D. Kaduce had sunk a quick goal to put the Shamrocks ahead 35-34 in the last 30 seconds of play. Meservey lost the ball on a bad pass and the Shamrocks took it out of bounds under the Meservey basket. With 2 seconds left it looked like the Shamrocks had the game on ice, but Koenen of the Rockets intercepted a pass and let the ball drive for the bucket, you guessed it . . . he made the spectacular shot just ahead of the buzzer to give Meservey the game.

The Shamrocks stepped into an early lead and were never behind until the last quarter when the Rockets went ahead one point. Klemme was in front 8-3 in the first stanza and held a 4 point lead at the half, 15-11. They were still in front 24-21 at the end of the third quarter and it was still nobody's ball game, but it was Meservey's best quarter as they scored 15 points against 11 for the Shamrocks.

The big obstacle in this game for the Shamrocks to overcome was Meservey's superior height, but they made it up the hard way by better ball passing and maneuvering for shots and on defensive were able to hold down Meservey's hot-shots, Koenen, Ruiter and Watermiller in good style.

For the Shamrocks the scoring was well divided in this game with Josten 10, Brinkman 6, Schmidt 8, Pearson 4 and Kaduce 7. Koenen led the Rocket attack with 13, Watermiller 13, Ruiter 7, Faaborg 2 and Braga 1. The Shamrocks lost Brinkman in the last quarter who was tagged with his fifth foul.

In analyzing the game the Shamrocks had 15 field goals for 30 points and made 5 out of 15 attempts at the free throw line. That is where the Shamrocks really lost the game. Meservey hit for 14 field goals, one less than the Shamrocks, but they made 8 free throws out of 17 tries, which made the final difference.

It was the last game for four Klemme Seniors: Brinkman, Josten, Schmidt and Kaduce. It was a heart-breaker for the boys to lose as a win in this one would have been a long step ahead to the State Tournament. Coach Patterson and his fine team are not to be critized for losing this game. Both teams played excellent basket ball, they played hard and they played to win. Either team could have been the winner.

Good luck Meservey Rockets, keep right on going.

Too Literally

THE OWNER of a large business concern bought a number of signs reading, "Do it Now," and had them hung around the office, hoping to inspire his people with promptness and energy in their work. In his private office one day soon afterward a friend asked him how the scheme affected the staff. "Well, not just the way I thought it would," answered the proprietor. "The cashier skipped with thirty thousand dollars, the head bookkeeper eloped with the private secretary, three clerks asked for an increase of salary, and the office boy lit out to become a bandit."

COOPERATIVE

Fire Chief (putting recruit through his paces)—"We have only one fire engine. Now, suppose we are called away to a fire and you are left in charge of the station. Another fire breaks out several miles away. What would you do about the second fire?"

Recruit—"I'd endeavor to keep it alight, sir, until you got back."

Not Even Injured

A cow-puncher ordered a steak at a restaurant. The waiter brought it in rare—very rare. The cow-puncher looked at it and demanded that it be returned to the kitchen and cooked.

"It is cooked," snapped the waiter.

"Cooked—nothing," replied the cow-puncher. "I've seen cows hurt worse than that and get well."

Fair Enough

"I've got a cow I want to sell you, Charlie."

"Yes? Would she fit into my Guernsey herd?"

"No; I dunno as she would."

"Does she give lots of milk?"

"No; I can't say as she gives lots of milk, but I can tell you this: She's a kind, gentle, good natured old cow, and if she's got any milk she'll give it to you."

Double Dilemma

The stranger sitting opposite the two spinsters on the train was a practical joker. When the train swooshed into a dark tunnel the man imitated loud kissing noises. As the train emerged into daylight the man arose and bowing to both the old ladies, said:

"I don't know which of you ladies I should thank for those exceedingly pleasant moments."

FRIENDLY ADVICE

"I hear you and your neighbor are on the outs. What happened?"

"Well, my kids are taking music lessons, and the other day he sent over an ax with a note saying, "Try this on your piano!"

Con Game

The hired man on a farm went on his first trip to the city. He returned wearing a scarf pin set with at least four carats bulk radiance. The jewelry dazzled the village belles, and excited the envy of the other men. His employer bluntly asked if it was a real diamond.

"Wall, if it ain't," answered the hired man, "I've been skun out o' four bits."

ALWAYS CORRECT

A man boasted of having eaten 40 boiled eggs.

"Why did you not eat one more and make it 50?" asked one of his listeners.

"Humph, do you want a man to make a hog of himself just for one egg?"

To make filling, separate eggs and beat yolks. Combine yolks, milk, ¼ cup sugar and salt. Cook and stir over hot water until mixture coats the spoon. Remove from heat. For shallow frying in a skillet, have at least 1½ inches of melted fat or oil in the pan before placing the food in to cook.

Pan-broiling a cut of meat means that it is cooked in a skillet or frying pan without the use of extra fat. Make certain the pan is hot before placing in chops or steaks.

SPORTSMAN'S HORIZON

By JIM RHODY

Fish Ponds

It is a cheering note to anglers that reports from most states of the nation indicate that farm fish ponds are growing rapidly in number. This is encouraging news because of the fast-dwindling areas of good fishing as heavily-fished waters become unable to replenish stocks rapidly enough to meet angler demands, and state conservation agencies also meet increasing difficulties in that respect.

Whether the farmer is a confirmed angler or not, a fish pond should have an important place in his farming plans. First, such ponds are ofttimes necessary for stock watering purposes, or to conserve water for other uses. Secondly, the farmer can make quite a little revenue for himself by intelligent handling of a farm fish pond program, as anglers are required to pay from 25 cents to $1 a day for fishing privileges, depending on the degree of sport or pounds of creel the angler may expect for his money.

In some sections of the nation, commercial fish ponds, built either through commercial vision of their owners, or because of a personal love for the sport of angling, are yielding important financial returns on the investment ventured.

Getting back to an earlier point, in spite of the importance of hook and line fishing, the amount of waters suitable for fishing has decreased - the pressure of civilization constantly destroys fish habitat. With the gradual introduction of ficial impoundments to provide adequate water for cattle and other stock, new habitat was created for fish. Now farm fish ponds have become of great importance from the point of view of anglers.

Farm fish ponds can be of almost any size for stocking purposes. But the average will be found to be from one to five and one-half acres Ponds as small as one-quarter acre can be made to produce fish in worthwhile quantities if properly managed and treated with commercial fertilizers to keep up the level of plant and small animal life that the fish must have for food.

Ponds should be stocked with species of fish that will maintain a natural balance between prey and predator species. Bluegills, which utilize the insect and small animal life of ponds, are the prey species, and largemouth bass are the predator species.

If the proper balance in weight and number of these two species can be maintained, maximum production of fish may be expected. In fact, this means that the ponds must be heavily fished by anglers to prevent overpopulation and stunted growth.

"Fish farmers" can expect returns of 50 to 100 pounds of fish per acre in a natural pond, and up to 300 pounds in a well-managed, fertilized pond. This is a greater production of food per acre than could be realized from beef on adjacent land, which would come to about 150 pounds per acre. The production of one pound of fish in a fertilized pond might cost six to eight cents, but in terms of food and recreation this is considered as an insignificantly small cost.

Not every pond can be turned into a fish pond. It takes special planning or construction. Silt from erosion can make a small pond untenable for fish. And, while ponds may be as shallow as three feet in the south, they must be from six to 15 feet deep in the north to prevent winter killing of fish.

Whooping Cranes

According to reports, four young whooping cranes returned with 29 adults to their wintering ground in Texas, this giving the big white birds a little headway in their fight against extinction.

The continental population of these birds now stands at 36, including two captive birds at the Arkansas wildlife refuge on the east coast of Texas, and one in Louisiana.

In 1942, the whooping cranes were down to 22 birds. The slow rise in numbers is attributed by the National Audubon Society to increased protection on their wintering grounds and less shooting. This is believed to have resulted from the widespread publicity of the need for the birds' protection along their migration routes.

New Duck Stamp

A pair of trumpeter swans flying over the Red Rock Lakes area of Montana will be depicted on the 1950-51 duck stamp. A sketch of the birds by artist Walter A. Weber of Vienna, Va., was picked by a group of waterfowl experts as the winner of the 17th annual duck stamp competition.

It will appear on the stamps, the first of which is to be issued July 1, this year. Stamps are required of all hunters of waterfowl.

Satan's Throne

Lesson for February 26, 1950

"I HOLD NO BRIEF for him" is a lawyer's expression often borrowed by other people. A lawyer who holds a brief for a man has been employed to represent him. It is his duty to present the man in the best light possible.

Now we know about the early church at Corinth from two sources: Luke and Paul. The book of Acts was written, among other reasons, to show that the Christian church, far from being a subversive movement as its enemies claimed, was a benefit to the world. Of course this was true; but since this was Luke's purpose, he naturally omitted as much of the church's shortcomings as he could, and played up the good features.

Church with the Lid Off

Paul, on the other hand, writing to the church at Corinth (and to others as well), held no brief for them. He was not trying to praise them or to tell anybody how good they were.

He knew them intimately; he had indeed converted most of the members.

His letters to Corinth, from which our lesson gives a small sample, shows us a church "with the lid off."

Where Satan's Throne Is

YEARS AFTERWARD, another Christian writer said of another church that they lived "where Satan's throne is." You might almost have said the same thing of Corinth. It was a large commercial city; people from everywhere funneled into it. Like any city of this sort it had earned a reputation for wickedness of every kind—drink, liquor, gambling, women, cutthroat business, rotten politics—it was all there. Even in the easy-going Roman world, Corinth was notorious.

Corinth was a sort of man-made jungle, like our own great cities today. It made a sort of test case: If the church could succeed in Corinth it could succeed anywhere.

If the power of Christ could make new men and women out of the denizens of that great city, there was no jungle, man-made or nature-made where Christ could not go. Can men and women be Christian in the midst of a non-Christian, even anti - Christian world?

Our Pagan World

PAUL'S ANSWER, of course, is Yes: on one condition. You must take your pattern for living from Jesus, not from the world around you. The big problem at Corinth, which included all other problems, was the fact that the Christians there were acting too much like the people outside the church. Christians must be different! insisted Paul. This is not an echo of a bygone time.

Our own world is a new Corinth. Even into the remotest village, the most isolated farm, the world of our time pushes in, by radio, movies, magazines and papers and advertising, even by schools and clubs. And it is a pagan world.

Take the movies alone, that fertile source of most young people's ideas. Hollywood's idea of marriage—a temporary affair till boredom do us part; Hollywood's idea of a good time—liquor flowing free; Hollywood's idea of success—an immense house with an even bigger swimming pool.

Not that there are no good moving pictures; but in general what is made glamorous on a thousand screens is anything but a Christian world.

And Be Ye Separate

PAUL KNEW it is not practical to have no contact with evil. He would not approve of Christians going into monasteries where they would henceforth see none but top-grade saints. Christians have to live in the world, even if they live where Satan's throne is. But Christians ought to be different.

The world says: Drink makes no difference; men of distinction all do it. The Christian knows better: Christ's man of distinction will keep himself clean. The world says: Let yourself go, follow your impulses, look out for yourself. The Christian knows better: he is one bought with a price. We that are strong ought to help the weak and not to please ourselves. The world says: Do as other people do!

JOSTEN APPLIANCE

SHELLANE GAS - ELECTRIC WIRING

Edmund K. Josten, Prop. Klemme, Iowa

In 1918 in a high school classroom, a 15-year old sophomore, confused by discussion of the calendar, asked his teacher: "Didn't the Caesars mess up the calendar?"

She snapped back: "Do you think you could make a better one?"

The boy, Willard Edwards, went home that night and thought up six calendars, one of which he considered superior to any he knew. One of them was up for discussion by Congress. It was presented to and received favorably by delegates at the world security conference at San Francisco. Edwards sees a possibility that his perpetual calendar soon may be the international calendar.

Edwards, a navy veteran of action in the Pacific, outlined his plans for the calendar. It would simplify the present system by a switch that would involve a change in only two days.

In the Edwards perpetual calendar, the year would have 364 days plus New Year's day completely apart from any month or week. It would be followed by Monday, the first day of the year. There would be 12 months, falling into a regularly rhythmical pattern of 30, 30, 31 days.

Monday, which psychologically is regarded as the first day of the week, would actually be first in the proposed calendar.

Leap Year day, like New Year's day, would be an international holiday, completely apart from any month. It would come following Sunday, June 31.

Labor Day and Christmas, for instance, would always be on Monday. With the possibility of a fixed Easter, there would be six three-day holidays. This, Edwards contends, would be of great advantage in planning vacations, transportation schedules, school terms, and especially to business concerns.

And for those of superstitious persuasion, there would be no Friday the 13th to worry about.

ROUND OUT THE MEAL WITH— DELICIOUS AND NUTRITIOUS DESSERTS

Set a pretty dessert in front of your family, and watch the cleam of approval they give you. Desserts can be more than eye or taste appeal, however. They can increase the health value of a meal.

Just the right dessert and your meal is a success. At least that's the way the family looks at it. And you can, too, with justifiable pride.

For dessert not only gives a happy ending to dinner or supper; it can add to the nutritional goodness of your meal.

In other words, desserts are not just tasty, sweet foods to wind up the meal; they play an important role in your menu planning.

Jewell Graham, extension nutrition specialist of Iowa State College says, "The nutrition-wise homemaker plans her family's dessert as a part of a well-balanced menu. The dessert she chooses can provide not only fuel for energy but also a good share of the minerals, vitamins and other protective foods that are necessary for our physical and mental well-being.

Desserts Booklet

In keeping with this idea is a new booklet, "Desserts, Delicious and Nutritious," written by Miss Graham. In 32 pages of recipes and suggestions on making a variety of desserts, Miss Graham shows how easily good desserts can "top off" the meal.

Cakes, pies, cookies, frostings and sauces, custard type desserts, gelatin desserts and frozen desserts with sauces for ice creams and puddings are discussed.

Desserts, like other foods says Miss Graham, can be classed according the the "basic 7" food groups. For example, if a homemaker wants to add more yellow vegetables to her meal, she doesn't always have to fix the ordinary vegetable. She can plan on pumkin pie, steamed carrot and nut pudding, spicy squash pudding, sweet potato pie or even pumpkin ice cream.

If she wishes to add more citrus fruits, tomatoes and that group of basic foods to her menu, she can look to fruit cups, molded fruit salad, orange, lemon and lime pies, or she can provide bavarian cream desserts.

Another group of the "basic 7" foods include potatoes, other vegetables and fruits. Desserts which come in this classification are the apple, peach, apricot and berry pies, fruit whips, fresh or frozen or stewed or baked fruits plum pudding, and fruit cake.

Milk, cheese and ice cream come in another important "basic" class, and the desserts which key in here are the cornstarch puddings, tapiocas, custards. rice puddings, bread pudding and frozen desserts.

Protein Desserts

It is even possible to plan desserts which make use of the high-protein foods such as eggs, peanuts, peas and beans—which come in still another class.

And in the final "basic 7" class which emphasizes butter and fortified margarine, there are such good desserts as pound cake, other butter cakes, cookies and the frostings.

A light dessert should follow a heavy meal, whereas a hearty dessert will help make a light meal adequate.

The booklet is available from your county extension office, or the Bulletin Office, Iowa State College.

Served Her Right

At Janesville, a cow belonging to Fred Schield walked over and put her foot in a coffee can, in which the kittins' supper had just been poured. The can wouldn't come off, greatly to the annoyance of the cow which ran wildly about the barn-yard. They finally had to call a veterinary to get her out of her jam.

Gotham Cabbie Cheers Up Fares With Neat Puns

NEW YORK.—For 29 years now Abe Heller, New York cab driver has been spouting puns for his passengers every time the meter clicks.

In fact, his puns have become a part of his life and of the lives of his passengers, too. He even carries his puns into his home on W. 64th street where he lives surrounded by four radios, a television set, jokebooks and Sam Katz. Sam Katz is his cat.

"I have heard it stated that the pun is the lowest form of humor," Heller said with great dignity. "But don't you believe it. The party who said that was just jealous.

"Say, here's a new one," he cracked, "what chemical do you get from the telephone company? The answer is 'nitrates'. Get the idea? I originate jokes to amuse my fares. Most of them love it. I very seldom get paid off without a tip."

Always Thinking

Stockily built and with the gleaming eye of a punster perpetually thinking up his next horror, Heller announced a standing offer for Milton Berle and anybody else who fancies himself a fast man with a gag.

"I will wager $1,000 nobody can outpun me," Heller challenged. "Berle says there's nothing new in jokes. Maybe not in his. But get this: A Ubangi dame got fresh with her husband. 'Lissen,' he says, 'don't give me none of your lip.' That's new, that's fresh stuff, all my own."

Heller, who hacks his own cab nights, said proudly he can drive a passenger from South Ferry to Yonkers and make a pun practically every time the dinger (meter) clicks, without repeating himself.

"I give it to them in continuity," he declared. "Like this: What has Irene Dunne lately? She went to Veronica Lake to be near Dinah Shore where Larry Parks his car, and she wouldn't have gone, only Preston Foster. She's a nice girl who considers Robert Young but Victor Mature. She don't like fellows with beards and says, 'Isn't Monte Woolley?' "

Comics Puzzle Him

Sam Katz poked his paw at Heller, who sparred neatly and went on:

"I can tell pretty fast whether a fare is susceptible to jokes. Sometimes it's like batting your head against a stone wall, so I clam right up."

Passengers entering Heller's chariot have been startled to hear him ask: "Why is the floor of a cab like a restaurant?"

Before they can recover, Heller yak yaks: "Can't you see it's an auto mat?"

"Professional comedians," Heller said, "puzzle me. They look so sad when they get into my cab, and when I give them a good one, they look sadder."

Heller said his ambition is to write gags—and get paid for them.

"Another fellow and me," he said, "had a chance to get on television, but we got sinus trouble. Nobody would sign us."

Milady's Fan, Old as Time Still Used in Many Lands

Of what avail milady's fan—now that there is electricity?

For stirring up a cooling zephyr few people would prefer the dainty folding fans of 17th-century Europe to the automatic, motor-driven appliances of 20th-century America.

Yet the fluttering hand fan, which dates back more than 4,000 years, is far from antiquated. In many lands it is still important to dress and custom, the dance and drama, and even business and cookery.

In Italy and North Africa peasant housewives use fans to drive air into crude charcoal stoves, thereby stimulating the flame to boil coffee or fry potatoes. The vigor of the fanning regulates the heat.

Aristocratic Puerto Rican ladies often carry fans as an accessory to their attire. These fans are inlaid, carved, and sometimes jeweled. On the Pacific isle of Bali, east of Java, dancing girls use fans to ornament their dress and accent their movement.

The Chinese, who have long been prolific in the designing and manufacture of fans, have special ones for spring, summer, and autumn. Many a Chinese community has its own distinctive fan, which differs in color and ornamentation from those of its neighbors.

Chinese fans are believed to be the oldest known to civilization. Among other things, the people employ them to blow up fires, dust furniture, cool food and tea, and shade their eyes from the sun. Nanking, Soochow, Hangchow, Huchow, and Shanghai have all been important fan-making centers.

John Adams was the First [illegible] England.

Mr. and Mrs. John Chambers Enjoying Winter In Calif.

The Times received a nice letter from Mr. and Mrs. John Chambers who are spending the winter with their son Wayne and family at Sacramento. California.

Mrs. Chambers also writes: "All us Chambers have enjoyed the Klemme Times. The home paper tells lots to those away. We were surely pleased to hear Klemme won the County Tournament.

"If all goes well we will leave here Friday, February 17th and visit friends in Salem, Oregon, and then visit John's sister Ava at Seattle, Wash., February 21, and then head for Klemme Feb. 26th, by train. We hope to see all of you March 1st."

Seeks Judgement

A petition has been filed in the Hancock County district court in which R. T. Norvet asks judgement against Max Steinfeldt for the sum of $185 with 6 per cent interest from Dec. 1949, and that a writ of attachment be issued for the enforcement of rent on all crops grown on the NE¼ on the NE¼ of Sec. 8, Twp. 97, Range 24.

OFFER LESPEDEZA AND IOREED CANARYGRASS

The Committee for Agricultural Development has some Iowa 6lespedeza available in limited quantities. This seed is being offered to growers in southern Iowa. Iowa 6 is an outstanding variety of early maturing Korean lespedeza developed at the Iowa Agricultural Experimental Station.

This variety is a vigorous, high producer of both forage and seed, and early enough in maturity to reseed itself in the southern half of Iowa. One of the important features of Iowa 6 is its resistance to bacterial wilt.

There is also a limited supply of Ioreed canarygrass seeds available to growers. This forage has long been recognized as especially well adapted to wet and poorly drained soil. It is a vigorous perennial which forms a heavy sod. It is coming into its own as a means of gully control in soil erosive areas.

Growers interested in either these varieties should contact the Committee for Agricultural Development, Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa for more information.

Phone your news to 12.

LANDLORD CAN SHARE IN FERTILIZER COSTS

Most Iowans agree that fertilizer that pays for itself in the long run is one farm improvement.

But, as in most farm improvements, there's always the question of who makes the original cash outlay for fertilizer on a rented farm, observes I. W. Arthur, extension farm economist at Iowa State College.

On a cash-rent farm, he says the landlord can well afford to pay half of the phosphate fertilizer that goes on oats and seedings, in order to protect his investment in grass and legume seed.

Where renting is done on a cropshare lease, the landlord can afford to go along on some nitrogen fertilizer on seedings, besides paying for half of the phosphate. In addition, he can pay for half of the mixed fertilizer that goes on corn ground. without skating on this ice financially. On some crop-share farms, the fertilizer bill is divided in the same proportion as the crops are shared. For example, if the grain is divided into two-fifths and three-fifth, then the fertilizer bill is split the same way.

Arthur thinks the landlord can afford to pay half of all the fertilizer bills where farming is done on a stock-share lease basis.

He points out that in some cases, regardless of the kind of lease, landlords now are paying 50 percent of the phosphate bill because the extremely unpleasant job of spreading the phosphate is done by the tenant.

Lime presents another problem on the modern rented farm. Historically, the landlord has always paid liming costs. However, this arrangement was worked out back in the days when the farmer hauled and spread lime.

Now, with trucking and the spreading done in one operation, the landlord still stand the expense. But, on a growing percentage of Iowa's rented farms, the cost of lime is being shared by the tenant, Arthur says. And, in some of these cases, the landlord protects the tenant's investment for 5 years. Thus, if the tenant moves off the farm before the 5 years is up, the landlord repays the tenant for the unused value of his investment.

KINDERGARTEN NEWS

Our valentine's party was a big success. We all received many valentines and had a nice time. We also know how to cut out valentines and we made some very nice ones.

In phonics we have started the F sound. We just completed the C sound and now can pick out many words which start with c. In our "Before We Read" books we are learning, matching the meaning of same and different.

Quite a few of us had the mumps. We hope no more come down with them.

FIRST GRADE NEWS

We have had perfect attendance for two days this week.

Wednesday we had our valentine party and we all received many lovely valentines. We had three visitors. They were Julie Stokesbary, Merlene Kothenbeutel and Ray Mannetter.

We are taking down Lincoln and valentine decorations and are beginning to think of Washington's birthday.

SECOND GRADE NEWS

Most of us were very glad to be back in school after our unexpected vacation.

Wednesday we had our valentine party. Everyone received many pretty valentines and had a lot of fun.

THIRD AND FOURTH GRADE NEWS

The third and fourth grade had a valentine contest last week. We all made a valentine then voted for the one we thought was best. Virginia Kudje won first, Cozette Lau second, and Jerry Janssen won third.

This month we have studied about Abraham Lincoln and are now studying about the life of George Washington for history.

JUNIOR HI NEWS

Everyone in the eighth grade should be able to figure up their income tax, when it comes time to do such. In arithmetic we are studying about income tax, and about federal taxes.

The seventh grade are studying about interest, investments and so on.

So between the seventh and eighth graders, some of them ought to make good business men.

Thursday afternoon Dean Burgess showed us two movies. One was "Whenever You Eat" and the other was "Pacific Candad." They were both very interesting, and of course we'd rather study that way than reading it out of a book.

Our motto is 'If you cannot win, make the one ahead break the record."

HEAVY SNOWS OF PAST WEEK CONTINUE TO BLOCK ROADS

The exceedingly heavy snows of the past week are still showing their effects on rural roads this week as strong winds continue to cause drifts that keeps county plows busy keeping the roads open. Main highways seem to be in better shape and none have been closed because of drifts.

Snow Is Needed

The two heavy snows in Feb. will help to replenish the low moisture supply of the past season, sa this section of the state is below normal on rainfall. With all of its inconveniences, the recent snow is a million dollar gift as far as crops are concerned. We still need more moisture in Iowa.

ADVERTISERS OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES ARE TELLING YOUR CHILDREN

at least once a day
through magazines, radio, billboards, display cards, newspapers that social drinking is "the thing to do" . . . that it's "a mark of success" . . . that it's the proper way to extend hospitality at home . . . that they'll be popular, have fun, friends, romance if they conform to the social drinking habit.

You've seen the ads. Smartly dressed men and women in lavish surroundings, eagerly consuming the advertiser's product. Handsome athletes, beautiful girls, even grandmothers try hard to push the public into believing that everyone drinks. The text of some ads subtly implies that alcohol is as safe as milk.

Last year about $150 million was spent to put such messages across. Was it effective? It was. The staggering sum of more than $9 billion was spent in the U. S. for alcoholic beverages. And even more alarming, alcoholic beverage ads are now obviously designed to create a vast new and continuing demand for beer, wine and whiskey—a demand that can come only from the rising generation.

YOU CAN HELP . . .

We can all help to counteract the impression that successful men and women use liquor as a normal part of their daily activities . . . that alcoholic beverages are harmless or socially and physically beneficial, by letting the true facts about alcohol be more widely known.

How? By advertising. By saying over and over again, through forceful advertisements in newspapers, magazines, on the radio, that it is a fact that alcohol cannot help anyone attain health, happiness, or financial security . . that it is a fact that alcohol can easily stop the life success and happiness of young men and women barely out of their teens . . . that liquor is far from the beneficient product that its manufacturers would have us believe.

Such advertisements are now ready—some of the most experienced and skilled advertising men and women gladly are contributing to this vital cause. A non-profit organization ALCOHOL FACTS, INC., is running these ads in newspapers whenever and wherever they can raise the funds needed to cover the actual cost of publishing them . . Your contribution to Alcohol Facts to help publish the truth about alcohol, is one very sure way you can help to convince young people that drinking is not essential, socially or otherwise.

As one current Alcohol Facts' ad, appealing directly to 18-19-20 year olds, says about drinking: "You can get along fine without it. You need never hesitate to say: 'No thanks, I don't drink.' You'll be thought the better of, and feel better, for saying so."

Published by Alcohol Facts, Inc., P. O. Box 682, White Plains, N. Y.—a non-profit membership corporation organized under the laws of New York State. Alcohol Facts, Inc. has no fixed membership fees and those who contribute to its work, no matter how modestly, may be enrolled as members. . . . Contributions are deductible from income in computing your Federal tax.

WARM COLD SEPARATOR JUST BEFORE USING IT

Pour warm water in a cold separator just before the milk is put in, advises Eugene Anfinson, dairy specialist at Iowa State College.

He says that helps to get all the butterfat that's put into the separator to come out the cream spout. Cold milk and cold separator parts cause the first butterfat that goes into the bowl from the tank to stick to the disks and sides of the separator bowl.

To prove his point, Anfinson points to the heavy deposits of butterfat that are found on the inside of the bowl when milk is run through a cold separator.

He says to try pouring hot water through first and then notice how much sooner cream starts running out the cream spout.

AROUND IOWA

Thirsty

Little Kenny Edwards of Sumner was thirsty recently and took a swig out of a bottle. It contained kerosene. It took a stomach pump to relieve his misery but he will recover.

Grandparents

Terry Argotsinger of Deloit, in Crawford County, may grow up to be a bit spoiled. He has 10 grandparents and all of them live in or near Deloit.

Guam

Alva Ehtington, rural mail carrier of Marshalltown, recently enjoyed a conversation with his son Bernard, now stationed on Guam. The call was made on a combination telephone and short wave radio hookup, and through a radio station in Sioux Falls.

Escaped

Dick Kelly of West Union had a very narrow escape recently. Through error, a coal hoist dumped four and a half tons of lump coal on the cab of a truck Kelly was driving. The weight smashed the cab down so he was caught between the crushed top and the steering wheel but he was unmurt.

At least two Iowans are not looking forward to spring. Mr. and Mrs. Haufle, caretakers at Geode Park near New London, know that a rattlesnake is hibernating inside the cabin walls. Late in the fall, on warm days, they could hear him occasionally "sound off" with his buzzer but he was quiet all winter. When spring comes, they hope he crawls out, not in.

The Truth May Make You Free But Watch Out How You Use It

By BILLY ROSE

One night when I dropped into Jerry's for a firkin of foam, Long George Smiley and Sid "The Inch" Perry were at the bar as usual. As unusual, however, they were not arguing with each other but with the bartender.

"The truth never hurt anybody," said the bartender, "and the truth is I'm on the hook for 63 beers. And until you gentlemen settle up, there ain't gonna be no 64th."

"Look," said The Inch, "you're a downtrodden worker yourself, and when you turn down another worker's request for a bowl of suds, you're committing class suicide."

"For three weeks successive," said the bartender, "you gentlemen have been promising to pay up, and if it wasn't against the rules to insult a customer, I'd say you liars were making free with the truth."

Billy Rose

"What's wrong with a lie now and then?" said Long George. "If it wasn't for a little banana oil, the wheels of our crumby civilization would come to a dead stop."

"You couldn't be more wrong," said the bartender. "A wise man tells the truth on any and all occasions."

"If you'll excuse my elegance," said The Inch, "that's a lot of pig shampoo."

"I CONCUR with my friend," said Long George. "Look at what happened to Hogan, the trucker, when he got mixed up with the verities. A couple of months ago, a frined tipped him off that his wife was dating a kid who worked in the brewery, and instead of making like the three little monkeys, he hired a detective to follow her.

When he learned his missus had been sneaking off to a dime dance hall to jitterbug with the young man, he confronted her with the fulsome facts, and a few scrappy minutes later his wife was packed and on her way back to her mother's house in Canarsie."

"Served her right," said the bartender.

"Served Hogan right," said The Inch. "Before he found out, he was happy as a fly on a whiskey cork. Tonight, like every night, he's in his apartment alone, lapping up the Irish and playing 'Melancholy Baby' on the phonograph."

"Besides which," said George, "nobody has heard him say a word against his wife. But the finagling friend who tipped him off—well, he's got an eye you couldn't cover with an eight-dollar steak."

"You've got a point, maybe," said the bartender, "but I still insist there's nothing like the truth, and the truth is you gentlemen get no more beer."

"THE TRUTH, I'd like to point out," said Long George, "is probably the most incendiary thing man has discovered since he learned how to rub two little sticks together. And if the case of Hogan isn't enough, let me give you another for-instance: The gent in congress who recently insisted on inspecting Fort Knox to make sure the 20 billion in bullion hadn't been hypothecated by the Fair Dealers."

"Why shouldn't he inspect?" said the bartender. "It's in the public interest."

"You amaze and sadden me," said The Inch. "Suppose, due to a subterranean earthquake or some interplanetary shoplifting, the congressman had found nothing at Fort Knox but a big hole in the ground.

What could he have done? Blab to the press? Not on your bungstarter. Even a man with the mentality of a Congressman would know that an hour after the news hit page one the economy of the world would do a Bikini—and that a man couldn't buy a tangerine with a 20 dollar note."

"Which proves what?" said the bartender.

"Which proves," said Long George, "that truth, like dynamite, shouldn't be tossed around carelessly. If my friend and I sometimes misrepresent about settling our tab, it is only to spare you pain."

The bartender took a couple of beer glasses, wiped them, and then put them away. "You know," he said, "I never thought about it that way before, and it almost makes me ashamed of myself to have to throw you gentlemen out."

A Prayer

by GRACE NOLL CROWELL

MY Lord, I pray that through today
I may walk patiently,
Forgetting not that Thy dear hand
Is leading me.

I know not what Thy wisdom, Lord,
May choose for me today;
What the long hours may hold for me
I cannot say.

I only know that I may go
Unquestioningly with Thee,
Remembering that what Thou wilt
Is best for me.

For Thou, O Lord, canst see the end,
While I but see the way—
Help me to walk it patiently
Throughout today.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

No Science Of Marriage

By Lawrence Gould

Is there a science of marriage?

Answer: No, says Dr. Arthur N. Foxe in the Psychiatric Quarterly Supplement. But there is an "art of marrying" which is different from and more important than the art of getting married. This involves choosing a wife or husband, not on a purely "romantic" basis — since the romance that comes before marriage is less realistic than that which develops later—but because you know the person of your choice has a background, character, and "goals" that harmonize with yours. A psychiatrist who knows this art can teach it to his patients.

Is a genius always a good citizen?

Answer: By no means. I have yet to see a definition—and still less an explanation—of a genius that entirely satisfies me, but roughly he (or she) is someone who combines rare ability in some special field with an overwhelming and almost "compulsive" drive to exercise it. In the pursuit of his goal, the genius is apt to be ruthless, and particularly if he is an artist, the goal itself may take no account of moral values. Apart from such fields as medical research, if the genius is a useful citizen, it is by accident or indirection.

Do stimulants increase your capacity for effort?

Answer: No, say two Danish investigators, E. Asmussen and O. Boje, after studying the effects of drugs employed in "doping" athletes. Men not suffering from fatigue were tested with alcohol, caffeine, cocaine, strychnine, and nitroglycerin on a bicycle "ergometer" in exertions equivalent to various races from a 100-meter dash to a 1000-meter grind. None of the "stimulants" produced any visible increase in the men's strength or endurance except for a slight gain in endurance in the longer races from doses of caffeine.

GARDEN SEQUENCE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

BRYANT DREAMED a dream. He was in a garden A beautiful girl sat on a white marble bench, and smiled at him across a pond filled with goldfish and pond lilies. Bright sunshine filtered down through shade trees and reflected the gold in the girl's hair.

Bryant knew that, according to all good dreams, he was supposed to do something—possibly to walk around the pool and bow gallantly before the girl.

He began to wonder if he didn't look somewhat like an idiot standing there.

It was then that he heard footsteps on the flagstone path that connected the garden with the wide, screened-in porch of the house. He looked up to find Laura, his sister, coming into the garden. He was glad that Laura had come. For Laura knew all about dreams and could tell him what to do.

"Bryant!" Laura exclaimed, stopping on the pool's edge, and looking from him to the girl, "whatever in the world are you standing here for? Why, you're positively rude. Doris must think my brother is stupid!"

Oh, yes, that was it. It was all working out fine now. Laura had asked her college roommate, Doris LaPlante, down for the week-end. Of course, that was she. How stupid of him.

So Bryant walked around the pool and was introduced. He looked deep into the twin black pools that were Doris' eyes, and apologized. His voice sounded odd, but that, of course, was because he was thinking that here was the girl he had been waiting for.

Then he almost groaned aloud. Doris had looked up and said it was quite all right and she really should have introduced herself, but he added so much to the scene, standing over there so straight and silent. It was the sound of her voice that made Bryant groan; for he remembered that it was all a dream and that Doris would soon be gone.

Bryant slowly put his arm about her slim shoulders.

they were once more in the garden. There was a full moon and a gentle breeze and music drifting down on the still air from somewhere back of the marble bench.

A week, two weeks, had gone by—Bryant wasn't sure which—since the first meeting in the garden. He had a dim recollection that they were glorious weeks of riding and golfing and swimming and dancing—all with Doris.

IT WAS ONLY OCCASIONALLY now that Bryant remembered it was all a dream. The dread of waking up didn't affect him quite so poignantly. That is to say, it didn't affect him until this night when they were alone in the garden. Then he was seized with a sudden panicky sensation.

And so quite abruptly Bryant turned and said without preliminaries: "Doris, darling, I love you. I know this is all a dream, therefore I'm telling you now before I wake up. I've waited all my life for such a girl as you. It seems cruel that you'd come to me only in a dream."

And Doris turned up her face to his, with the moon making shadows of her eyes, and said: "I love you, too, Bryant, and I'm glad you waited for me. I hardly know what I would have done had I discovered you belonged to some one else."

Bryant thought this over and decided that the dream had turned out just the way he would have ordered. He'd better wake himself up, he thought, before he did something to spoil it. But before he could pinch himself, which was the conventional way of waking oneself from a dream, Doris laid her head on his shoulder.

Bryant looked down at the golden head. "Doris," he said brokenly, "this is all a dream, and in a minute you'll be gone and I'll find myself alone. You're not real."

But Doris laughed softly, and snuggled closer. Bryant slowly put his arm about her slim shoulders. She was there, close against him. Her lips were upturned, and as Bryant bent to kiss them, he knew that when again he opened his eyes, she'd still be there—and would always be there.

Star Dust

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

WHEN RONNIE ALCORN was 13 he was sent to reform school; he says it was the first time he slept in a clean bed or had enough to eat. That was in 1932. It was his ambition to produce motion pictures—"Johnny Holiday", made at that same reform school, is his first one, and he plans eight more, for United Artists release. His story is fantastic, that of an underprivileged boy born to be a success (he had made his first million by the time he was 30) who took plenty of hard knocks on the way to achieving it. He has a second ambition—to help as many underprivileged boys as possible; he has already done a terrific job at it.

We're always hearing about movie stars who dash from one set to another on a bicycle, when working in two pictures. And about radio performers who leap from studio to studio in taxis. But Kent Smith has out-done them all. For a week he commuted daily by plane between Hollywood and San Francisco, to do a stage role and finish a picture. His latest is "My Foolish Heart."

Vera Vague may sound dumb as a man-chasing comedienne on the air—at present on Jimmy Durante's program on NBC—but away from the radio Vera, otherwise Barbara Jo Allen, can talk for hours about orchids, her two hothouses, and the third one she's building. During the Christmas holidays her white orchids retailed in New York for $25 apiece. Not bad!

Teresa Wright invited her husband, Niven Busch, to visit her on the set when she did some torrid love scenes with Marlon Brando for "The Men". He stalked out, blushing. But Robert Cummings' wife was present when he made love scenes with Lizabeth Scott and Diana Lynn for "Paid in Full," time after time, and nobody was the least bit embarrassed by the routine.

KEEPING HEALTHY

New Treatment of Bronchial Asthma

By Dr. James W. Barton

FOR MANY YEARS the treatment for an attack of asthma had been the injection of 10 to 15 minims (drops) of adrenalin (epinephrine) under the skin. Lately we have been hearing and reading about the satisfactory results obtained in both asthma and hay fever by the use of the drug benadryl, of which I have written several times.

As most of us are aware, it is the histamine in the body that causes us to be sensitive or allergic to various substances such as food, feathers, furs, pollen of plants and house dust. For this reason, research physicians have been using newly discovered antihistaminic preparations to overcome the histamine in the system. Among these antihistaminics is benadryl.

In "The Southern Medical Journal," Dr. L. L. Friedman reports that acute attacks of bronchial asthma were easily stopped, reduced in frequency and severity or prevented entirely by aerosol benadryl administered by means of a hand bulb nebulizer. Each aerosol treatment consisted of 10 to 15 drops benadryl solution (steri-Benadryl).

The 12 patients studied ranged in age from four to 43 years. Nine patients had previously been treated with systematically administered antihistaminics and in seven cases treatment had failed.

The other two patients had obtained decided relief from both aerosol and benadryl taken by mouth. These patients, including one who had suffered from asthma for 25 years, had had no previous antihistaminic treatment.

All of the 12 patients benefitted from treatment with nebulized benadryl aerosol. Acute attacks of asthma were stopped with as little as seven to eight minims of the aerosol. Treatment by this method either prevented attacks of asthma entirely or lengthened the time between attacks. When attacks did occur, they were milder.

The attack is usually stopped within 10 minutes, and difficult breathing and wheezing promptly stopped.

Tuberculosis after 40 is not a rarity today, and is much more common than is generally supposed.

Control of tuberculosis starts with finding people who are sick. It goes on by putting them in hospitals where they can be treated and where they cannot infect others.

While the ulcer patient may recover from an acute attack of peptic ulcer, there is always the chance that he will again have symptoms if he gets careless about his diet.

Luke Easter Eyes Babe's Record

By GRANTLAND RICE

THOSE INTERESTED in the slugging side of baseball should now turn to the West coast. Ted Williams came up from San Diego but they have two younger men inhabiting the Pacific's slope who may pick most of the laurel this new season. One is Ralph Kiner of the Pittsburgh Pirates and the other is Luke Easter with the Cleveland Indians. It so happens that Kiner has passed the 50-home-run mark twice.

Grantland Rice

"Reaching the 60 mark is a different story," Ralph tells you. "Hank Greenberg and Jimmy Foxx found that out, and both could hit the ball a long way. Once you get into the 50 zone, I guess you begin to overtry as the days begin to run out. The Babe never bothered. He just kept swinging."

Kiner is still a young ballplayer. He should have his best hitting years on ahead. He takes good care of his physical fitness and he has a workshop where he keeps the equipment needed to strengthen his grip and wrists. His ball club fell apart last year and this didn't help him a lot.

Actually no one thinks about beating the Babe's old mark of 60. It may happen some day as 58 has been tied twice and 56 has been reached on two occasions. Greenberg, Foxx, Hack Wilson and Kiner have been the four main challengers so far. Now Hank Greenberg enters Luke Easter, the San Diego giant, as another likely challenger. Easter is around six feet four, and weighs some 240 pounds

"Beyond that," Hank says, "he has what you might call a home run swing. I mean by that a full, free swing—the type that Babe had. I believe Easter can hit the ball as hard as Ruth did and drive it just as far. He may not be able to do this as often, however. Easter will be a Cleveland rookie and you can't expect too much of him the first year. I believe his power will still win many a game for us and either bring Cleveland in as a pennant winner or at least one of the leading challengers. You can't afford to crawl too far out on the end of a limb for a rookie, but I'll go quite a distance for Easter."

As Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio are West coast entries, this gives the Pacific a big edge in long-distance wallopers. They will have most of the crop. Give DiMag 130 games and he may outslug them all.

Big Coast Game

Red Blaik's Army team is headed for the West coast next fall to start an entanglement with Stanford. They are already rating this one of the big games of the 1950 season. There's pretty fair reason for this rating.

With Pollard, a Los Angeles product, playing in Army's backfield, the West coast experts figure Army will have one of the star backs of the season. At least he made a big name in a hurry at Loyola, where he played only a year before heading for the far-away banks of the Hudson.

I've heard nothing but boosts for the ex-Loyola halfback. Add Pollard to Bob Blaik, Stephenson and Cain and you get one of the best backfields Army ever sent into a football melee. You can always bank on Red Blaik and his staff for a fast-charging, hard-hitting defensive platoon. So if the expected takes place, Army will again have one of the strong teams of the country—possibly the strongest with so many veterans leaving Notre Dame.

"But don't figure the 1950 Stanford squad will be easy for anyone," a Stanford grad said when the discussion came up. "Marchy Schwartz had a fine sophomore crop this last fall. All they needed was experience. They got plenty of that. Also I could say that Stanford's freshman team this last fall was the best in many years. Palo Alto will be packed with high-class football players. This should be the best Stanford team since Clark Shaughnessy turned out the bunch that had Frankie Albert & Co. It will be big, fast and three-deep. And by the time of the Army game it will be well seasoned."

Joe Louis and 1950

Just what plans Joe Louis has for the rest of 1950 is anybody's guess—including Joe's. But you can enter one sure answer—if Joe fights again, it will be a morbid spectacle that only the morbid in heart would care to see.

In recent months Louis has been working beyond exhibition purposes to get back in shape. He has been doing road work of fair proportions and a certain amount of gymnasium boxing.

BLUE CROSS-BLUE SHIELD ENROLLMENT ENDS

March 6th is the deadline for residents of Hancock County who wish to join Blue Cross-Blue Shield surgical for hospital and surgical care through the Hancock County Health Improvement Association, Virgil Cook, president of the association, has announced. Upon acceptance by Hospital, Inc., of Iowa contracts will be effective April 1, 1950.

Blue Cross-Blue Shield membership gives a sense of security and freedom from worry over hospital bills and doctor's bills for surgical care, Mr. Cook said. Blue Cross-Blue Shield members can leave home confident that if they should be hospitalized or need surgical care while away their Blue Cross-Blue Shield benefits will be available. In 102 member hospitals and 15 associate member hospitals of the local Blue Cross Plan and 4000 member hospitals of the other Blue Cross Plans, members are entitled to Blue Cross service benefits. Doctors outside of the State of Iowa are allowed the same schedule of fees as the Blue Shield participating doctors here at home.

Mr. Cook urged those who wish to join Blue Cross-Blue Shield to get their applications in before the deadline, March 6. Applications can be signed at the Farm Bureau office in Garner on the final day, March 6th with the Blue Cross representative.

PLAN FINAL 4-H ENROLLMENT ACTIVITY

Final stages of the 1950 4-H enrollment program in Hancock County will be held during National 4-H Club Week, March 4-12, Hancock county extension youth assistant said today.

"National 4-H Club Week is held annually in tribute to the outstanding achievements made by 4-H club members throughout the United States," he declared. "In Iowa, we do most of our enrolling in October so that members can take part in the full year's activities. Hancock County will put the finishing touches on its 1950 membership activity during the week."

To date, 456 boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 21 have enrolled in the club program in the county. "There is little time left for interested young people to enroll and get started in their projects," he said. The Iowa 4-H enrollment goal for 1950 is set at 50,000 members.

To meet our quota Hancock County needs 500 members. Every member should make it his job to bring a new member to their next meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Herlein lived in Goodell from 1931 to 1936 when he held the pastorate of the E. U. B. Church. Mrs. Herlein was severely injured in an auto accident a few years ago.

Little Cattle Feeders Met

The Little Cattle Feeders 4-H Club held a tractor maintenance school last Thursday evening at the John Deere Implement business house in Meservey. This school was in place of the regular February meeting and was attended by all the boys.

—Reporter, Lee Gruis

BY BOB HULLIHAN

"The whole thing was weird," the patrolmen said. We were called out in the middle of the night. It was dark and cold and quiet. We found the four people standing along the highway by a sharp curve on a hill. A girl was hysterical.

They had been in a group which was traveling in two cars, one car behind the other. The girl kept saying that she had seen the lights of the following car, "Just disapear. Just disappear." We pulled the patrol car up to the edge of the curve and flashed the spot down into the ravine below. It must have been twenty or thirty feet deep.

There wasn't a sign of a car down there. Snow had just fallen but there were no tire tracks. A few trees cut off our view so we climbed down into the ravine with flashlights.

But we still didn't find anything. Then we walked in among the trees and came to a clearing. There was something strange in there. The snow was swept off the ground and was piled up in a circle around the edge of the clearing.

It was then we found the car, smashed against the base of a tree. All four doors were blown open and the two passengers were out on the ground, dead.

Back up on the curve we could look straight out and see where the car had sailed through the tops of the trees. It must have landed right in the middle of that clearing further up the ravine. It must have landed like a bomb.

It was the most weird investigation I've ever made - tracking a car among the trees. What happened? No one would say. But it looked as though there had been a race. One car made the curve and the other car - just disappeared."

VERN STROMER PUTS IN PLUG FOR IOWA ON SOUTHERN TOUR

V. A. Stromer, along with some 110 other dealers for the Carlson Hybrid Corn Co. of Audubon, Iowa, returned home Saturday night from a ten day trip through the southern states and deep sea fishing in the Gulf of Mexico, all paid for in silver dollars by the Carlson Co. All had a fine time and enjoyed the beautiful scenery. The group also took in the Mardi Gras celebration at New Orleans and visited many points of interest in the south.

Stromer The Rodeo Rider!

But here comes the "pay-off." As the group was going through Louisiana they came to a Rodeo along the highway. Stromer could not resist the smell of sweating horses and saddle leather and there was nothing to do but hold up the trip and take in the Rodeo, which was being put on by a southern saddle club, so the trip came to a halt to please Stromer.

Stromer of course, looked up the president of the Club and introduced himself as the President of the Garner, Iowa, Saddle Club. Before Vern knew what was going on he was in front of the micraphone and was introduced to the crowd and of course had to give a speech. Vern arose to the occasion and gave them a real speech on good old Iowa and the fine saddle clubs we have up here.

Vern must have piled it on heavy because he was then asked to give a demonstration of riding. This he could not back out of so he was put aboard a fine saddle horse and really showed them he could ride with the best of them and made a big hit. Iowa really got some swell advertising at that Southern Saddle Club Rodeo!

From that time on during the trip Stromer was forever being pointed out as "that Rodeo Rider from Iowa."

TALENT QUEST ON FOR IOWA "AMATEUR HOUR" BROADCAST

Des Moines—Des Moines will be saluted as honor city of America by Ted Mack and "The Original Amateur Hour" on ABC network Thursday night, April 27, and on NBC television network Tuesday, May 2nd. The radio program is heard in Central Iowa over station KRNT every Thursday night at eight o'clock.

The April 27th salute program will originate from the KRNT Theater under auspices of the Temple Sisterhood, with all proceeds going to that organization's activities, including aid-to-the-blind work.

The 45-minute broadcast will be part of a big 25-act, 2½ hour show that will include one of the all-star touring units of the "Original Amateur Hour." Both the radio and television programs, each with a minimum of 12 acts, will be broadcast coast to coast.

Talent Quest Announced

On Monday, March 6, KRNT will begin a talent quest for the Des Moines broadcast. A series of auditions of all types of entertainment has been planned to provide most of the April 27th program.

Persons interested in auditioning for the KRNT-Original Amateur Hour talent quest should write to Charles Miller director, KRNT, Des Moines, Iowa, giving name, age, telephone number, if any, and type of entertainment.

Both the radio and televised versions of the Original Amateur Hour are produced by the Major Bowes staff, under sponsorship of Old Gold Cigarettes.

GOOD NEIGHBORLY DEED

Several men from the Evangelical and Reformed Church gathered at the Raymond Barz home recently to aid with the work, to help repay for the many hours he had spent in taking care of the various activities of the church. Raymond reports that these men hauled 34 loads of manure, and after all the barns were cleaned, they bedded down all the stables again.

Those who furnished tractors and spreaders were as follows: Leonard Kaduce, Milvern Barz, Dean Rasmus, Herman Schmidt, Fred Schmidt, Alvin Schlicting, Lewis Griffen, John Einhuis, Herman Meints, Elmer Bachman, Laurice Lemke, John Kaduce, Sr., John Kaduce, Jr., Luther Schmidt.

Needless to say, some of the wives were there, and helped serve a good dinner for the men. That was a good deed, and again I say, that is the fun of living in a small community, where we are one great big family.

Mr. & Mrs. Verner Nelson 25th Anniversary Feb. 25

NELSONS CELEBRATE 25TH ANNIVERSARY

A group of forty friends and neighbors gathered at the Verner Nelson home Friday evening, for a surprise party in honor of the Nelson's twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

Various games were played throughout the evening, with part of the entertainment being a hill billy wedding staged by the guests. The wedding party sedately marched in to the tune of "The Old Gray Mare." John Lass was appropriately cast as the young and blushing bride, with Mrs. Sibert Shoop acting as the happy, handsome bridegroom. Sibert Shoop stood by with a shot gun, as "Parson" Ed. Green made the couple promise to love, honor and help each other with the milking.

Merlyn Helps was a very sweet bridesmaid, while Lois Helps served as best man. Wally Green carried fruit jar rings on a corn cob pillow, and Barbara and Blanche Shoop were train bearers.

Additional entertainment was furnished by Miss Lydia Pearson reading a poem and a solo by Mrs. Henry Busse.

Mrs. Busse baked and decorated a lovely wedding cake, and the group sang "Congratulations To You," as the 25 candles were lit.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson were presented with an occasional table by the guests.

MR. AND MRS. VERNER NELSON CELEBRATE THEIR ANNIVERSARY

Saturday, February 25th, was the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Verner Nelson, and on Sunday friends and relatives were invited to the Klemme Methodist Church parlors to help them celebrate the event. Their two daughters, Miss Ardella, of Madison, Wisconsin, and Miss Erdene, of Des Moines, planned this celebrattion for their parents.

Mrs. Anton Pannkuk of Garner was Toastmistress for the occasion. The first number on the program was a song, "Blest Be The Tie That Binds, which was led by Mrs. Vern Bisom. Scripture reading of the 13th Chapter of Corinthians, on Love, was read by Mrs. C. A. Arnold. Which was followed by address of welcome by Mrs. Pannkuk. Here the parents of Verner, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Nelson of Garner were presented. It was learned they had a wedding anniversary the same day, and theirs was the 47th anniversary. Then a poem was read by Mrs. Henry Busse, "Seek Not For Beauty." Which was followed by a solo, "Because" sang by Mrs. Vern Bisom, and accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Harry Gibbs. Then Mrs. Pannkuk read the history of the Nelson family, from childhood, to the twenty-fifth eventful day, which was enjoyed by all the guests. Then Mrs. Elmer Larson read a poem, which was followed by more group singing. Mrs. Vern Bisom, sang "Bless This House." Rev. Egeland gave a talk, which included some funny stories, and poems, "Fellow Who Is So Nice Awake," "Anniversary Poem," "Ours, Better Than Mine," which was followed by some fine remarks, and a prayer.

Mrs. Pannkuk presented the gift table to the Nelsons, and both Mr. and Mrs. Nelson responded. The program was closed by singing "Till We Meet Again." The honored guests were invited to their table, which was recorated with tapering candles, and yellow snapdragons, and a four tier wedding cake topped with a silver bell. The other guests were invited to help themselves at a table, where Mrs. D. P. Anderson and Mrs. Henry Busse were pouring. It was decorated with blue and white, delphiniums, tapering candles, with silver flairs. A very dainty lunch was served followed by ice cream and the wedding cake. The waitresses were: Marie Lauen, Leonore Swalve, Mrs. Elmer Larson, Mrs. Marvin A. Lauen, and Mrs. Earl Bachman. Mrs. Lloyd Jaspersen of Rockwell had charge of the guest book. The guests were from Rockwell, Mason City, Belmond, Thornton, Garner, and Klemme.

Ardella thanked her Aunt for being Toastmistress, and was so happy for having such grand parents, and such nice friends who came and helped them celebrate.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson received many useful and beautiful gifts to help them remember this happy occasion.

How to Reduce

Agnes was always complaining about being fat. She was always reading magazines looking for some simple reducing exercise.

When she asked advice from her doctor he told her he had a sure-fire system.

"Tell me quick!" said Agnes, putting away a candy bar.

"Just shake your head firmly from left to right every time you're offered a second helping, or a candy bar," he replied.

Real Flat Tire

Mrs. Strong was talking as their car pulled into the filling station.

"Pardon me," said the attendant, "but did I hear you say you had a flat tire?"

"Right!" snapped Mrs. Strong. "That's him all over. Never wants to go anywhere. He's a perfect joy-killer."

And she continued to glare at her husband while the attendant busied himself at the gas pump.

Not Final Cost

Mary had just returned from the hospital after an operation. She was trying to console her husband about the expense and said:

"At least it didn't cost as much as a fancy funeral."

"No, I know," he sighed, "but a funeral would have been permanent."

Works in Shifts

A city woman visiting in Kentucky hills came to a farm where a man was lying on the front porch, while a woman worked in the fields.

"Isn't that hard work for your wife?" asked the visitor.

"Yep," he said, "but we work in shifts, hereabouts."

"Oh, I see," said the visitor. "When she gets tired, you take over."

"Nope," replied the farmer, "when she gits tired out in the field, she shifts to the house chores."

New Method of Payment

A Chinese laundryman had been in the habit of eating his rice in front of a Chinese restaurant, sniffing the appetizing odors.

One day he received a bill from his neighbor for "the smell of his food." The poor man promptly went indoors and appeared with a small money box and rattled it in the ears of his "creditor," saying: "I hereby pay for the smell of your food with the sound of my money."

When Feathers Bloom

It was Jackie's first visit to the country, and feeding the chickens fascinated him. Early one morning he caught a glimpse of a peacock sunning himself on the lawn. Rushing indoors excitedly, Jackie said:

"Oh, Granny, one of the chickens is in bloom."

"Did you get up on the wrong side of your bed again?"

the fight Doc Kearns and into Duffey's Old Tavern. I heard someone call my name. It was Greb. So I went over and sat with his gang. Later on they all left us, leaving only Harry and myself. By that time my right eye was closed tight and badly swollen. We became great friends and the ale we drank didn't hurt us any.

"Finally about 3 a. m. we decided to look up another tavern. As we got to the door I said to Greb—'Say, if you hadn't closed my right eye I could have licked you.'

"Greb turned on me with a snarl. I thought he was going to bite me. 'Say,' he said, 'you couldn't lick me if I cut off both arms.'

"Now," Mickey said, "we had just fought before a packed house at Madison Square Garden at plenty dollars a seat. We had just been paid very big money. And here we were heading for another fight with just three spectators who were paying nothing.

"'Come on,' Greb said, 'let's fight it out here.' He started taking off his coat. As he got the coat about halfway off, which locked up or tied up both arms, I nailed him on the chin with everything I had. It was a nectarine, full of juice. Greb spun and crashed into the side of a car so hard he dented the running board. I never threw a harder punch and he was wide open.

"I guess I was lucky. You couldn't kill Greb with an axe. He bounded back from the car and started for me, when a pair of cops arrived. Our three no-pay spectators were still there. They shoved me in one cab and Harry in another.

"Greb was a great fellow. I never liked anyone better. The next day Tex Rickard sent for us. He offered us $100,000 each for a return match. Now $100,000 isn't goulash. But Greb turned to me and said—'Mickey, there are too many guys around I can beat easier than I can beat you. I like the easy dough. I can make just as much fighting them.'

"I'll tell you about Greb. He was a great guy. He was a great fighter and one of the gamest men I ever met. And don't believe all those stories about his being out of condition. He fought himself into shape. No man could travel 15 rounds at top speed and be out of shape.

"He had superb skill and the heart of two lions. I've seen Greb go faster and harder in the 15th round than he did in the first. He liked to upset Broadway gamblers by faking a drunk now and then. But when you met him, look out!"

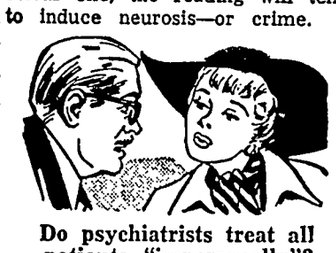
MIRROR Of Your MIND

Gruesome Stories Offer 'Therapy'

By Lawrence Gould

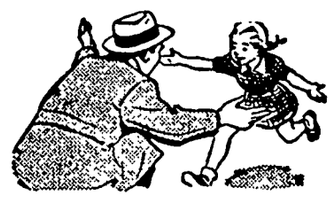
Is it morbid to like gruesome stories?

Answer: It is the aggressive or sadistic side of you that makes you like such stories, but they may affect you in two different ways. In a relatively normal person, reading the gruesome details of an actual or fictional murder, and unconsciously identifying himself (as most people do) with both the killer and the victim, tends to "drain off" harmlessly the traces of childish or primitive impulses that otherwise might make trouble. But if the identification is a conscious one, the reading will tend to induce neurosis—or crime.



Do psychiatrists treat all patients "impersonally"?

Answer: No. There are types of emotional disturbance which are mainly the result of the victim's feeling that nobody cares for or is interested in him, and no progress can be made with such a person unless you can get him to feel differently. Especially with the schizophrenic, it is vital that the attitude of everyone who comes in contact with him shall seem friendly and solicitous. Not until you are convinced that the psychiatrist is your friend can he attempt the sometimes humiliating probing that complete cure will require.



Is moral character inborn?

Answer: No, writes Dr. Judd Marmor, California psychiatrist, in "Philosophy for the Future." From the psychoanalytic standpoint, you are born neither bad nor good, and the forms in which your potentialities develop depend on the incentives offered to you by the society you grow up in, and above all by your parents. A child will adopt the patterns of behavior which he finds win the love and approval of his parents and the good will of his playmates, and without such an incentive any virtues he acquires will be forced and superficial.

Odd Things Happen At Carnegie Hall As Famous Appear

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Nearly 50 years ago a young man lectured in historic Carnegie hall on a subject which would undoubtedly serve him better at the present time. The subject was: "The War as I saw It," illustrated with lantern slides. And the lecturer was Winston Churchill, then a freshman correspondent who has escaped during the Boer war from Ladysmith, South Africa.

Churchill was only one of many great men and women who appeared on that same old stage, John J. Totten, house manager of Carnegie hall, recalls.

Carnegie hall was opened in May, 1891, with Tchaikovsky conducting the first concert. Years afterward, Tchaikovsky said of the famous Manhattan landmark:

"When I come to the stage of Carnegie hall to conduct a concert, as soon as the music begins I forget all the surroundings, for I have the impression of a sonority like a Stradivarious. . . . It is my conclusion that Carnegie hall is one among the very few best auditoriums, acoustically. It will be a pity if one day an idea should come to anyone to abolish this historically and musically ideal auditorium."

Totten, who has been with Carnegie hall for 43 years, first as an usher, next as assistant house manager and for 22 years in his present capacity, told some of the highlights of the past and a few of the more recent happenings.

In 1918, Caruso, Heifetz and Rachmaninoff occupied the stage one afternoon, lending their talents for a Red Cross benefit.

"There was a Turkish meeting one night in the hall," Totten said. They wanted to decide which city was to be the capital of Turkey. It ended in a near riot, with women using hatpins as weapons on those who did not agree with them."

Totten recalled that in 1919 the hall had its biggest flop when President Woodrow Wilson spoke there after he had returned from the peace conference in France. The hall was only half full—because, Totten explained, there were so many policemen, detectives and secret service men around the entrance that the waiting crowd could not get in.

Antihistamines Break Cold Early

By Dr. James W. Barton

ONE OF THE GREAT problems in industry is the great loss of time caused by the common cold. For many years various methods of breaking up a cold, before it gets a real hold on the patient, have been investigated. Most of these methods have not been successful.

A course of treatment which may be of great help in breaking up the common cold early is reported in "Industrial Medicine," by Dr. J. M. Brewster, from investigations at a United States navy compound. Drugs to counteract histamine which is manufactured by the body were tried. Among these were benadryl, pyribenzamine, pyranisamine and others.

A cold was considered to have been broken up or cured when all signs and symptoms disappeared within 24 hours of the beginning of the treatment. All symptoms were aborted in 19 of 21 patients in whom treatment with antihistaminic drugs was begun within the first hour after the onset of the symptoms, and in 48 of 55 patients treated within two hours of the onset.

One hundred and sixteen of 156 patients who received treatment within 12 hours of the onset, were also cured. Thus, as in other ailments, the treatment is more effective the earlier it is given. The results obtained by the usual form of treatment (codeine papaverine) were much less favorable than those obtained by the antihistamine drugs.

Two or three doses of the antihistaminic drugs at four-hour intervals are enough to stop the symptoms in 90 per cent of the cases, if treatment is given within a few hours after the first symptoms of the cold appear.

Dr. Brewster believes that the number of colds will be reduced when the antihistaminic drugs get rid of the sneezing, coughing and profuse discharge from the nose which is now left invisibly on door knobs, faucet handles, handrails and in the air.

MASTER HOG MEN USE TOP METHODS

Prevent Chilling, Crushing Of Baby Pigs And Use Good Sanitation

Hog raisers can get some pointers on how to save pigs this spring by observing some of the practices used by top-notch hog men such as Iowa Swine Producers.

In reports sent to E. L. Quaife, extension swine specialist at Iowa State College in charge of the project, these top hog men point to sanitation, and preventing chilling and crushing as important factors in reducing baby pig losses. Iowa's 1949 Master Swine Producers weaned an average of 9.15 pigs per sow out of 400-500 litters last spring, the best record in the past eight years.

Sanitation is stressed by all of the 25 hog men. Of the 25, 17 scrubbed out farrowing pens ahead of farrowing. Others used a blow torch or dip solution to clean up the pens.

Scrub Out Pens

Quaife recommends using one pound of lye in 15 gallons of hot water for scrubbing out pens. He says it is desirable to have scalding-hot water but where impractical, the farmer should come as close to having the ideal as possible. A blow torch is good, but Quaife cautions to use it only on concrete floors and to be careful of fire. Steam under pressure also does a good job of cleaning.

Cleaning up farrowing pens reduces the chances of navel infection and nutritional disturbances caused by filth and parasites. If a farmer has had considerable trouble from navel infection in baby pigs, he says it's a good idea to dip the navel in tincture of iodine at farrowing time.

Have Guard Rails, Heat

Most Master Swine Producers use heat lamps or electric brooders and guard rails to prevent chilling and crushing, which causes many young pig losses. Others use oil stoves or some other type of circulating heater. All but two producers provided some kind of heat.

Producers credited the heat for keeping down scours. Quaife agrees that keeping pens clean, dry and warm to prevent chilling of pigs will help head off scours. However, he points out that other factors such as the feed a sow gets also contribute to scours.

Master Swine Producers also say it's a good pig-saving idea to handle gilts before farrowing to make them quieter mothers, and to pay close attention at farrowing time. Some men report practically living in the hog house during farrowing.

MAY APPEAL CORN ACRE ALLOTMENTS

Hancock County PMA chairman, A. E. Rasmussen, has announced that the acreage allotment for corn in Hancock County in 1945 will be 108,646 acres. The 3-year historical average was 140,379 acres and the cut in acreage for individual farmers hasn't been definitely established but will vary from 20 to 23 per cent.

Farmers who are dissatisfied with their respective acreage allotment may file an appeal within 15 days from the time they receive the notice of their allotment from the PMA office.

Corn acreage taken out of production may be converted to other cash crops but PMA officials are urging that these be replaced with legumes and other soil building and conserving crops. It is estimated that 75 per cent of Hancock County farmers will comply with the PMA recommended acreage.

Bethke's Old Timers Travel To Des Moines

Charles Bethke, leader of The Old Timers, chartered a bus and took all the members, and their wives, to Des Moines Thursday to attend the great "Skating Vanities" show. It was advertised as being the greatest spectacle on wheels. They left Garner in the middle of the afternoon and picked up Mrs. Verner Stromer and C. G. Waterman from Klemme, and they had lots of fun, singing and telling jokes all the way to Des Moines. When they arrived there it was almost the greatest spectacle on wheels too, as the streets were one glare of ice, and it was hard traveling. They all enjoyed the evening show and the trip back home.

TOP BRASS HONORED BY CORRESPONDENTS . . . Members of the American war correspondents association have not always used treacle to grease their typewriters when writing of top brass. But recently, the correspondents awarded honorary memberships to a group of wartime leaders (left to right): Adm. Thomas C. Kincaid, commander of the eastern sea frontier; Gen. C. B. Gates, commandant of the marine corps; Fleet Adm. Chester Nimitz; Adm. Forrest Sherman, chief of naval operations; and Fleet Adm. William Halsey, retired.

BERLIN BACKDOWN . . . J. P. McNulty, chief of United States property branch, removes a requisition from the entrance to the rail directorate building in the U. S. sector of Berlin while two west German police look on. The building was occupied by west German police after the Reds were ousted. The Russians implied that if it were not returned to them the blockade would be resumed. Gen. Maxwell Taylor, U. S. sector commander, gave the order to return the building "in the interest of the peace of the city." The building now is occupied by Red rail authorities but the Russians are continuing a "baby blockade" of Berlin, stopping truck traffic into the city upon the slightest excuse and causing British and American officials many inconveniences in the administering of the affairs of the allied sectors.

ENJOYING A $100-DINNER . . . Rep. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., (left) dines with New York's fire commissioner, Frank Quayle, at a $100-a-plate dinner at the Hotel Commodore in New York city. Young Roosevelt addressed the gathering and told guests at the dinner that the Republican stand on fair employment practice legislation smacks "of hypocrisy, double dealing and political maneuvering." He added that the Democrats, in contrast, win repeated successes by remembering the people. Republican reaction to Roosevelt's remarks has not been gauged.

JAPANESE NATIONALS RETURN FROM SIBERIA . . . Hundreds of people line the streets at Maizuru, Japan, to welcome and greet a contingent of Japanese nationals who were the first to be repatriated from Siberia, according to unofficial reports. Of the 2,500 former prisoners to arrive aboard the Takasago Maru from Nahodka, 200 were ill and required hospital treatment. Some Japanese, released several months ago by the Russians, had been indoctrinated with communism, and upon their return home, they surprised their countrymen by staging a Communist demonstration in their homeland. Russia has been accused of turning Nippon prisoners into slave laborers for work on Russian projects.

He resented General Groves' implication that he was not to be trusted with atomic information.

OUT OF THE PAST

Zither Gains Many Friends

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The good old zither, with its 40 or so strings and its quaint charm, is having a revival. Probably the least exciting musical instrument in the world, when it begins to make a comeback in popularity, that's news.

It is rapidly gaining favor here and London, England, seems to be in the throes of a mild zither "craze." An English movie, "The Third Man," which stars Orson Welles in the role of a Vienna racketeer named Harry Lime, was made by Carol Reed. Reed had heard one Anton Karas playing a tune in a Vienna beer garden. He hired Karas to play it for film.

Theme Became Favorite

The result was that the "Harry Lime theme" became a favorite tune in Britain and zither players were dug up for the fashionable saloon trade.

Nothing goes away forever. Most people have an irresistible longing to do and use the things that pleased their granddads. The psychoanalysts have an explanation for it—the instinctive longing for a return to the security of prenatal life. But no matter how you explain it, the evidence is all around you, in sizable stacks.

The bustle was a symbol of Victorian primness, and yet it was accepted in the 1940's. The plunk-plunk of the banjo gave way to the slap-slap of the string bass in dance bands nearly 20 years ago, and the banjo was counted out.

But a few seasons back the irrepressible Art Mooney vowed that the banjo was too valuable an instrument to be neglected, and he and his band recorded "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover" for a new generation, and the banjo stole the show.

The banjo has been taken up by other bandsmen and showmen, too. Billy Rose's latest Broadway revue was called "Banjo on My Knee" and was pretty much of a revival of the old minstrel show and "The Black Crook" extravaganza of grandfather's youth. The maestro himself wrote the theme song, "Bring Back Those Old Minstrel Days" and he hired as many veterans as he could accomodate from the old Primrose and West era.

Old Things Liked

Youngsters today ride fast cars, but they concede that the old-fashioned hayride and sleigh ride parties have their undeniable attraction. The phonograph and radio bring huge and dependable blasts of music, but they haven't driven out the delicate little music boxes, which still are sold in quantities, and which still tinkle their interpretations of "Merrily We Roll Along" and "How Dry I Am."

Television is a big thing these days, but it hasn't displaced the stereopticon, not by a grand canyon full. The newfangled stereopticons use small colored film squares instead of the old big picture postcards, but they still reveal all the gleaming wonders of nature's standbys—the Wisconsin Dells and Yellowstone Park, Mount Lassen volcano and hundreds of other views.

It's easy to have your pound of coffee ground by that growling engine on the cash counter, but does that mean that grandma's coffee mill has gone down the chute to extinction? Not at all. The old-time little walnut mill, with the rotating handle on top and the little drawer to catch the ground coffee is again on the market, and it makes an even cuter gadget than the old-style home ice cream freezer, which is likewise enjoying a new sweep in popularity.

Soda-Fountain Sundae Banned as Fire Hazard

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—A soda-fountain sundae has been banned here as a fire hazard. The ban was issued by fire chief Thomas F. Burke.

The ice cream concoction, featured by a local drugstore, was known as the "flaming sundae."

It consisted of a half pint of ice cream, 1½ ounces of hot fudge, an ounce of marshmallow, a cube of sugar, nuts, and three drops of lemon extract.

The extract, containing 70 per cent alcohol, was poured on the sugar and set ablaze before serving.

Burke ruled the delicacy was a fire hazard to fur coats, sweaters, and cotton dresses.

Crossing Atlantic by Air Old Story to 19-Month-Old

NEW YORK.—Crossing the Atlantic by air is getting to be old stuff for 19-month-old Michael Mahy—who does it as casually as if he were stepping into and out of his toddler.

His father, traffic manager for an airline, said the boy had been shuttling over the ocean because his grandparents in Brussels "don't seem to be satisfied to have him away from them for very long."

Michael spends some time in the cockpit with the crew, visits with the passengers, tries to be of help in the galley, and more than once has wound up in the service bar his dad says.

Sonny had read many fairy tales but apparently had never realized until now that most of them began: "Once upon a time."

"Do all of them begin that way?" he asked his mother.

It was decided by the members of a humane society to restock store window and put in an exhibit of wild furred animals to aid them in their campaign against the ruthless killing of such creatures. It was a grand exhibit and was spoiled only by a little boy who insisted upon getting his dad amongst the stuffed animals.

"I belong in there," he insisted. At first they thought he was intoxicated but when he pointed out his argument they admitted he had some cause for his action.

His reason for wanting to be in the exhibit was a large sign the society had had printed and placed in the window. It read: "We were skinned to provide a coat for fashionable women."

Hadacol is Helpful to Folks of All Age Groups

Countless thousands have proved that HADACOL is beneficial to folks of all ages.

For instance, Miss Ethel Guidry, 822 Montgomery St., Port Neches, Texas, only 17 years old, was "feeling nervous, had little appetite, her face was pale and drawn and she suffered from gas on the stomach." Miss Guidry says she could not eat the kind and type of food she wanted without feeling terrible afterwards.

Miss Guidry

Miss Guidry, who recently graduated from high school, is already working in a bank. She said that after taking several bottles of HADACOL she is now "feeling wonderful," and has "lots of pep and energy."

Most folks take HADACOL because it has worked such wonders for relatives or friends. Miss Guidry took HADACOL because her mother had taken 12 bottles with excellent results.

In nearby Port Arthur, Texas, Mrs. W. M. Thompson took HADACOL because it had done her husband so much good. That is the reason so many purchase the large economy size bottle so all the family can benefit from nature's Vitamins and Minerals in HADACOL.

Mrs. Thompson

Mrs. Thompson's normal weight is 135 pounds, but she was down to 110 pounds before taking HADACOL, and after taking a few bottles of HADACOL she regained her normal weight.

"I was bothered with stomach trouble, gastric disturbances, I had lost my appetite and was bloated," said Mrs. Thompson. She had tried several preparations before taking her husband's advice on HADACOL and now she enthusiastically recommends HADACOL to her friends.

She, too, like Miss Guidry and the others, was suffering from the lack of the B Vitamins and Minerals in her system which HADACOL contains.

A lack of only a small amount of the B Vitamins and certain Minerals will cause digestive disturbances.... Your food will not agree with you. . . .You will have an upset stomach. . . . You will suffer from heart burns, gas pains, and your food will sour on your stomach, and you will not be able to eat the things you like for fear of being in misery afterwards. Many people also suffer from constipation. And while these symptoms may be the results of other causes, they are surely and certainly the symptoms and signs of the lack of the B Vitamins and Minerals contained in HADACOL. And if you suffer from such a disorder, there is no medicine, drug or treatment that will cure you except the administration of the Vitamins and Minerals which your system lacks.

HADACOL contains not only one, but five of the B Vitamins. HADACOL contains not only one, but four of the necessary Minerals. It comes to you in liquid form, easily assimilated in the blood stream so that it can go to work right away. You cannot be satisfied with just temporary relief. HADACOL attacks and cures the source of such deficiency diseases.

It is easy to understand, therefore, why countless thousands have already been benefited by this amazing tonic, HADACOL. Accept no substitute—insist on the genuine HADACOL!

So, it matters not who you are... it matters not where you live... or if you have tried all the medicine under the sun, give this wonderful preparation a trial. Don't go on suffering! Don't continue to lead a miserable life. Many persons who have suffered and waited for 10 to 20 years or even longer, are able now to live happy, comfortable lives again because HADACOL supplies the Vitamins and Minerals which their systems needed. Be fair to yourself. Give HADACOL a trial.

We are so firm in our belief that HADACOL will help you that we sell HADACOL on a money-back guarantee. If you don't feel perfectly satisfied after using HADACOL as directed, just return the empty carton and your money will be cheerfully refunded. Nothing could be fairer.

Sold at all the leading drug stores. Trial size only $1.25, but save money—buy the large family and hospital size—only $3.50.

If your druggist does not have HADACOL, order direct from The LeBlanc Corporation, Lafayette, Louisiana. Send no money. Just your name and address on a penny postcard. Pay postman. State whether you want the $3.50 hospital economy size or the $1.25 trial size. Remember, money cheerfully refunded unless you are 100% satisfied.—Adv.

Attack of Amnesia Transforms Milquetoast Into Roost Ruler

By BILLY ROSE

The other day I picked up the telephone to call Eleanor, and it was almost half a minute before I could remember my number at home. At the time, this memory lapse didn't seem worth brooding about, but last night I happened to meet up with a well-known psychiatrist at the Stork Club, and over a jigger of ginger-beer I told him what had happened.

"It was probably a mild attack of amnesia," he said. "As a rule, the victims are folks who, consciously or unconsciously, want to escape from their routine chores, and every now and then their minds blank out as a protest against doing the same old things the same old way."

"What kind of pills should I take?"

"Fun pills," said the mind-medico. "Buy yourself a sailboat, take up skeet-shooting, or get a set of water colors and learn how to paint."

Billy Rose

"And supposing I don't.?"

"Chances are nothing will happen except that you'll forget a few more phone numbers. On the other hand, there's always the possibility that the spells may get longer and more frequent. That's what happened not long ago to a good friend of yours."

JERRY—and I'm sure you know the Jerry I mean—used to be one of Broadway's leading juveniles and stay-up lates. Five years ago, as you know, he put away his hair-oil and got a job producing radio shows. And not long after, he married the daughter of a network executive, bought a home in Scarsdale and decided to settle down.

"Well, as often happens when a girl has too much dowry, his wife did most of the settling for him. She made him exchange his friends for hers, his fun for hers and his life for hers. And within a year, the man who used to be a gay dog became all dog— a Westchester version of Caspar Milquetoast.

"After two years of being yammered at by his missus, Jerry came in to see me one day and said that he was having trouble with his memory—that it was blacking out on him now and then. I asked him some questions about his home life, and when he told me what it was like I advised him to stand up to his wife, and if necessary, slap her down occasionally. He told me, quite seriously, she wouldn't stand for such a thing.

"One morning several months later, he came to my office, and told me quite a tale. It seems that on his way home the night before he had had an attack of amnesia, and when he came to 15 hours later he was in a New York hotel room, with no idea of what had happened in between.

"I phoned his wife, and from her story, managed to put the pieces together. Jerry's memory had snapped as he got to the door of his house in Scarsdale—perhaps in protest against the stuffy people his wife had invited to dinner—and all he knew was that he was standing on a strange stoop.

"AFRAID TO RING the bell, he sneaked into the back yard, found an open window, hoisted himself through, then recognizing nothing, stopped to puzzle out the situation. Who was he? What sort of man would climb through the window of a strange house? Only a burglar, of course. Ergo, he must be a burglar. And so he tiptoed upstairs, entered his wife's bedroom and began stuffing her jewelry into his pockets.

"At this point, his missus walked in, told him to stop playing cops and robbers, and began badgering him at the top of her over-sized lungs. But Jerry, the burglar, instead of melting into the carpet, belted her one right in the teeth.

"That's all there was to it. Somehow, he got back to New York, checked in at a hotel, and when he woke up his amnesia was gone."

"Did you tell his wife that her husband wasn't himself when he clipped her on the chin?" I asked.

The psychiatrist smiled "Of course not, and what's more, I advised my patient to keep mum. Jerry went home to a big reconciliation scene—the old 'worm-turns' story—and ever since, the more spine he has shown the more supine his wife has become.

"I went to his house for a poker session recently, and the only time she came in the room was when she brought in the drinks. To date, there have been no recurrences of amnesia, and it's my belief that if Jerry doesn't take any more nonsense from his wife, there won't be."

"Are you suggesting I go home and hang a shiner on Eleanor's eye?" I asked.

"In your case," said the psychiatrist, "I doubt if it's necessary. However, if you have any more trouble remembering telephone numbers, I'd suggest you invest a few dollars in a water-color set."

LET me come in where you are weeping, friend,
And let me take your hand.

Let me come in—I would be very still

Tears bring relief.
Let me come in—I would only breathe a prayer,
And hold your hand,
For I have known a sorrow such as yours,
And understand.

NARROW ESCAPE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

"JUD'S ONLY going to be here a couple of weeks," Connie said "And after all, he's my brother Tom's guest and it's up to me to help entertain him. You understand, don't you, Marc?"

'Sure," said Marc, not looking at her, "sure, I understand. You go ahead and be nice to him, Connie. I understand all right."

Which was true, bitterly true. Marc had begun to understand two days after Jud Morrison had landed at the Norberts' for a fortnight's visit. Jud was big and handsome and had a way with him. In college he had been quite a rage. Tom Norbert, his roommate, had raved about him before he arrived, but even Connie hadn't expected such a splendid specimen of manhood as Jud proved to be

3-Minute Fiction

A roadster stopped before the house and Jud came bounding up the walk "Hi, Connie," he grinned "All set for our round of golf?" Then he saw Marc standing on the porch beside Connie. "Hello there, Marc. How about joining us?"

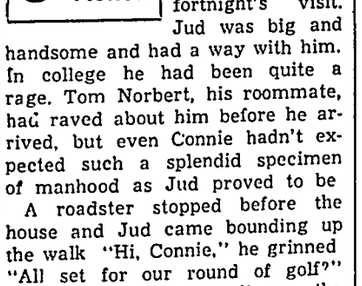
Marc smiled and shook his head. 'Thanks," he said. "I've got a tennis date. See you two tonight."

If, he reflected, he could only get Jud out of his element perhaps the college hero wouldn't show up so well.

Several nights later at the country club dance Marc got Connie alone and suggested a fishing trip for the next day. "We can take Jud along," he explained. "It'll be something new in his experience and probably he'll get a bang out of it."

Connie, who liked fishing herself, thought it was a grand idea.

And so the three of them drove up to Beaver Lake the next day.



"And, besides, I'm satisfied with the man I have—a man who's big enough to be kind to a man like Jud Morrison."

In the afternoon they put on their waders and fished.

Connie elected to show Jud how to rig his line and cast, and watching them Marc knew a feeling of frustration. He had planned to somehow get Jud to follow him into the rapids where the going was treacherous and where only one experienced in such things could navigate without losing his foothold. He had a vague idea of rescuing Jud from the swirling torrents, thereby establishing Jud's weakness in Connie's mind and his own prowess.

SUDDENLY HE KNEW that he was helpless. There was nothing he could do about the thing that was happening between Jud and Connie. The feeling that he had toward Jud was not one of condemnation, but envy. If Jud were trying to steal Connie away, he was doing so unwittingly. Any one but a fool could tell he wasn't aware of any understanding existing between the girl and Marc.

And so Marc abandoned his scheme for revenge.

They returned home the next day, and the day after that Marc made a business trip to Belknap. When he got back, Judson Morrison was gone. Marc didn't call Connie. Tomorrow or the day after he was leaving on a month's journey upstate. He didn't want to see Connie before he left. It would hurt too much.

But he did see her. Connie came over that night and found him sitting alone on the porch.

"Hello," she said, "where in the world have you been?"

"Away on business. Unexpected."

"Well, I should think so." She came close to him and sat down. "Jud left this morning. He asked me to say goodbye to you."

"Jud's a good egg," Marc said.

"Too good," said Connie. "Goodness, I'd hate to be married to a man like that."

"You would?" said Marc, astonished, "why?"

"Why? why, because—I would. He's too self-sufficient." She laughed. "And besides, I'm satisfied with the man I have—a man who's big enough to be kind to a man like Jud Morrison."

Abruptly he laughed, and when, puzzled, she asked him what was funny, he shook his head.

"There's nothing really funny," he said. "I was just thinking about a close call I once had—how near I came to making a fool of myself—and what a relief it is to know I escaped."

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

BY DR. KENNETH J. FOREMAN

SCRIPTURE: Acts 19:1—20:16; Ephesians 4:17-32.
DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 55: 6:13.

Base of Operations

Lesson for March 5, 1950

THERE IS NO RULE in the Bible forbidding Christians to have common sense. You are not supposed to lay aside your mind when you become a Christian.

This has had many illustrations: let us take Ephesus for one. Put yourself, in imagination, back to the first Christian century. Ask yourself: Where can we start a church where it will do the most good? Where can we put a church that will spread out, one that is sure to have daughter-churches? Where can we reach people of influence? Where can we locate a church where it is certain to be heard of?

Dr. Foreman

As your eye ranged over a map of the Empire, you would have lighted on Ephesus as the very place. It was a true capital, not a merely political one.

Strategy

IT was a master-stroke, selecting Ephesus as a base of operations. It made possible the rapid spread of the Christian faith into the province of Asia. The decision to plant a church there had been matched by other strategic decisions in Christian history since then. One of these was founding the church in Rome. That was an even greater city and capital than Ephesus, and it has lasted much longer.

If the Christian church had been content to be provincial, all right for the smaller towns but afraid to tackle the big ones, if the early church had feared to seat itself in Rome, the whole history of Europe would have been different.

When the Roman Empire crumbled, as in time it did, the church rose on its ruins and took its place as the great civilizer of Europe, the strong force that kept a continent from decay for nearly a thousand years.

Our Ancestors

FROM THE DAYS of the early Roman church there comes a well-known story which may be true. In the slave market at Rome the Pope saw some handsome small boys, whiter than the average Roman, for sale. Who are you? he asked. "Angli," they said—Angles, from far-off marshes along the North Sea. No, smiled the Pope, who was a bit of a punster, you are too good looking for that; "Non Angli sed Angeli," not Angles but Angels.

Anyway, the church did send some missionaries to far-away Anglia and elsewhere in Northern Europe. It turned out to be another strategic base of operations. Eventually France and Germany and England and the other countries in that part of the world were converted to Christianity. The time came when those very nations took the lead in moving into the rest of the world, into the western hemisphere, "down under" to Australia, even into Africa. Where they went, they carried their religion with them.

Suppose the church had not thought our ancestors worth converting? Suppose all the colonizing movements of the 16th and following centuries had been waves of sheer pagans?

It is not mere racial pride to say that the sending of missionaries to those savage peoples of northern Europe was one of the most strategic moves ever made by the Christian church.

And Today?

THE CHURCH has not always been smart. Sometimes we have missed the boat. There have been strategic centers we might have occupied—and did not.

There was a time, for instance, when Russia, that mighty nation, was open to Christian teaching Many who knew that country were saying about 1918 that it was possible to capture that land for Christ. But the Christian church was little interested . . . and now whatever Christianity is there has to stay underground.

Farther east, our own General MacArthur has been calling for missionaries to Japan, thousands of them. Japan is wide open to Gospel today as never before. But where are the missionaries? Going over in driblets.

Whenever Christianity has seen a strategic point and taken it, future generations have been blessed; whenever we miss our chance, future generations will wonder how we could have been so blind.

Star Dust

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

THE SUCCESS of "Halls of Ivy", (NBC Friday evenings,) proves that radio sponsors who for years have been heckling Ronald Colman and his wife to do a radio program were right. For 10 years, during which he had made but one film a year, Mr. Colman had held off, and Benita backed him up.

RONALD COLMAN

Then Jack Benny talked them into doing a guest shot on his program, and other such appearances followed. Finally along came Don Quinn, who years ago had brought Fibber McGee and Molly to the air. He had written the perfect show for the Colmans—for Colman as a college professor, Benita as an ex-actress, his wife. Result, "The Halls of Ivy" a hit from the start.

Morey Amsterdam is lining up bookings for a spring concert tour; seems the comedy star is an accomplished cellist whom top-ranking musicians have praised. He plans to perform both classical and semi-classical selections.

Listeners to Elliot Lawrence's Friday night air show may soon hear his latest composition, "Ballet for Thirsty Arabians in Search of Water." Elliot says it was inspired by the water shortage from which New York is suffering.

Aye, There's The Rub

Sometimes a dull finish is desired on varnished surfaces. This may be obtained by rubbing the glossy coating with fine sandpaper, pumice or steel wool. To avoid the labor of rubbing, manufacturers make varnishes which dry with a reduced gloss by adding such materials as wax, metallic soap and finely divided silica.

PLAN CONSTRUCTION FOR MORE FARM EFFICIENCY

Whether it's a new born or just a new gate to be hung this spring a few plans for the proper location will help make it handy and efficient, says John Fitzsimmons, extension landscape architect at Iowa State College. He says every change that's made can increase the value of the farm if it makes the farmstead a more convenient and efficient place to work.

The man who looks ahead 10 or 20 years can expect better and longer use for his time and money. "Hit or miss" changes or additions may obstruct or prevent correct layouts later on, Fitzsimmons explains.

Every farm has its own peculiar problems, such as the location of clothesline, fences and gates, he points out. However, there are some logical rules that can be applied on just about every Iowa farm.

The drive may be approximately 40 feet from the house with a parking space provided beside it for visitors' cars. By locating the machine shed on the side of the farm court convenient to field lanes, travel is reduced and more use made of the shed. Most Iowa farm families can avoid a ruty farmyard in the spring by better surfacing of traveled ways, Fitzsimmons says.

He says the farmyard or farm court can be located about 40 feet back of the house. The court should be laid out so that its smallest dimension is about 120 feet. Then most of the buildings can be located so they have one side in common with the court.

The livestock buildings may be on the far side of the farm court and at least 150 feet from the house. Fitzsimmons points out that the exact location of the farm court and livestock buildings should be determined with the direction of the prevailing winds in mind. During the time of year when the livestock will be up around the buildings, those winds are from the north and northwest.

The house needs to be about 100 feet back from the road with the garage on the house side of the farm court.

Fitzsimmons has prepared several sketches and ideas that can be incorporated into most plans for Iowa farmsteads. They are included in Iowa State College Pamphlet 149, which may be obtained at county extension directors' officers or from the Bulletin Office at the college.

CENTRAL IOWA TELEPHONE CO. MOVED INTO NEW QUARTERS

Telephone Office Conveniently Located On Main Street

The Iowa Telephone Company moved into new quarters adjacent to The Times last Wednesday and began using their new equipment and telephone switchboard.

During the past year the company has invested approximately $30,000.00 in new cables, lines, equipment and switchboard to give this communtiy a modern telephone system. A number of rural lines were metallicized during the past year and more lines are on the program for the future.

With the opening of the new telephone office on Main Street the change-over to the new cable switchboard was made with practically no interruption in service. In fact most patrons of the company did not know their telephone had been switched over onto the new board, unless they noticed better telephone reception.

Manager Bert Jones and his assistants did a fine job of making the change-over and still maintaining service at the same time.

Patrons will find the new location convenient when on Main Street on business. The Company invites anyone interested to come in and look over the new office arrangement and equipment.

Congratulations to the Central Iowa Telephone Company for doing such a good job in Klemme and this community. Klemme now has one of the most modern telephone systems available and should give us the best of service for years to come.

TELLS IOWANS THEY ARE TAKING CANCER TOO CALMLY

Ames, Iowa—"Iowans are still taking cancer too calmly," Dr. Royal L. Garff of Salt Lake City, chairman of the national speakers' bureau of the American Cancer Society, warned 175 county campaign chairmen and key workers at the state campaign kick-off meeting of the Iowa division in Ames recently.

"In the coming Cancer Crusade fund-raising drive in April thousands of Iowans must work as if they were firemen and their homes were ablaze.

"The researcher and scientist, often working for small pay, and many medical doctors, are all doing their part heroically to prevent millions of deaths from mankind's second greatest killer. Upon the volunteer workers' devoted and untiring efforts the work of these men depend. They must have the funds that only we can raise.

"The greatest cancer campaign in history will soon be launched to raise $14,565,000 nationally and $301,900 in Iowa to strike back at cancer with research, education and service."

Plans were made at the all-day session for an all-out effort to boost Iowa to top position among the states, with 35,000 volunteer workers conducting a house-to-house canvass of Iowa homes in April. In exceeding its quota last year for the third consecutive year, Iowa climbed to fifth place among state divisions throughout the nation.

Attending from Hancock Co. was S. Willard Cunningham, County Campaign Chairman.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Ever heard of Earl Stimmel? He lives on a farm 12 miles north of Iowa City at a point where highway 218 curves on a hill. One day this winter an afternoon thaw, followed by a quick freeze, left the hill-curve covered with ice and two semi-trailer trucks stalled halfway up the grade.

Stimmel was on his way to help when two more cars collided on the curve leaving the highway blocked. Arrived at the accident, Stimmel's first act was to grab a flare from one of the trucks and run with it to the top of he hill.

There he stopped two more trucks which were just coming over the crest and about to start down that icy slide into the jammed curve. Then Stimmel sanded the curve so that the two stalled trucks could move on. Stimmel remained to direct traffic and when the Patrol arrived he helped officers sand the hill from top to bottom. Stimmel had a late supper that night.

And what about Wayne Thomas, Marshalltown, ever heard of him? One day recently, Thomas overtook a car which was weaving back and forth across the highway.

Thomas tried for eight miles to stop the car but was unsuccessful. Then, staying close behind the drunken driver, Thomas drove his car to the left of the center line and began flashing his spotlight at oncoming cars.

Approaching motorists understood the warning and were able to pull to the shoulder before the drunken driver came too close. When a Patrolman moved in on the tipsy driver, he found Thomas still following, still wig-wagging his light down the highway, giving the warning.

Ever heard of these two men? Probably not because they are private citizens leading private lives. But both Stimmel and Thomas - like many other persons reported recently by the Patrol - know that a man's private safety on the highways is worth only as much as he is willing to give to the safety of his fellow motorists.

VITAMIN AND MINERAL DEFICIENCIES MAY SHOW UP NOW IN DAIRY CATTLE

Toward the end of winter, indications of diet deficiencies often times show up in calves and dairy cows, Paul Henderson, county extension director points out.

During the winter, an abundance of direct sunlight which is a major source of vitamin D is absent. Also, at this time of year mineral deficiencies may show up if cows have not been getting high-quality hay.

Henderson says the vitamin A deficiency is most likely to show up in younger animals. Calves will show signs of being unthrifty, and often times will be humped and have rough hair. Serious vitamin A deficiency will show up in sore eyes.

Grass silage makes a good source of vitamin A. Where neither grass silage or high quality hay is available, calves can get vitamin A from cod liver oil. A 100 pound calf fed two tablespoons of cod liver oil on top of his grain once a day will get all the vitamin A required.

In dairy cows, deficiencies of phosphorus and calcium may be present. Such deficiencies are the result of insufficient grain rations or high-quality hay. Cows which seem to be hunting for something, such as when they chew on boards, may need phosphorus.

Best source of the mineral is steamed bone meal. Supplying phosphorus is important as cows having a supply of calcium cannot make use of it unless they have enough phosphorus in their diets.

MOTORISTS SUBJECT TO FINE ON OLD PLATES

Motorists displaying 1949 license plates and registration certificates on or after March 15th will become subject to arrest and fine for improper registration, the state safety department said today.

Leslie B. Chase, departmental director of the motor vehicle division, said all county treasurers have now furnished the sheriffs with the names of motorists known to be delinquent in their respective counties.

Chase said drivers who have new plates and certificates in their possession but neglect to display them by March 15 will also face improper registration charges.

On that date, the highway patrol will begin stopping delinquent motorists on the highways, according to Chief S. N. Jespersen.

Chase said 1949 registrations actually became delinquent Feb. 1st, and that motorists purchasing new plates now must pay a penalty fee equal to 5 per cent of registration cost.

ICS Bulletin Answers Television Questions

Short, simple answers to many questions about television are contained in a bulletin just issued by Iowa State College.

Entitled "Television in Iowa" the bulletin may be had without charge by writing the Engineering Extension Service, Marston Hall, Iowa State College, Ames.

Engineers at the college have devoted a paragraph or so of easily understood language to such matters as "What is Television?" "How Is The Picture Formed?" "Where Should The Receiver Be Placed?" "What Type of Antenna Should I Use?" "What Is Meant By UMF Television?" "What About Cost of Installation?" and many others.

The engineers have also written a companion bulletin called "Frequency Modulation in Iowa" which explains FM broadcasting. It too can be obtained from the Engineering Extension Service.

Annual School Election - Choice Of Two Candidates

REV. EDWIN IGLEHART

One of the outstanding Christain educators of the United States who has given more than thirty years to missionary-educational service in Japan, will be the guest-speaker at the Klemme and Liberty Methodist Churches on Sunday morning. He is the Rev. Edwin T. Iglehart, S. T. D., missionary of the Methodist Church and long a professor on the staff of Aokama Gakuin, noted Methodist college in Tokyo. When hostilities ceased he returned to Japan and helped reorganize the College which was badly damaged by war.

Rev. Iglehart is now on furlough in the United States.

Dr. Iglehart went to Japan in 1904 as an educational missionary of the Methodist Church. Practically all of his years of service since were spent as a professor at Aoyama Gakuin, Tokyo.

FARMERS MERCHANDISE TO SELL DAIRY FOODS

How dairy farmers use merchandising to round up sales for dairy foods was related by C. R. Schoby of Algona, Iowa. Mr. Schoby is President of the American Association.

Speaking at the West Bend Cooperative Creamery annual meeting, Mr. Schoby defined merchandising as the expansion of ADA advertising through enlisting the cooperation of related food manufacturers to advertise the same theme at the time of the current ADA food event.

The nex step, he said, is to interest food editors of newspapers and national magazines in featuring these same dairy dishes. The third step is to make sure the retail outlets feature the advertised foods in store displays, local newspapers and radio advertising.

By the united selling strength of all these forces, Mr. Schoby said dairy foods and related foods are moved from store to consumer in large quantities.

Citing the fall Cheese Festival as an example, he listed four major accomplishments: (1) more promotion behind cheese than ever before; (2) over 50,000 retail food stores joined in the drive; (3) more cheese moved to market than ever before; (4) the advertising and promotion had the cooperation of twenty-six related food processors who carried the message to every family in the nation.

MARRIED COUPLES HAVE PARTY AT BRITT

Fifty-four Hancock County young married couples met last Tuesday evening at the Memorial Hall in Britt for their regular February meeting.

A very fine discussion of the proposed school re-organization was presented by Guy Gilchrist, director of research from Des Moines. In fact he must have been so enthused he left his pipe, which ordinarily a good "pipe smoker" just doesn't do.

The special guest was Clarence Wilson, editor of the Bureau Farmer. Clarence tried out a new camera on the group, so we hope that in the near future a picture of the group will be forthcoming.

After an unexpected appearance of "Fearless Fosdick" the rest of the evening and part of the next morning was spent in square dancing.

The next meeting was scheduled for March 28th, appointed committees are as follows: Eats, Mr. and Mrs. Harlan Nuehring and Mr. and Mrs. Laurice Lemke; Entertainment, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Schubert and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Greiman.

Casey Dreams Up Some Trouble

By GRANTLAND RICE

SEY STENGEL, the hard-luck, good-luck miracle man who ered over 70 team concussions season, had a dream recently. was a dream that turned into ightmare and Casey doesn't to talk about it.

seems that in this dream the ent C. Stengel saw his team go through the season without a single blemish. No injury or accident or illness assailed any of his sturdy athletes. Joe DiMaggio's heel lost its Achillean vulnerability and Joe fought for the tland Rice Yankees in 154 es. No replacements were ed to help reinforce outfield or ld.

t, at the end of the dream, the ees didn't win the pennant. Red Sox did, haunted by the eland Indians.

y? Mr. Stengel doesn't care lk too much about it. But this hat happened—

Jerry Coleman, a brilliant e last season, had the same homore shingles" that at- d Alvin Dark and a flock of freshmen. The second sea- is always the toughest. The disease struck the other 1949 es.

Phil Rizzuto, the star of the group, dipped a trifle from his peak.

The pitching staff wasn't e as good as it was last r when Reynolds, Vic chi, Lopat and Tommy ne, who all had big years, t part of their time on the y chute. They were good not as good as they had n.

Minus so many accidents, in- , etc., the Yankees no longer any fight against fate. They art of their 1949 hustle.

Prof. Stengel suddenly dis- ed that Red Sox pitching was etter than it was last season Parnell, Kinder and McDer- out on the happy highway.

The pennant-saving Joe e was good—but not the e of 1949. Joe has been t every other year—1945, 1949. This was 1950.

was the dream. C. Stengel, otentate, failed to enjoy the ay. "Do dreams come true?" asked. "If they do I may to stay out here and pass up St. Petersburg and New York this season."

That 60-Home-Run Mark

When the rather young Ralph Kiner moved into the 50 or better home run bracket for the second time, there were increasing murmurs about the possibility of some slugger passing the Babe's old mark.

Ralph is 6 feet, 1 inch and he weighs 198 pounds. He has a pair of powerful hands and a pair of exceedingly strong wrists. This is where most of hitting power comes from when correctly applied.

"I might do it or someone else might do it," Ralph said. "But I don't think so. I was meeting the ball well last season. In the last 30 games I hit 20 home runs. That's a lot of home runs to hit in 30 games. I probably wouldn't do that well again in a lifetime. I mean in my last 30 games where the tension begins to build up. I suddenly discovered that to beat 60 home runs you've got to get a good start and keep on hitting 'em. You can't afford any bad months. You can't blow yourself to any slumps. Sixty home runs a year is a home run about every 2½ games. I hit better than one every three games last year, but that wasn't good enough."

Since Johnny Mize was dropped as a regular, there don't seem to be any big home run hitters in sight, except Kiner. Ted Williams is usually somewhere in the high 30's or the 40's. One trouble with Ted is that he won't swing at a ball an inch or two inches off the plate. He doesn't say to himself —"I'm going to belt this next one —if it's close." If it's an inch off it's a ball, and Ted never swings at a ball.

There are few pitchers who get any thrills from having one of their fast balls hammered out of the ball park. They view such a proceeding with practically no cheer.

Bounding Dodgers

In a strict Florida fishing accent, the Rt. Hon. Burt Shotton, the Dodger's high gun, issued one of the most truthful statements of the year.

He asked, in effect, just why the Dodgers shouldn't win the next National league pennant since they had much the best ball club in their league—including catchers, pitchers, infielders and outfielders? You've got to admire a statement of this sort for it puts manager Shotton on the hot seat.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Better to Share Budget Problems

By Lawrence Gould

Can wifely extravagance be cured?

Answer: If it's real extravagance, not just the protest of a stingy husband, it is obviously a childish characteristic based partly on a wish to hurt the husband and partly on refusal to accept the painful fact that she cannot have everything she wants. Both feelings are usually stronger in a wife who has no fixed allowance or share in control of the family finances. Let your wife help plan the entire family budget and it will be easier for her to realize that to spend money unwisely cramps her style as much as it does yours.

Do we make the world we live in?

Answer: Much more than we realize, writes Edgar Rubin, Norwegian psychologist. What we think of as our everyday world—the world of objective things like trees, houses and people—is really created within ourselves by our thoughts, attitudes, opinions and biases. We accept the way things look or sound or feel to us as what they actually are and give our attention mainly to the aspects of them that meet our emotional needs. The neurotic and the healthy-minded person thus live in quite different worlds because they are different people.

Can a cynic be "idealistic"?

Answer: Yes, says Dr. Martin S. Fritz of Iowa State College. Responses of students to 200 "weighted" questions showed that although they were more prone to idealism than to cynicism, every student expressed both highly idealistic and highly cynical views. Actually, cynicism is only idealism "in reverse," since you must at least unconsciously have ideals or you would not become bitter over other people's not conforming to them. If you did not feel your neighbors should be honest, their dishonesty would not disturb you.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Controlling High Blood Pressure

By Dr. James W. Barton

AS HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE is the cause of most of heart stroke (coronary thrombosis) and brain stroke (apoplexy), physicians try to caution patients about the risks they run if they are careless, and point out how they can live safely with high blood pressure as long, or nearly as long, as if they had normal pressure.

Besides being given medicines to quiet and relax the blood vessels and rest the entire body, these patients are put on a low salt diet, must avoid tobacco and must not allow themselves to become overweight.

In "The Canadian Medical Association Journal," Dr. E. Maurice Heller states that obesity (overweight) is usually, but not always, one of the associated causes of high blood pressure, "but so often the blood pressure drops significantly and even becomes normal and remains so if weight is kept within normal limits."

As long as the patient is overweight, nerve cutting should not be done, as reduction of weight may be all that is necessary to bring blood pressure down to safe limits.

Other methods of reducing blood pressure before surgery is used are rest, sedation (quieting of nerves with certain drugs) and psychotherapy (common sense advice as to why pressure is up and how it can be reduced).

Dr. Heller points out the well-known fact that the emotional element, even in some cases where there are real underlying causes for high blood pressure, is very important and, that by helping the patient to acquire emotional control alone, the high blood pressure may entirely disappear.

The effect of emotion on the body mechanism should be explained to the patient in simple terms and he should be instructed how to alter his daily routine.

By showing him how his blood pressure drops when he rests and

This method can best be followed in a hospital, but can be followed to a considerable extent outside the hospital, the patient reporting to the physician's office at regular intervals.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★

The age-old stigma must be removed from mental illness so that it will be accepted in all its forms as real, treatable, and in many cases preventable.

Notwithstanding all that is known about cancer being curable in early stages, thousands die yearly whose lives might have been saved by early treatment.

If varicose veins are present, your physician can make tests to find out if the deep veins will carry the blood back to the heart should the surface veins be removed by surgery or injections.

Reverend Fidele Chiasson of Lafayette, La., LaSalle School says:

For the past twelve years I have suffered extreme pains in my legs and hands. I could not even kneel to say my prayers for a long time. I tried all kinds of medicine. I was advised to go on a very strict diet, but my pains seemed to grow worse. I had no appetite, no energy and I was growing weaker and weaker. I was losing weight, and I thought sure the end was near. At that time I was in Montreal, Canada, and I was advised to change climate and go to the tropics. I went there and remained six months. I came to Louisiana still suffering.
I started to take HADACOL. I have now taken over twenty bottles, and write to let you know that now I am perfectly well. I have a grand appetite. I have lots of energy. I am back to my normal weight. I do not now suffer from aches and pains.
In the hope that my experience with HADACOL will help some suffering soul, I gladly permit you to use this letter.

Robert S. Mathis, Martin's Drug Store, Bemis, Tennessee, says:

HADACOL is the best seller we have in our store, and we are selling more each day. Our customers tell us how much good it is doing them. It is one of the fastest selling tonics I have ever sold.

It is easy to understand, therefore, why countless thousands have been benefited by this amazing tonic, HADACOL. Clubs Donates To 4-H Camp

The Hancock County boys 4-H clubs are showing a sincere interest in the proposed state 4-H camp to be erected in the central part of the state.

To date, every club contacted has wanted to have a part in the camp. Eight clubs have voted to give $5.00 each and Aaron Stromer, Chairman of the Boys County Committe, made a donation of $50.00.

The clubs that have donated are the Amsterdam Boosters, Avery Hustlers, Liberty Go-Getters, Orthel Eagles, Magor Mustangs, Ell Midgets, Garfield Sluggers and the Madison Lucky Seven. A ninth club, the Boone Busy Boys, have brought it up at their last meeting and are going to vote on it at their next meeting.

We need only the support of the remaining three clubs, Erin Enterprisers, Bingham Champions, and Concord Yanks to make it a hundred per cent, boys!

Let's make it 100 per cent by the 1st of April.

Visiting around Iowa

by Joe Marsh

Iowa is BALANCED

When Grace and I visited back East last fall, the relatives tried to kid us about "Ioway's" corn.

'Course, we were proud of that corn. But I had another point that floored the relatives.

"Do you know," I said, "that Iowa's FACTORIES now produce as much wealth as her FARMS?"

Yes, it's true. Iowa's income is the best BALANCED in the Union. Fifty-fifty, farm and city.

But we Iowans don't stop there. Iowa specializes in balanced THINKING and LIVING, too. We try to respect each other's ideas, and standards—so we all live more happily together.

Cousin Joe is a farmer. I work in an office. Joe likes black tea. I like a temperate glass of beer or ale. That's OK with both of us. We keep a BALANCED view of the other fellow's tastes—whether it be in beverages or bonnets, jobs or jallopies.

Tolerance, temperate ideas, BALANCED living and THINKING . . . that's Iowa, the greatest state in the U.S.A.

Handsome Is, Handsome Does: Case of Mind Over Mattress

By BILLY ROSE

At a spaghetti salon, I got to talking with a reformed bootlegger who is currently the Mister Big of a big whiskey company.

"What do you hear from the mob?" I asked. "Anything that would fill up three sheets of copy paper?"

The former Man of Extinction thought a minute. "There's one story I don't remember seeing in print," he said. "It's about an old man named Ronowitz who ran a candy store on the East Side around the time Dutch Schultz was buying his first delivery trucks. . . ."

One night as the storekeeper was about to lock up, a hoodlum stepped into the shop and pressed a gun against the old man's middle. "Hide me somewhere," he said.

Billy Rose

The old man knew better than to argue with a revolver. "Who's chasing you?" he asked, as he opened the trap door which led to the cellar.

"Some fellas from Jersey."

When they got to the basement, Ronowitz pointed to a couple of old mattresses near the coal bin. "Lay down," he said, "and I'll make a sandwich."

A minute later the storekeeper had rolled man and mattresses into a bundle and tied it up with a piece of old clothesline.

* * *

AS HE STARTED back up to the store, a couple of men, guns in hand, came down the stairs. "Whatcha doin' in the cellar?" asked one.

"Bankin' the furnace," said the old man.

The gents from Jersey poked around in the trash barrels, examined the coal bin and then came to the rolled-up mattresses.

"I'll throw a bullet into them for luck," said one of them.

"You been seein' too many movies," said the other. "Let's try the roof."

The mobsters went upstairs and Ronowitz heard the door bang. He banked the fire, and waited in his store until he saw the men climb into a car and drive off. Then he went back down and untied the mattresses.

"You done fine, Pop," said the fugitive, taking a wad of bills out of his pocket. "Tell me when to stop countin'."

"Such money I don't take," said the old man.

"Ya kin have anything ya want," said the gangster. "Make a wish. Better yet,, make three wishes like in them fairy stories."

"Well," said the storekeeper, "I hear in a couple weeks some guy from the West Side is opening a candy store on the next block."

"He ain't gonna open," said the hoodlum. "Keep talkin'."

"The man who sells me my chocolate syrup, all of a sudden he wants a 15 per cent mark-up."

"I'll discuss it with him. Chances are you'll get a reduction. One more wish to go—this time make it good."

"That's all I can think of," said Ronowitz, "excepting maybe you'd like to tell me how it felt when you was in the mattress."

* * *

THE GANGSTER'S lips tightened. "You're makin' fun of me, Pop," he said, "and I don't like it. I wanted to pay ya off nice and proper, but since ya don't want it that way, maybe I better try somethin' else."

Ten minutes later, as per phone instructions from the hoodlum, a black car drove up and Ronowitz was pushed into the back seat. The car headed north and kept going until it parked near a wooden bridge somewhere in Westchester.

The driver took some chains from the luggage compartment, put a heavy piece of scrap iron on the old man's middle, and then lashed his legs to his chest so the metal was wedged in between.

"Throw him over when I count three," said the hoodlum.

"One—"

"Two—"

The old man braced himself and wondered who would mind the store the next day.

Suddenly the gangster grinned. He walked over and began to undo the chains.

"Now you got your answer, Pop," he said. "That's how I felt when I was in the mattress."

DEATH

by GRACE NOLL CROWELL

TO FOLD my hands a little while in sleep
A brief night through, and wait with quiet breath
The coming of the morning, and to keep
Quite calm and still, is that what we call death?
Is it a thing to fear, O Lord of life,
O Lord of death, O Lord of the unknown:
To heed no more the clamor and the strife,
To rest a bit, uncomraded, alone,
Save with Thee, Lord, who hast the power to keep Thine own?

And with Thee, Lord, why should I fear to wait
A little while until my eyes shall see,
Or whether I shall wake me soon or late,
So long as Thy cupped hand is holding me?
Grant, Father, when the night comes, I shall rise
With willing feet, and fold my work away;
Then, lying down to sleep, close fearless eyes,
Regretful not of further work or play,
But in the sleep Thou givest Thy beloved Await the day.

Spectator cheering at football games is an 80-year-old American practice. On November 13, 1869, when Rutgers and Princeton universities met for the second intercollegiate grid contest in U. S. history, Princeton supporters invoked lungpower, shouting an old Confederate battle cry to urge their team on to victory. P. S. Princeton won, 8-0 man open a window when she was supposed to do it. But the thousands of requests to see the show in the studio prove that people are eager to see "Molly", "Jake", "Rosalie" and "Sammy" in person and don't give a hoot who opens windows. They have become so real during all these years that nothing can possibly destroy the illusion.

Pretty little Vanessa Brown, who was so thrilled over getting the role of the Irish maid in "The Heiress", has been signed for a top role in "Three Husbands", for United Artists. Also signed for a leading role is Emlyn Williams, well known playwright, stage and screen star. "Three Husbands" is by Vera Caspary, credited with "A Letter to Three Wives".

Cornel Wilde and Maureen O'Hara rehearsed eight hours on two consecutive days for their fencing sequence in the opening scenes of RKO's "Sons of the Musketeers". Their rehearsals involved a fight routine to be shot in one take, requiring three and one-half minutes to film. Wilde is a skilled fencer; Maureen had had intensive coaching for weeks.

The announcement of Bob Hawks' engagement came as a surprise to a lot of people. He will marry Mary Rechner, executive assistant to Dore Schary, head man at M-G-M, as soon as a replacement for her can be found.

"The Tattooed Stranger" RKO's mystery drama, follows the trend of using New York for backgrounds, which was so successful with "The Window" Script calls for scenes everywhere, from the Bowery to the Bellevue morgue.

★ MEAT LOAF ★

By Richard H. Wilkinson

SHERIFF FELIX BRENDLINGER was just about to sit down to his supper when the telephone rang. He looked at the instrument ruefully. Before him was a heaping plate of meat loaf, fried potatoes and fresh green peas.

Felix sighed, glanced across at Elvira, then moved to the wall phone. "Hello," he said.

3-Minute Fiction

"This is Chris Verne out at the Rowland camp," came a low and excited voice. "Someone's just broken into the front room. I'm hiding in the library, but I may need help."

It was five miles to the Rowland camp by way of the river road. Felix made it in eight minutes, despite the ancient vintage of his rattley car. Chris Verne came down the steps to meet him.

"Too late, Sheriff. He got away. We had quite a tussle, but he whacked me on the melon and I was out like a light for three or four minutes." The tall, rangy caretaker gingerly felt of a bump on his head.

"Get away with anything?" Felix asked.

"Don't know yet. I was looking when you drove up. Come on in and we'll see."

The caretaker went directly to the safe behind the fireplace.

"Hell!" he ejaculated. "Well, I can kiss this job goodbye. Rowland will never keep me on when he finds out those bonds are gone."

"Bonds?"

"He was up here over the weekend. He had a lot of negotiable bonds and left them in the safe. Figured this would be the last place anyone would look. Well, he figured wrong."

"Did you get a look at the thief?"

"Not much of one. It was dark. I was in the kitchen getting myself some supper, when I heard a noise in front. I switched on the light and listened. It sounded like someone was trying to pick the front door lock. Thinking of the bonds, I sneaked into the library. It was inky dark. I hastily dialed you, then went groping for the rifle Rowland keeps behind the safe. It was right then something hit me on the head.

Chris shot a quick, sharp look at the officer, but Felix already had begun to browse around.

"HUMM," Felix stood in the center of the floor and looked around the room. The dial telephone was on the desk, with the receiver dangling on its cord.

"Chris, mind callin' Elvira an' telling her I'll be home shortly an' to keep my supper hot? I left it in a hurry. Meantime I'll take a look around here."

Chris shot a quick, sharp look at the officer, but Felix had already begun to browse around. So the caretaker crossed to the desk, picked up the receiver and began to dial. He had whirled out two numbers, when suddenly the lights went out.

"Hey!" Chris yelled, startled. "Who did that?"

"Keep right on dialing, Chris," Felix said from the doorway. "Fuse musta blown."

"Don't be dumb. I can't dial in the dark."

"Try it," Felix insisted.

"Are you crazy? I can't see a thing."

"Good!" said Felix. He snapped on the lights. In his hand he held the old time long barrelled six-shooter that had served him during his many years as law officer. "All right Chris, nemmine dialing any more."

"Say, what is this?" The caretaker replaced the receiver on its hook slowly.

"We'll talk about it later, Chris, an' look around for the bonds. In the meantime, you come with me. You can spend the night in the lockup an', by jinks, without no supper too. That's what you git for makin' me let mine go cold."

Chris blinked. "What the devil are you talking about?"

"Come, come, Chris. Play actin' ain't gonna do you any good. I got a hunch it was you stole them bonds, and busted the lock on the front door, too. At any rate, you didn't hastily dial my number in the dark, like you said. You just settled your own hash by proving it can't be done. An' speakin' of hash, come along.

Church Leadership

Lesson for March 12, 1950.

"WHAT'S in a name?" Different churches have many different names for the persons who hold office in them. But whatever quarrels the churches have had, few of them are about these names. The thing is more important than the name. All of us agree that churches do need organization

Dr. Foreman

Some people would have us go back to the New Testament for our pattern of organization. We cannot quite do this, for one important reason. Where in the New Testament would you dig in? Would you take the letters to Timothy and Titus as your guide? There you find bishops (overseers, superintendents) mentioned, also elders and deacons, but you do not find their duties laid down.

Go back into the story of Acts and you will find a place where elders are first mentioned in the Christian church (11:30); go still farther back and you come to the first election of deacons (Acts 6).

In your first Utopian Church, will you model it after the three-officer plan, or two, or one, or (going back before Acts 6) none at all? (Apostles, of course, are not now available.

Scholars in most churches today are pretty well agreed that what we have in the New Testament is not a rigid pattern of organization, but rather certain principles on which any successful church must be built. Let us see what some of these are.

The Job and the Man

ALL CHURCHES are agreed on one point: A church must have leadership. What is everybody's business is nobody's business. Some one must draw up plans, think ahead. No organization in the world is self-starting and self-operating, not even the church of Christ. The early church knew this. But they elected officers only as the need for them arose In Jerusalem there was not a deacon in the place until that emergency came up in the matter of relief.

In St. Paul's first missionary church (Acts 13, 14) he did not get the elders first, and then find churches for them. On the contrary, he founded the churches first and then appointed elders for them.

It would be a good idea for a church today to take stock of its officers once in a while. Are they necessary? For example, do you elect a deacon to "take the place" of one who has moved away, or do you elect a deacon to do a job that can't otherwise be done?

Sweetness No Substitute For Skill

NOT ALL CHRISTIANS are qualified to hold office in the church, and very few, if any, would be equally good in any office A Sunday school superintendent, for example, might make a poor showing at a prayer-meeting talk A man who can conduct a successful financial campaign and keep the church up to a high level of generosity the year round, may not be just the man to plan the educational program. A lovely sweet lady might turn out to be a stupid Madam Chairman.

Paul knew all this and in fact insisted on it. Each separate kind of job in the church calls for distinct qualifications.

Just being a good Christian was never enough to insure a man's (or a woman's) being a good officer.

Personality

AFTER ALL, however, personal character means more than technical skill. A man may have such flaws in his character that his influence does more harm than good, so that even if he is an accomplished musician you still would not want him as "Minister of Music," or even as choir-leader

A man whose own home is always at sixes and sevens (as Paul pointed out) is a poor candidate for any executive post in the church. A man who can't keep from quarreling in everyday life is no man to entrust with responsibility in the church.

A man of good character can, and will want to, learn the skills his job calls for; but a man of sleazy character just does not care. Be careful of the sort of man you elect to office, in church or out; for the rank and file are not going to rise above their leaders.

LYNN SAYS:
Know These Facts About Vegetables

Use green vegetables fresh—the fresher the better. Vitamins disappear as vegetables wilt and wait.

If you must hold them for a day or so, keep green vegetables cool, damp and lightly covered. Pile loosely to prevent crushing.

Wash quickly, never soak, and lift from water to free from sand and grit.

Save for the soup kettle leaves and stems too coarse to use "as is."

You can eat sprouted potatoes if you peel them. But never eat the sprouts. They have the same harmful substance contained in green spots.

Toss together green vegetable salads just before you serve; and to make your ration for fats go further, be a miser with the oil in the salad dressing.

To get rid of sand and grit, lift the vegetable from a pan of water, rather than pouring the water off.

Have the water boiling when you put green vegetables on to cook.

About 150 people, including auritzen himself, attended the en meeting which was called the Kossuth Citizens Comittee for better educaion. This mmittee is generally opposed the school reorganization lan, and is headed by Dr. H. H. urray of Lakota.

Plan "Low Level"

Kent H. King, superintendent Boxholm, told the group that olitically controlled schools and low level of instruction would e the result of centralized hool control. That is the situaion now in New Mexico, where he schools have been centralzed for 30 years, he explained. upt. King recently taught in he New Mexico schools.

"Who wants to buy a farm 23 iles from school?" asked Supintendent Irwin of Rodman. hat was his experience with eorganization in his native llinois. Property taxes there ave jumped 200 per cent since he new plan was started, he dded.

Casey Loss, state representaive from this district, was heered and applauded when he emanded, "Make the superinendent of public instruction nd the county superintendent f schools elective offices!"

Ray McWhorter, Burt, called he plan "reorganization from bove."

Voters Have Say

Supt. Lauritzen was given a hance to defend himself, and ssured the group that no plan will be forced on them and no chools will be closed until they ote to do so.

Besides the speakers, those resent included Clarence Mawisley, member of the county oard of education from Irvingon; W. B. Officer from Burt; G. D. Hart, superintendent from Bancroft; Harold Clark, editor of the Bancroft Register; Leo mmerfall, county assessor; and ounty supervisors A. M. Kollasch, Swea City; W. S. Cosgrove, Wesley; J. F. GET FLY CONTROL PROGRAM STARTED

Community Campaign Should Be Planned Before Fly Mordes Arrive

Much of the groundwork for a successful community fly control campaign must be laid Now—long before flies start showing up, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College.

He points out that experience in 1949 showed definitely that fly control can't be successful, even in an "organized community," if only a few people try to do all the work. Neither will chemical alone do the job of fly control. Gunderson says that too many communities were disappointed last year when flies appeared in spite of chemicals because their educational programs fell short.

Plan now to include a good educational program to be carried by radio stations, newspapers and by other methods. It should be headed by an active group of leaders and should emphasize sanitation. This will keep the cost of chemical control low and the results high, according to Gunderson.

Outline Requirements

To help communities plan their fly control programs this year, he outlines the following requirements of a good program:

1. Active leadership in which all organized groups can participate and in which each has definite responsibilities.

2. A continuing educational program which reaches every family in the community during the summer months.

3. A vigorous and effective sanitation program carried out around every home, through the business district and on farms. This requires the cooperative effort of every resident, business man, farmer, city official and commercial sprayer.

Lindane Works Fast

4. Proper use of the right chemicals at the right time. Flies have developed some resistance to DDT, but they still can be killed by DDT during cooler weather. DDT could be used for the first application in May or early June and lindane instead of DDT when hot weather sets in. However, if DDT has been used for the past three years, chances are that flies have developed some resistance to it and lindane should be used straight through the summer. Lindane knocks flies down faster than DDT but doesn't last as long. It costs about the same as DDT or may run a little higher per application.

TREASURER WORKS LATE TO GET TAXES

Taxes are being paid into Hancock County coffers at a rapid pace during March according to report from County Treasurer Roy L. Payment of taxes was delayed for several weeks due to the fact that the county auditor did not receive his adjusted valuations from the state tax commision in time to compute and spread the levy before January 1st.

At the meeting of the Town Council Monday night it was pointed out that acccording to an ordinance on the Town books anyone who contemplates moving a building of any kind or size into the Town of Klemme must first procure a permit from the Mayor.

The Ordinance provides that a permit to use the streets and alleys for moving buildings, either into or out of Klemme, must be obtained. Failure to secure a permit may get the mover into a peck of trouble, arrest and heavy fine as well.

All hunting and fishing licenses are in effect from April 1 to April 1 the following year. Resident hunting and resident fishing licenses are $1.50 each. Combination hunting and fishing licenses are $2.50.

Revenue from license sales is used to support the activities of the fish and game division of the State Conservation Commission. None of the funds for fish and game purposes come from general tax revenue.

Applications Being Received For Teacher Positions Here

School officials are beginning to receive applications for teaching positions in the Klemme Schools. This would indicate there are more teachers seeking positions in the better schools and should give the board a wider field to choose from than in the past few years when teachers were on the scarce list.

PLANS TO ADOPT CODE AT SPECIAL MEETING SOON

Sees Need For Control Of Building Within Incorporate Limits Of Town

At their regular meeting held Monday evening, the Town Council voiced their approval of a standard Building Code of the Town of Klemme.

Steps are now being taken to procure a standard building code that will be suitable for Klemme and which will meet Standard recommendations now used by many towns and cities, which specifies among other things such important items as limitations on floor joists, studdings, roofs, foundations, chimneys, plumbing, electrical wiring, sanitation, sidewalks, etc.

A building code of this type will encourage the construction of Good homes in Klemme as it will protect the owner from the possibility of having a "shack-type" house built adjacent to his property and thus devaluate it considerably. A house built according the Code will meet FHA specifications and can be FHA financed, and will have top resale value for that reason.

Klemme has for a long time needed a building code and regulations on electrical wiring and plumbing.

RARE CALLING

Salt 'Hay' Farming Easy

NEW YORK.—Ever hear of a salt hay "farmer?"

Austin Berry is one. As a salt hay farmer he merely reaps the harvest. He never has to plow, plant or fertilize, spray or cultivate.

Berry raises salt hay on about 4,000 acres of salt water marshland at Port Norris, N. J. Although he is the third generation of the Berry family to be a salt hay farmer, there are not many others in that field of agriculture, and it is not carried on so widely as it was years ago. For one thing it has to be done on a fairly large scale to be profitable, and for another, it is rather specialized.

Salt hay gets its name from the deposits of salt on it from the air and the tide water that flows periodically over the marshes where it grows. It includes meadow grass, salt grass and "three square" grass and has a variety of uses. Some farmers use it for protecting hot bed plants and potato beds during cold winter nights.

Used in Fruit Packing

It is used also for packing fruit, principally bananas, and as a mulch by strawberry growers, while it finds its way to the pottery trade for packing china and dishes.

During the war it was used extensively on airport runways and concrete roads at Army camps. Years ago it was made into rope, and its use as a feed also was extensive when there were many horses on farms.

Although the market for salt hay as well as the growers of it have dwindled, Berry can sell all he can harvest each year. He gets four to six tons from an acre and in recent years has received $16 to $18 a ton for it. His farm is highly mechanized and has only one horse on it compared with eight tractors, a mower, two side-delivery rakes, eighty wagons, several trucks, a hay baler and a hay hoist.

Berry explains that although he does not have to prepare the land and plant, cultivate and fertilize as other farmers do, the need for road building in the marshes and drainage work in the meadows make salt hay farming as arduous as any other kind of farm work.

Burned in Spring

The roadbeds have to be prepared so that the hay can be taken out of the marshes to high ground for stacking, drying and baling. He crosslays poles, uses a special mud machine to cover the continuous flooring of poles and adds sand and gravel on top of the mud after it dries. A network of drainage ditches is needed so that the tractors can be taken into the marshland for mowing, raking and hauling.

Most of that latter work is done in the spring, when another job is to burn the entire marsh. This is done in the late March or soon thereafter, and it helps produce clear and bright grass.

The hay is harvested when it has grown to a height of ten to eighteen inches. That is about the first of July. As the harvest proceeds, the hay is brought to high ground, where it is stacked to dry.

Screen Director Asserts Grable's Eyes 'Loveliest'

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF. — This may surprise millions of movie fans, but Betty Grable has the "prettiest eyes"—yes, eyes— in the movies. That's the claim of her director, Henry Koster.

Miss Grable's otherwise ample charms may have diverted most attention from her eyes, but Koster insists that her eyes are the loveliest and can't understand why no one else, apparently, has discovered that fact.

Completely ignoring the other features which have made Miss Grable world famous, Koster is going to photograph only a wink.

"Miss Grable can say more in a wink," he said, "than many actresses can say in 50 pages."

Fortunately, he added, the scenes will be in color. It is the shade of blue in Betty's eyes, he said, which makes them especially alluring.

Grable fans need not fear, Koster said, that they won't see any of her times tested beauties. There will by plenty of long shots showing the famous legs going through their paces on the dance floor.

How does Koster rate Miss Grable's underpinning?

"I haven't got around," he said, "to looking at them yet."

Jury Box Prank Upsets Unsuspecting Counsellor

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—"Just a moment," said attorney James Cooper during a court trial here, "There's a rat in the jury box."

Attorney Charles F. Raulston jumped to his feet demanding a mistrial "in view of Mr. Cooper's improper remark."

Judge Joe N. Hunter overruled the motion after one juror had slapped his leg and jumped straight up.

The rat wasn't a juror. It wasn't even a rat. One juror had brushed against the leg of another, causing him to think a rat had run up his trouser leg.

JAILS

Prefers 'In' to 'Out'

ATLANTA, GA.—The police of this Georgia metropolis have a problem on their hands. He is Charlie Schmidt, 65, who likes jails.

Ever since he arrived here several years ago, broke and hungry, his only comfortable moments have been spent in the lockup. He never misses a chance to get there.

Six times in 1949 Schmidt was booked for idling. Six times police recorder A. W. Callaway sent him to jail.

Not long ago, policemen again found Schmidt sleeping in a doorway. When the patrol wagon appeared, he chuckled.

Schmidt was taken before Judge Callaway, his head bowed, perhaps to hide a grin.

This seventh time, however, Mr. Callaway refused to send Schmidt to jail.

"What's the use when he enjoys his punishment?" Mr Callaway protested.

"Find some other place for him," he told Mrs Clyde Aven, a policewoman

Mrs Aven asked Schmidt what his pleasure could be. Schmidt replied that he wanted to "work with the road gang." Told that he absolutely would not get a jail sentence, he almost wept.

"I've no place to go," the wrinkled little man mourned. "I like to be around the jail People are good to me there."

The authorities are trying to find a solution to his problem.

Truman Adds Laurels As Honorary Artist To Varied Talents

WASHINGTON.—President Harry Truman has a new laurel to add to his collection for feats of versatility. In addition to being a pianist of some renown, he is now an honorary cartoonist.

He was presented with a T-square inscribed to show that he now holds honorary membership in the National Cartoonists' society.

The newspaper cartoonists who made the presentation, also gave a T-square and honorary membership to Treasury Secretary Snyder. But the cartoonists, who had been aiding in a treasury bond sales campaign, did not give him the accolade of artist—they merely recognized him as "our fellow bond salesman."

President Truman sat at his desk, before he got the award, and with a crayon drew a cartoon showing himself peering from behind a sketch board In one corner he wrote "H. S T. 1-20-50."

From a distance it looked as if the smiling President was doing a pretty skillful job. He was enjoying himself, for he said, "This is a lot more fun than working for the taxpayers."

When the President was finished Milton Caniff, president of the society, presented the stainless steel T-square.

Here is the secret of Mr. Truman's success as a cartoonist one of the professionals had sketched out the picture in faint pencil lines and the President traced it with the crayon.

Civilization's Dizziness Is Problem to Animals

DENVER, COL.—Modern civilization with its confusion and demands that ofttimes are blamed by psychologists for lowering the standards of motherhood, have their effect on animal mothers as well.

There was the case of old Jennie and the fire engine.

Jennie was about the kindest mamma grizzly bear they ever had at city park zoo here. She was downright silly about her cub. Couldn't do enough, in fact, for the little bear. Sometimes she'd even let the cub smell her hollyhocks.

Somehow, some seeds had fallen on the earthen floor of Jenny's bedroom. And, somehow, the seeds took root and flowered, and Jenny apparently thought the world of the bright blossoms.

She'd lie on her back under the hollyhocks and turn her toes up and play with the cub, letting him romp all over her.

"She was that kind of animal," says Supt. Clyde Hill, boss of the local zoo for 26 years. "Then one day a fire engine came roaring down the street. She grabbed the cub and killed it."

Hill says the noise scared Jenny out of her mind.

On another occasion, Hill saw a lioness kill her cub as a direct result of the housing situation.

She was caged next to a loud mouthed male lion and their duplex was surrounded by a number of other noisy cages. Hill says the lioness got so worried that something was going to happen to her cub that she couldn't sit still. One day, when the male lion next door began slapping at the bars and wharcomphing louder than usual, she snatched up the cub and broke its back.

She was trying to stuff the cub in a far corner of her cage, as far away from the male lion as possible. She didn't mean to hurt her baby.

The Living Faith

Lesson for March 19, 1950

MANY a funeral sermon has been preached over the Christian church, but somehow the corpse never stays put. What keeps it going? All sorts of explanations have been given by unsympathetic outsiders. The church (we are told) is an upper-class hobby, or a lower-class opiate; it is a social club, it is a burial society; it panders to pride, or it is a perverse form of self-torture; it is kept alive by a well-run organization. Such explanations do not explain. The truth is at heart quite simple: The church is kept alive by faith. What is Christian faith, the faith of the church? A study of the Scripture for this week, or a broader search through the New Testament from end to end, will convince any impartial reader of the falsehood of some of the notions about what Christian faith is.

Dr. Foreman

Some have claimed that it is nothing but faith in the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man. Let the reader try to find this in the New Testament if he can.

If you had said this to an early Christian, he would have replied along this line: That is just the problem—how can we become sons of God? How can men achieve brotherhood? Others tell us that faith is belief in a series of doctrines.

Let the reader search the New Testament and see if he can find there anything about faith in a creed. Sometimes this notion takes another form—that faith originally was a belief that Jesus' beliefs were true; in other words, that faith is accepting the "religion of Jesus."

Now the church from the beginning believed that Jesus' thoughts were true thoughts; but faith was never a simple second-hand acceptance of any one's creed, not even that of Jesus. The faith we find in the New Testament is none of these things. Still less is it faith in the saints, in Mary, or in an "infallible" church.

Faith: Not About, But In . . .

THE FAITH that broke out in glorious light in those early days of the church, and has continued shining down through the centuries, was not belief about anything or anybody, it was belief IN Some One; and that Some One was Jesus Christ.

There is a simply astonishing variety of ways in which he is spoken of in the New Testament. He is Son of Man, he is teacher and healer, he is the first-born of many brothers; he is Priest and Sacrifice, he is the Propitiation, the Reconciler of men to God; he is Master and Lord, he is the Word—that is, what God has to say to us; he is the Son of God, he sits on the throne of the universe, he will judge every man.

To put it quite bluntly, the church believed (and still believes) in a supernatural Christ and not only in a human Jesus They believed in him as a teacher, as the Teacher indeed; but not merely as one whose teachings had been interrupted by an untimely death. They did not "play down" his death, on the contrary they played it up.

Christ crucified for us is always strongly in their minds. But they were far from leaving him as it were on a crucifix.

Any form of Christianity that thinks of Jesus chiefly as a Christmas baby; or a starry-eyed idealist; or as a pathetic figure hanging on a crucifix is a perversion of New Testament ways of thought. Everywhere in the center is the Christ who "was dead and is alive forevermore."

There Is No Other

A YOUNG MOSLEM who became a Christian and is very happy about it, was asked what it was that changed him, for Moslems are hard to change. It was not an argument, he said, it was the lives of some missionaries in Iran whom he knew.

He wanted what they had—it was as simple as that. And he went on to say this: "Christianity doesn't have much in theology that Mohammedanism doesn't have. There is just one thing Christianity has that we didn't have, nor anything like it: Jesus Christ."

That is what—that is who wins men today, and that was the secret of the early church, and that is the secret today of the living church everywhere: Christ alive by faith in the lives of those who love him.

MIRROR Of Your MIND ■ ■ ■ Child's Heroes Are Important

By Lawrence Gould

Does it matter whom a child picks as his heroes?

Answer: Few things matter more, for better or worse. For a child's personality is largely formed through the process of "identifying himself" with the people whom he feels it would be most desirable to be—or to "be like"—and if these are cruel, vulgar or dishonorable, he will tend to follow their example. With a boy, heroes are usually chosen on the basis of their seeming strength or power, so it's most important that the real or imaginary characters whose strength he admires—above all, his father—shall be worthy of his emulation.

Will recalling last night's dreams help you sleep?

Answer: I am not sure, but it is worth trying. A friend told me recently that he habitually puts himself to sleep by reconstructing his dreams of the previous night and trying to go on from where he was in them when he woke up, and I realized that I had often done the same thing when my sleep was disturbed in the early morning hours. Since the function of dreams is to let you sleep by easing the tension that might keep you wakeful, if you can start dreaming in imagination, it may well serve as a short cut to real slumber.

Should you be afraid of being "under obligation"?

Answer: Not too much so. To be sure, no self-respecting person wants to think of himself as a sponger, but the fear of letting anyone do more for you than you can immediately repay can be carried to neurotic extremes. To refuse to allow an old friend to help you when you are in serious trouble is to picture him—at least, unconsciously—as gloating over you or wanting to get you under his thumb. Extreme "independance" which insists you never shall be beholden to anyone may be your defense against a secret wish to be dependent.

Shingles Subject to Complications

By Dr. James W. Barton

ONE OF THE commonest skin ailments, which is really believed to be a virus (tiny organism) infection of the nervous system is Herpes Zoster or shingles, as it is usually called. There is no special treatment needed, as shingles runs its own course.

The outstanding point about shingles is that it runs a course of four to six weeks, and then clears up. The patient is assured that he will never have a second attack, just as in such diseases as typhoid and scarlet fever.

There are, however, many sufferers with shingles who will tell you that their particular attack lasted for months, not for weeks, and they had more than one attack.

Skin and nerve specialists state that the reason some cases last for months and second attacks occur is because the patient, by scratching the skin, infects it with other organisms which, of course, delay recovery. These other organisms decrease the power or effect of the shingles organism, so that its effects on the body are not sufficient to arouse enough body resistance to prevent another attack of shingles.

In "The Journal of Neurology, Neurosurgery and Psychiatry," London, Drs. C.W.M. Whitty and A.M. Cook, describe three patients with shingles, all of whom showed myelitis (inflammation of the spinal cord) as a complication.

Two of these cases had several attacks of shingles in different locations in the body over a period of two or three months, thus showing a difference from the usual behavior of the zoster or shingles virus which confers lifelong immunity by a single attack.

The third patient had a zoster infection brought on by injury to the fifth nerve. Sometimes subsequent attacks are brought on by injury in the form of a growth such as cancer or tuberculosis.

Should shingles occur, have the patient try to avoid scratching the eruption, and should the attack be prolonged, have the family physician consulted to prevent complications or treat any complications which may be present.

Household Hints

Get a pair of your husband's old socks for a good furniture polishing session. Slip one on each hand for quick, easy dusting after using the furniture polish.

An owner's guide is always included with your gas range. It's a good reference for time-saving hints on meal preparation and cooking, and simple everyday care.

Laundry bleach whitens kitchen sinks. Pour on the wet porcelain, then rinse well.

When making pancakes that call for cornmeal and have no extra flour added, be sure to stir well each time you take a spoonful of batter up for frying.

When your hands feel puckered up or have that parboiled appearance after washing in soap suds, rub them with vinegar or lemon juice to make them soft and white. This also helps to prevent chapping.

Pay Check—Then and Now

OUR ATTENTION was called, as you might say, to a number of salaries paid ballplayers recently. Joe DiMaggio and Ted Williams were the only two above $75,000, but there were several that ranged from $35,000 to $60,000, including Bob Feller, Stan Musial, Tommy Henrich, Jackie Robinson and a few others.

Grantland Rice

We are not inclined to shed tears over anything that happens in this upside-down world, but it seemed at the moment that tears were due for the old guard—Matty, Alexander, Cy Young, Lajoie, Walsh, Delehanty, Joe Jackson—on through a long list of ballplayers, certainly the match of any we have today.

I recall the feud that developed between Nap Lajoie and Ed Delehanty of the long-ago Phillies.

"We were getting $2,500 a year," Lajoie told me once. It might be remembered at the time both were hitting around .400. Delehanty had just struck off four home runs in one game. They agreed to stick it out together for $3,000 a year—two ballplayers who today would be good for at least $75,000 a year. It seems that only Delehanty signed for $3,000, leaving Lajoie out in the frosty cold. So Larry jumped and signed with the Cleveland club of the new league for $8,000—an incredible salary, paid by Charlie Somers, the millionaire.

Then I looked back and recalled Big Walsh who pitched 66 games in 1908, of which he won 40 and saved 12 others. The great Walsh threw his arm away that season for the princely sum of $4,500, paid him by a wild spender known as Charles Comiskey. Comiskey also paid Shoeless Joe Jackson around $4,000 or $4,500. All that Jackson could do was to chase Ty Cobb with a batting average of .410. That was a total of $9,000 for Walsh and Jackson, who today would be cheap at $70,000 a year.

Mathewson's top salary was $10,000. So was Hans Wagner's. Matty was easily a $60,000 pitcher and Wagner an $80,000 or $100,000 ballplayer. How many are now around who have led a big league eight years at bat, in addition to being tabbed the greatest shortstop of all time?

Cy Young was winning 20, 25 and over 30 games a year for a royal stipend, ranging from $3,000 to $8,000 a season. Maybe it was only $5,000 a year. He won only 512 games and wound up practically broke after 22 years. Compared to old-timers, the ballplayers today are business tycoons and financial geniuses. They are getting paid 10 for 1 above the kings of yesterday. An ordinary .260 hitter today can get more than Wagner, Jackson, Walsh, Mathewson or Alexander. Ty Cobb made his money from a soft drink, not from a soft club owner.

Shorter Pay—Longer Years

The old system of lower pay at least had one extra advantage for the club owner. The ballplayer had to hang around longer.

For example there are a few 10-year men left in both leagues. But at the golden distribution which took place from 30 to 40 years ago—or some 20 years ago—look what happened: Pop Anson hung on for 26 years. So did Jack Quinn. Ty Cobb spent 24 years in big-league harness and Hans Wagner was on deck 23 years.

Tris Speaker and Nap Lajoie adorned the infield and outfield for over 22 seasons. Cy Young was a 22-year man. Remember—these were all stars—the top of the flock. There are any number who worked on the big time lot for 15 to 18 years. But today Joe DiMaggio is one of the long-time veterans left.

Managers will tell you that the game has grown so much faster than it used to be that only a few exceptions can outlast 10 or 12 years.

Well, Cobb hit around .330 in his 24th campaign. Wagner was still a star in his 43rd year and his 23rd season. I'd rather have had Wagner at 38 or even 40 than any shortstop in the game today.

Someone asked Jack Quinn one day how it was that he was still pitching after 24 seasons. "That's easy," Quinn said. "A wife and six children."

Quality of Mercy Was Strained When Mantell Played 'Richard'

By BILLY ROSE

A few years back, I got the nobby notion of reviving "Henry VIII," by one W. Shakespeare, and the day after the first three-line announcement appeared on the drama pages my office was cram-jammed with well known actors who were willing to work for what ordinarily would have been their agents' commissions.

Subsequently, for reasons that have nothing to do with this piece, I pigeon-holed my plans for doing "Henry," but I sure learned a lot about show folks during the month I was buddying up to the Bard.

To nine out of ten of them, I found, the pentameters of William the Great are the chocolate sauce on the profiterole, and during rehearsals they go about their business as if they were in a temple of worship. On opening night, as far as the cast is concerned, the theater has stained glass windows, and I'm not exaggerating when I say the actors would probably kill anyone who tried to foul up the performance.

Billy Rose

If you think I'm using "kill" carelessly, try this one on for sighs . . . .

BACK IN 1904, an obscure thespian named Robert Mantell, who had been playing desultory one-nighters in the Midwest, received word that a choice Broadway theater would be available during the Christmas season. He promptly cancelled his road engagement and brought his troupe to New York, but shortly after his arrival he discovered that the "choice" theater he had been offered was the Princess, a small second-story auditorium on Broadway between 27th and 28th streets.

No more daunted than solvent, Mantell announced he would present his production of "Richard III" on December 5, and when friends and colleagues warned him that not a hundred people would climb a flight of rickety stairs to see a Shakespearean play during the holidays, he shrugged his threadbare shoulders and posted his rehearsal schedule.

Immediately, however, there was trouble. The stage crew insisted on a scenic rehearsal, and when the impoverished actor refused they decided to get even by lousing up his show on opening night.

On the evening of the 5th, a minute after Mantell began to decibel his way through the initial lines, a stagehand lunged at him from behind a cloth drop and almost knocked him into the pit. And a few moments later the same "accident" happened again.

When the act was over, Mantell quietly told the crew that he would kill the next man who tried to disrupt his performance—and halfway through the second act he darned near did. In the middle of a speech, he saw the outline of a hand behind the curtain trying to locate him and, never faltering in his lines, he drew his dagger and plunged the blade full-force into the drop.

When he went into the wings at the end of the scene, one of the crew grabbed him and said, "You've killed our head carpenter."

"I hope to Heaven I did," said Mantell. But when he examined the stagehand he found the wound was only a gash in the thigh.

TO MAKE SURE no one would misunderstand how he felt, the actor went up to his dressing room and came down wearing the iron-studded glove that was part of his costume in the last act. "Any more trouble," he said, "and I shall brain each and every one of you."

The stagehands looked at Mantell, at the mailed glove, and at the bleeding man on the floor. And from then until the final curtain, the crew was as quiet as a Scottish meeting house after a call for contributions.

Next day, the critics hailed Mantell's performance as "the greatest 'Richard' since the days of Booth," and before the week was out he had been signed by the late William A. Brady, under whose management he went on to achieve recognition as one of America's leading classic actors . .

Recently, Theresa Helburn of the Theatre Guild offered to let me buy a small piece of "As You Like It," starring Katharine Hepburn. "In all fairness," she said, "I think I ought to tell you that Katy's contract is only until June."

"I'm not going to brood about that," I said. "The play is by Shakespeare, and if it gets over, I doubt whether Hollywood will see her again until both she and the scenery fall apart."

THE RIGHTEOUS

BY GRACE NOLL CROWELL

FRIEND, do you mourn the passing
Of some loved one today?
Try to remember that often
"He taketh the righteous away
From the evil to come." He watches
Above us with infinite care,
And He sees that the future may be Too hard for a heart to bear;
And so in His loving mercy
He signals that one to come
Into the light and the glory
Of an eternal home,
To be safe and sheltered forever.
"He taketh the righteous," He said,
"From the evil to come." O mourner,
May you be comforted.

IRONCLAD EXCUSE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

SHORTLY AFTER his marriage to Lynn Harvey it became evident to Burt Englewood that his wife was a procrastinator of the first order.

This was annoying because Burt was used to order and system and routine and regular schedules. He had definite time for doing things, and he did them as planned. He was never late for an appointment, and never left articles of clothing strewn around. He never set over until tomorrow things that could be done today.

Despite his annoyance, Burt tried to be fair. He realized that there must be certain things about his own habits that proved distracting to Lynn. And so, instead of complaining, he endeavored to discover his own faults and rectify them in the hopes that she would take notice and try to improve her own deficiencies.

3-Minute Fiction

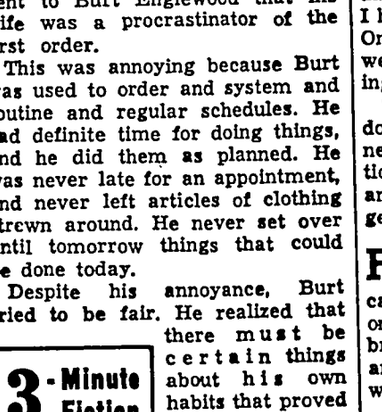
But no matter to what ends he went his endeavors and sacrifices made no impression whatever on Lynn. She continued blithely to procrastinate, and the blase innocence with which she accomplished it fairly caused Burt to writhe. At length he was driven to complaint. The occasion was provoked by a bureau drawer void of socks when Burt was in sore need of these articles of apparel.

"Good heavens, Lynn!" he blurted. "I own two dozen pairs of the things. Certainly there must be one washed and mended."

Lynn's eyes widened. She looked apologetic and contrite. "Darling! I'm so sorry. I intended to finish them up last night, but as you know, the Westlands dropped in and I simply couldn't."

Which was true.

After awhile Burt began to suspect his wife of strategy, of manufacturing excuses for the sole purpose of evading the inconvenience of household duties. He began to suspect her of being lazy. The more he thought about it, the more convinced he became and presently he accused her openly.



". . . You're just downright lazy, and I don't mind telling you it's getting on my nerves."

Lynn looked at him with a hurt and angry expression. "Burt Englewood! You think that! Of all things! Why, I can't believe it! And I have been trying to improve, too. Only— only I haven't been feeling well lately. I've even thought of going to a doctor."

"Doctor!" Burt scoffed. "You don't need any doctor. What you need is a little backbone and ambition! You're just downright lazy, and I don't mind telling you it's getting on my nerves."

FOR A MONTH THINGS were serene. And then one day Burt came home and found Lynn asleep on the living room couch, and the breakfast dishes still in the sink and dinner not yet started. He woke her roughly.

"Well, what's your iron-clad excuse this time? Have a pain in your foot or something?"

"No," said Lynn, "it's in my side. I don't know what it is, Burt. Besides, I was dreadfully tired. I'm awfully sorry."

"Tired? Lazy, you mean!"

Lynn sighed and started for the kitchen. "All right, Burt. I'm sorry you don't believe me."

Burt was mightily pleased with himself. Moreover, it gave him a certain feeling of superiority, appeased his vanity.

Thus having satisfied himself that Lynn was once and for all definitely cured and having promised himself that he would never again break down when she offered her excuses, it was something of a shock to return home two days later and find her stretched full length on the couch.

"Well," he roared, "what is this, a game? There's plenty to be done around here, yet you seem to find time enough to take a snooze. Just what is your excuse this time? Now don't tell me you're sick or something. That gag's worn out."

But Lynn didn't move. She lay there, very still. And presently Burt came nearer, bent down to peer at her face. A horrible, sickening fear clutched at his heart; a wretched sense of shame and guilt and self-condemnation.

For Lynn had an iron-clad excuse at last that was flawless.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

MONA FREEMAN, pretty, hazel-eyed, blonde, is 24; in "Dear Wife" she plays a 16-year-old girl, in "Copper Canyon" she is a young widow. She prefers adult roles, but teen-age ones haunt her, because she looks the part in real life. Probably her favorite role, however, is that of mother. Her daughter, Mona, who must be enchanting, is three. One of the year's most pleasant interviews was the recent one with Miss Freeman and her husband, in New York for "Dear Wife", which was barely mentioned, because the stories they told about their little girl were so completely delightful.

When two "Truth or Consequences" contestants failed to complete a consequence—falling asleep in Chicago's Union Terminal for a $5,000 prize—Ralph Edwards received an avalanche of letters. More than 350 listeners said they could fall asleep in the railroad station without half trying, and asked for a chance to prove it.

Jack Buetel got into the movies with no trouble at all. Three weeks after he reached Hollywood and began trying for a screen career, Howard Hughes picked him to portray Billy the Kid in "The Outlaw."

Jean Hersholt (renewed as "Dr. Christian" for five years) really needed a doctor when he finished signing 2,500 copies of his translation of Hans Christian Anderson's fairy tales for the Heritage club. Incidentally, the awards in the 19th annual Dr. Christian radio script contest will be announced May 17. Prizes so far awarded total $110,000.

Danny Kaye ended a wonderful contract with Warners—five pictures to be made in five years.

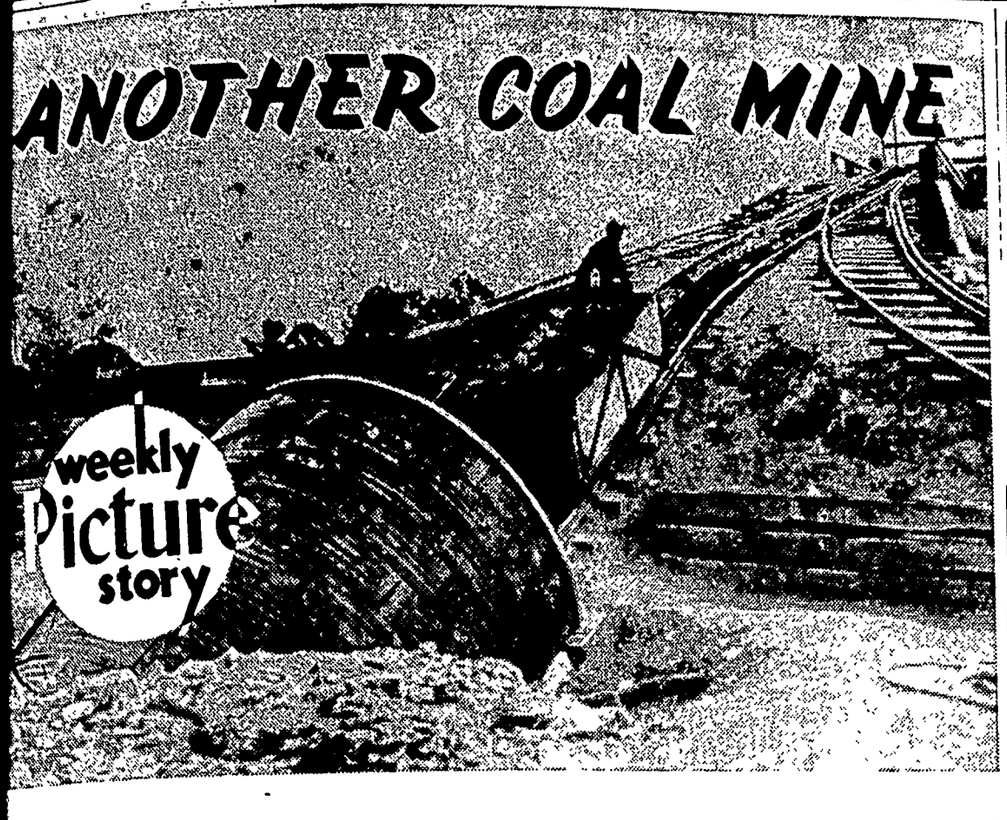
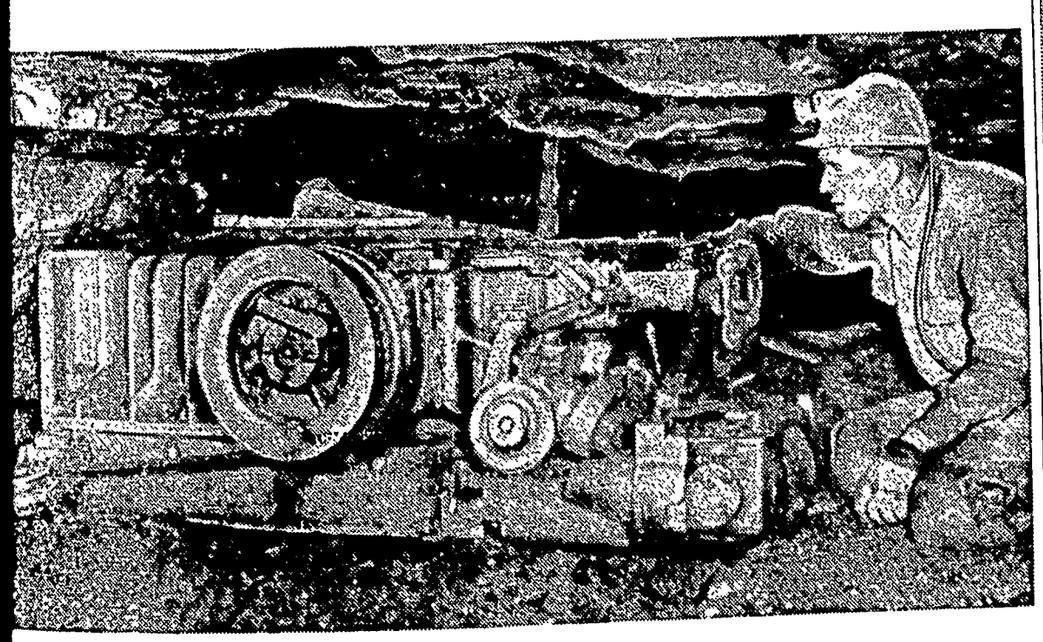
ANOTHER COAL MINE

weekly Picture story



With the nation proceeding spasmodically from the throes of one coal controversy to another during recent years, public interest in miners, what they do and how and where they work has been heightened. Hence, the tapping of a mountain of coal — about 30 million short tons of it in North Carolina recently was big news. The coal is on the right side of the mountain at Sanford, N. C., and from 50 to 60 feet of it come to the surface during a normal production day at the Cumnock mine of the Raleigh mining corporation. The photo above shows a safe-by-tube, easy-grade tunnel running 1,500 feet under deep river to cuttings on the other side of the stream.



A little mountain of coal slowly grows at pit opening of the Cumnock mine as output of 60-man, around the clock, machineried operation pushes coal upwards. This stockpile likely will never grow large, because easy transport facilities make for easy distribution.

Brannan Clamps Down

ONE OF THE QUICKEST methods of repealing a "bad" law or an unpopular law is to enforce it to the letter. The concensus here is that this is the method being followed by Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan with reference to the present price support law on farm commodities.

For Secretary Brannan not only has the reputation of being a good administrator, he also is considered an astute politician. There is little question but that the secretary is on solid ground and is following the letter of the law in enforcing the price support law with reference to potatoes, cotton and peanuts, the results of which are leaving such a bad taste in the mouths of the consuming public, if not the farmers directly concerned.

Of course, Secretary Brannan can fall back on the "record" and point out that he predicted the present law wouldn't work to start with, that in spite of supports, farm income is dropping, that it is already off about two billion dollars and still going down; that in the program of government buying to keep supply in line with demand, the taxpayers are putting out millions of dollars annually and on top of that are paying retail prices, as in the case of potatoes, higher than equally as good potatoes can be imported from Canada.

All of which is building up sentiment to try out Brannan's own plan for price supports fixed on income instead of parity and direct payments to farmers on the difference between market price and a fair price for perishable commodities, putting an end to government purchase of all perishable farm commodities.

Co-op Tax Talked

Although the house ways and means committee has some 1,700 pages of testimony, a movement spearheaded by Congressman Noah Mason of Illinois, a member of the committee, put so much "heat" on, that Chairman Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina again opened up the question of taxation of farmer cooperatives..

Of course, back of the spearhead is the National Tax Equality association which is seeking to tax patronage refunds of co-ops and point to this as one of those "loopholes" in the tax law to which the President referred in his tax message to congress.

NAM Attacks AFL

The National Association of Manufacturers in a recent "Washington newsletter" charged that the American Federation of Labor is seeking to "create a farmer, labor and small business alliance to obtain political control of the country."

What happened was that the AFL league for political action attempted to analyze record votes on three issues each in the house and senate and by compiling the record on "three key labor-farmer-small business issues" concluded that 26 senators and 81 representatives "opposed the best interests of workers, farmers and small businessmen through the first session of the 81st congress." The issues chosen were the Taft-Smith-Donnell amendment to the national labor relations act of 1949, which would have repealed the Taft-Hartley act in name only; the Taft amendment to the national housing act of 1949 to eliminate loans for minor farm improvements, which was defeated 20 to 41; and the appointment of John Carson to the federal trade commission.

Said the AFL paper, "Carson is a friend of cooperatives and small businessmen. Big business opposed Carson. A vote against Carson was a vote against the interests of the small businessman." He was approved by a 45 to 25 vote.

Says the NAM newsletter: "What the AFL political leaders are attempting to do is to classify members of congress as being for or against labor, the farmer and small business. Many members of congress believe that the AFL program is to create a farmer, labor and small businessman alliance to obtain political control of the country."

Another labor publication, the United Automobile Worker, says: "What big business thinks of organized labor and organized farmers can now be stated in its own words. Robert R. Young, who controls the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad and is grasping for control of the New York Central, publishes a propaganda magazine in his December issue. He says: "As monopolies, agriculture and labor, in collusion with politics, tower far above business, and their shadows threaten to rise higher and higher above business."

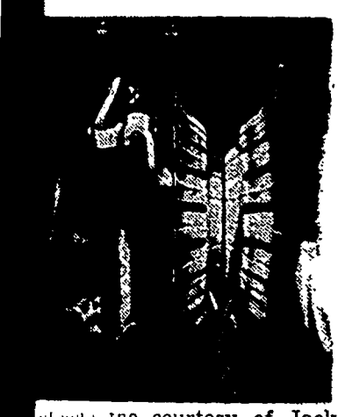
n F. Greiman, Hancock unty Farmer, Is Inventor

OF FARMERS TURN TO BEN F. GREIMAN, INVENTOR

the March edition of the Farm & Home Register ap- d a two column article the caption "What's New arm Equipment" and local rs found more than pass- nterest in the invention of F Greiman, of Garner. is known as the Greiman y Shield and is designed otect small plants from be- buried and from being d down with clods and rub- that shovels of cultivators throw up during the early vations of a crop. The Grei- shield straddles the row of ts and protects them.

Made For All Tractors

is new shield is made for on all tractors. It is adjust- , and it permits fast plow- so that farmers can accom- much more than they d with the ordinary shield. e "time is money" these iman Rotary Shields pay for nselves in a short time.



ough the courtesy of Jack ek, librarian at the Des ines Register, we are able to this picture to give a bet- idea of the shield.

anufactured In Des Moines

t is being manufactured by Industrial Tool & Steel Co., Des Moines, on a royalty is. The patent for the Grei- n Rotary Shield was issued the U. S. Patent Office some e ago. Every agricultural periment station in the coun- is using them. The name of s valuable shield has spread roughout the world where ch crops are raised as we in wa produce. Mr. Greiman t week received a letter from agricultural station in Swed- asking that six sets of these elds be sent for use during e 1950 cultivating season.

Already 3000 Sold

Already there have been 3000 the Greiman Rotary Shields d and numerous implement ms handling all kinds of actors and farm machinery e stocking them.

reiman Has Other Inventions

Mr. Greiman also has other ventions. One is a Double w Mounted Mower Windrow- . It is designed to use on actor mowers right behind e sickle. It will windrow the ain and row it on either side the machine far enough out that the tractor wheels do t run over the straw and ess it into the ground. Its her advantage is that it places e straw on top of the stub- e which gives some support nd allows air to pass under e straw during the drying rocess. Mr. Greiman's idea is allow uniform drying before e combines pass along for the reshing process.

Grain Drying Bins

What may well prove to be is greatest and most valuable vention is a drying plant for rain—especially corn and soy- eans. Two bins are used and etween them is a mechanism rough which the corn is ele- ated about twenty feet, then rops through a heated tube in hich zig-zag plates move it rom side to side as it passes long. The heat is blown in rom a side opening. The heat an be supplied by cobs or wood that would otherwise be wasted around the farm. After the grain has been elevated and delivered to a bin, a reverse action takes it to the top of the tube and it passes down again through the zig-zag tubes into the bin from which it started.

Served As Supervisor

Mr. Greiman is well known in Hancock County. He served as a member of the Board of Supervisors some years ago. He is also known as a barnyard golf player of extraordinary cunning. Years ago he came to Britt annually to participate in horseshoe pitching tournaments. But it is since he turned inventor that he is becoming most useful to his fellowman. Who knows, he may yet become the best known Hancock County citizen.

Use of Phosphates Is To Get Special Emphasis At State College

Iowa State College has become the center of phosphorus research relating to soils and fertilizers for the north central states.

Dr. Charles E. Friley, president of the college, this week described the program.

One phase of the work is under way through a regional cooperative project with the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Agricultural Engineering. U. S. Department of Ariculture. The agricultural experiment stations of Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, Kansas and Nebraska are also cooperating.

TVA Helping

Emphasis will be on factors affecting the efficiency of different phosphate fertilizers and on the chemical reactions of phosphates with soils in relation to the residual value of the fertilizers.

In addition to the cooperative program now in operation, a contract has just been signed between the Tennessee Valley Authority and the college whereby the college will receive $6,000 during the present fiscal year to study the relative efficiency of various experimental fertilizers under soil and climatic conditions typical of the north central region. Similar sums are expected to be provided by TVA each year through 1954.

The Muscle Shoals plant of TVA is considered a national laboratory for research in fertilizer processing, and it wants to test its products in various areas of the country.

Iowa Headquarters

In selecting Iowa as the center of research in the north central states, TVA pointed out that the Iowa Agricultural Experiment station already has shown considerable interest in TVA phosphates, and has conducted experiments with these fertilizers. Iowa is particularly well suited for such work because it has considerable acreage of acid prairie soils as well as calcareous soils. TVA also took into consideration the fact that Iowa already is headquarters for the regional phosphorus research project in which the north central states and the USDA are participating.

In Iowa the TVA research will include field experiments as well as laboratory and greenhouse tests. Iowa State College will establish long-term projects at its outlying experimental farms and will work with some individual farmers on short-term projects.

Three new research men are to be stationed at the Agricultural Experiment Station to aid with the phosphorus research.

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

How does a man become an Iowa highway patrolman? It isn't a simple case of drawing a uniform and reporting for duty Monday morning.

This department is now selecting from among 140 applicants the 15 men who will attend the recruit section of the highway patrol school to be held through April at Camp Dodge. (Applications are now closed.

The process by which these few best qualified men will be sifted from the large group of applicants is one of investigation, testing and selection. Step by step, here is the way a successful applicant - call him John Smith - will become one of the 15 recruits admitted to the school.

Some months ago, Smith sent to patrol headquarters his formal application along with a certificate of physical examination by his doctor. It appeared from the application that John met the physical requirements of the patrol.

He was then asked to meet the partol sergeant in charge of the district nearest his home. During his interview the sergeant made a personal evaluation of Smith and submitted a report to headquarters. Those obviously unfitted for patrol service are elliminated at this point.

Smith's next step depends not on anything he can do at the moment, but on what he has done in the past. Patrolment near his home are directed to run a character investigation on him.

When this investigation is complete, another report is sent to headquarters which pretty well defines the reputation John Smith has built in his own community. More applicants are eliminated at this point.

But if Smith is still under consideration, he will soon join the fairly select group which will be called to Des Moines for the major examination. Here he will take intelligence, memory and observation, and spelling tests and write an orginal composition. Then he will face the final rating board made up of the commissioner of public safety, the chief of the highway patrol and the five patrol lieutenants.

If smith impresses the rating board and the results of all previous tests and investigations are satisfactory, his biggest test is still to come - the highway patrol training school.

Silver Wedding Observed Sunday By Quentin Stilles

COUPLE HAS LIVED IN KLEMME OF THE PAST EIGHTEEN YEARS

Were Married At Garner First Day Of Spring In 1925

Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Stille held open house Sunday afternoon and evening at their home in Klemme in observance of their 25th wedding anniversary, date of which was March 21st.

Decorations were in pink and white. A daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harlan Stille had baked and decorated a three tier cake for the occasion. Lunch was served to some 150 visitors who called during the day and evening by Mrs. Roy Schaefer, Mrs. Ned Howard and Mrs. Milton Garfin. Mrs. Harlan Stille poured. Mrs. Ernest Scheetz, of Ventura, sister of Mrs. Quentin Stille, had charge of the guest book. There were guests from eleven towns and cards were received from all over the country.

Evelyn, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Carothers of Garner, and Quentin Stille, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Stille of Liberty township, were united in marriage on March 21, 1925 at the United Presbyterian parsonage in Garner by the Rev. W. Bruce Gillis. Their marriage was kept a secret until Christmas time as Mrs. Stille was teaching at the time.

The young couple lived a year and a half on the parental J. J. Stille farm and then moved to Garner where Quentin was employed by the State Highway Commission. He worked on the viaduct near Garner during its construction. Later the couple moved to the Wm. Stille farm in Liberty township where they farmed.

Eighteen years ago the Stille family moved to Klemme and Mr. Stille has been employed continuously as a cream hauler on the same route. Many of his customers who were children when he started hauling cream are now operating their own farms. To many of his patrons he is regarded as one of the family.

For the past 15 years Mr. Stille has also had charge of the local cemetery. Mrs. Stille has taught school for a total of ten years. During the teacher shortage, Mrs. Stille again volunteered to help and has done substitute teaching for the past two years or more.

Mr. and Mrs. Stille are the parents of four children: Glen Allen, who died at the age of 3 years and 7 months; Harlan, who is married and lives in Mason City; Shirley, now Mrs. Milton Garfin of Mason City; and Larry, a freshman in the Klemme high school and a member of the Shamrock basketball squad.

Mr. and Mrs. Stille and their family are members of the Methodist Church and have always been interested in the affairs of our school and our town. They were presented with many beautiful gifts, cards and silver coins in rememberance of the occasion.

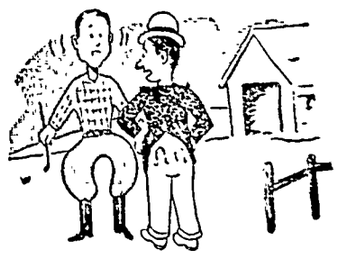
Surprise!

A one-armed man entered a restaurant at noon and seated himself at a lunch-counter, next to a man, who evidently was of the inquisitive type. The one-armed man paid no attention to him but kept on eating with his one hand. Finally the inquisitive one could stand it no longer, and said: "I beg your pardon, sir, but I see you have lost an arm."

The one-armed man picked up his empty sleeve with his hand and peered anxiously into it. "Bless my soul!" he exclaimed, looking up with great surprise. "I do believe you're right."

UPSY-DAISY



"The horse I was riding wanted to go one way, and I wanted to go another."

"Who won."

"He tossed me for it."

Getting Even

A general and a colonel were walking down the street. They met many privates, and each time the colonel would salute he would mutter, "The same to you."

The general's curiosity soon got the better of him, and he asked: "Why do you always say that?"

The colonel answered: "I was once a private and I know what they are thinking."

The Main Question

"My father," said the young woman to an admirer, "is a very good business man. When he was quite young he managed to make a large fortune. Would you like to hear how he did it?"

"Certainly," said the young man, "but tell me first, has he still got it?"

Could Be

A very thin man met a very fat man in the hotel lobby.

"From the looks of you," said the fat man, "there might have been a famine."

"Yes," was the reply, "and from the looks of you, you might have caused it."

Hard to Please

A girl was driving in her new car when something went wrong with the engine. The traffic light changed from green to red and back to green and still she could not get the car to budge. The traffic cop came up.

"What's the matter, miss?" he inquired. "Ain't we got colors you like?"

So Thoughtful

"What did you give baby for his first birthday?"

"We opened his money box and bought the little darling a lovely electric iron."

Definition

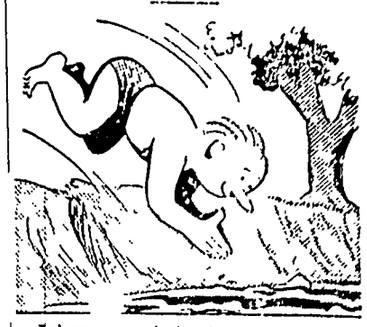
"What's the difference between valor and discretion?"

"Well, to go to a swell restaurant without tipping the waiter would be valor."

"I see. And discretion?"

"That would be to dine at a different restaurant the next day."

SMART FIGURING



Johnny giggled when the teacher read the story of a man who swam a river three times before breakfast.

"You do not doubt that a trained swimmer could do that, do you?" asked the teacher.

"No, sir," replied Johnny, "but I wonder why he didn't make it four times and get back to the side where his clothes were."

MATTER OF LOCATION

Tommy came home proudly from his first day at school.

"What did you learn in school?" asked his mother

"Nothing," said Tommy; then, seeing the look of disappointment on her face, he added, "but I learned a lot during recess!"

Last Laugh

One chilly day, a Midwestern concern advertised that it would give away coal shovels to the first 150 persons who showed up at its office. It did, too, and that evening 150 persons were shoveling coal in their basements with brand new shovels, each of which had this message engraved on it: "If you had installed one of our oil heaters, you would now be sitting comfortably in the living room."

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE
BY ROGER C. WHITMAN

QUESTION: How would you remove a spot on an office floor about 2x4 feet, caused by dragging feet when spinning in chair from desk to typewriter, without sanding the whole floor? The floor has had a coat of stain, and two coats of shellac.

ANSWER. Take off the remains of the shellac by quick wiping with denatured alcohol. Then apply one or two coats of fresh shellac, thinning them down with denatured alcohol, about one-half. Feather out the strokes. Do not expect perfect results. If you intend to do over the whole floor at some time, you might consider a penetrating floor wax or penetrating floor seal. These finishes are not apt to show scratches.

World-Wide Church

Lesson for March 26, 1950

GOD WORKS his purposes out in ways that not even the wisest of his servants can foresee. A beautiful example of this is the way Paul went to Rome. Long before he saw that city he wanted to preach there. All roads led to Rome, as they do to all world-capitals, and people went there from everywhere.

World Horizon

When Paul writes to his "pen-friends" at Rome (15:22-29) of a projected trip to Jerusalem and Spain, taking in Rome on the way, he was laying out a trip to the east and west ends of civilization, the jumping-off places. His plan was as ambitious as if a modern evangelist would write to some church in India: "I aim to visit Iceland, and Japan, and call on you on the way out."

Dr. Foreman

Bond Voyage

PAUL EXPECTED to go to Rome a free man, his ticket (so to speak) reading on through Spain. Actually that was the end of his run He went there under military guard, prisoner under sentence. The story is all there in Acts, how first he was jailed for protection from a blood-hungry mob, then kept in jail on general principles (which is to say, the governor kept hoping he would pay well for an acquittal), and finally appealed to Rome, the highest court of the empire. Appeals were expensive and slow, then as now.

But Paul must have come to look at his imprisonment, false as it was, as a heaven-sent opportunity to make that journey to Rome. It was a gilt-edged accident insurance. Free, he might never escape the plotters and reach Rome alive. Chained, the efficient Roman army would see that he arrived—and he did.

Four pairs of eyes were on him night and day. No plotter could stick him with a dagger or shove him overboard. So—after some hair-breadth escapes to be sure—he was delivered safe and sound in the very city of which he had been dreaming all these years.

The Church at the Hub Of the World

THERE IS NOTHING at all in the New Testament to indicate that the church at Rome was considered, by Paul or any one else, as The Church, or the Mother Church. There is no claim that it was founded by St. Paul, still less by St. Peter.

It grew, as other churches grew, by infiltration. Christians who moved to the big city would get together, and there the church would be. Yet, of course the Roman church was important.

It was important because it was at the hub of the civilized world. Paul did not seem to mind it in the least, that he could work only inside his prison, or "confined to quarters."

Writing from his jail cell to the Philippians, he mentions converts from the army and from the imperial slaves. ("Caesar's household" in Phil. 4:22 does not refer to the Emperor's family, but to the retinue of palace slaves.) We know from the letter to Philemon that Paul converted at least one "jailbird" named Onesimus.

The True Church Is A Marching Church

PAUL KNEW that a soul is a soul, sitting in the emperor's chair or waiting at the emperor's table. God is no respecter of persons. But he also knew that these Christian soldiers would not always stay in Rome; that even Christian slaves would be sold down the river; that the restless feet which brought their owners to Rome would take them away again. Great cities are like that.

Putting down Christianity in Rome was not like putting a single seed into a sheltered corner of the garden. It was like scattering a handful of it to the breeze, to be carried far and wide. Paul's vision is still the vision of the church at its best. The true church marches on, along the highroads and byroads of the world.

We shall never be content with a narrow, sheltered Christianity. We cannot be satisfied with half-world religion. Only world-Christianity matches the grandeur of the New Testament ideal.

SPRING (?) ARRIVED WITH SNOW FLURRIES

According to the calendar, Spring arrived yesterday, but according to the weatherman something went haywire.

Instead of flowers blooming and bird singing, most of the state was reminded that it is still winter, with snow and cold.

The groundhog was right. We had six weeks of winter following February 2nd when he saw his shadow.

KINDERGARTEN NEWS

The kindergarten have got something new in their room this week. Thursday we got 5 little baby chickens. We keep them warm with a light bulb. We have 4 watchers a day. These people watch to see that they have water and feed.

We finished our "Before We Read" books and have now started on a reading book called "We Look And See." I think we will like this book and when we are finished we should know many words.

FIRST GRADE NEWS

The three reading groups have changed their name from bird names to Squirrels, Cotten-Tails and Busy Bees. We have been reading supplementary books in addition to our regular readers and most of us are beginning to enjoy reading to ourselves in our spare time.

Judy Jorgenson visited our room for a short time Monday afternoon and went with the class to a birthday party given for Marijane Baack.

One of the first grade boys, Darryl Nuehring, had an accident in the gym Wednesday noon when he bumped his chin on another boys head. As a result he bit his tongue and was taken to the doctor. We hope to be more careful in the future.

JUNIOR HI NEWS

The eighth grade English class are studying prepositional, infinitive and gerund phrases.

The seventh grade arithmetic class are studying about business problems.

Monday morning we had two movies, Progress in Products and Products of Central America. We learned some very interesting facts about how the primitive people harvest their crops.

Saturday Noel Egeland went to Garner to the spelling contest. He was eliminated in the written contest.

Our motto for the week is: "I had no shoes and complained until I met a man who had no feet."

STORE UP THOSE SHARED MOMENTS

WITH YOUR CHILD

Any time you spend in story time with your youngsters is well invested. The affection, the sharing of interests, and the "Togetherness" will mean much to the children and will bring them closer to you.

When the youngsters have been terrors all day, you sometimes wish the experts would come up with some nice, easy rules that you could use to corral your obstreperous offspring.

Well, believe it or not, you can work yourself out of this job of discipling the "kids" but it will take practice and foresight. It will be worth it, however, for your child's sake.

In her new booklet, "The Road Ahead in Discipline," Mrs. Alma Jones, family relations specialist, Iowa State College, reveals how wise guidance and understanding on the part of parents goes much farther than either harsh punishment or mild reprimands.

Help Themselves

It's very easy, says Mrs. Jones, to either blow off at the youngsters and scare them into toeing the mark, or else let them go their willful way. But that's only a makeshift measure. If you really want to worrying about how the children are going to turn out as they grow into adulthood, you'll help them help themselves.

Some parents are overanxious and some are overcomplacement about disciplining their children. In reality, Mrs. Jones explains, all parents need to look at behavior problems as a driver looks at a car that goes wrong and find out the reason.

The road ahead in dicipline is a lot smoother when the grown folks have a good understanding of what makes their children "tick."

Discipline based on understanding does not mean that Dad and Mom become "softies" and hope things turn out all right. Nor does firmness mean that Dad becomes angry and revengeful every time any one of the youngsters steps out of line.

The aim of good dicipline is to teach the child to do of his own accord the things which his parents have heretofore directed him to do. The more responsibility that a child or young person shows he can accept, the more freedom he can be given to run his own affairs.

Cooperates

"Then the child will grow gradually in ability to make wise decisions without a helping or hindering hand."

It isn't quite as easy along the way as that, Mrs. Jones agrees. But there are several guideposts to helping your child learn as he grows.

One of the most important of these is a warm spirit of affection in the family. Working to be like those we like and acting so that we get approval for our actions are among the most compelling reasons for obedience.

Rewards have a place in molding behavior in wholesome ways, too. These pleasures should come after a task has been done rather than as a bribe. A storybook period, or a surprise picnic, or treats for everyone put attention on desirable conduct at all times. Mrs. Jones' booklet, which tells of effects of different types of dicipline on the attitudes and personalities of children, is available free of charge. It may be obtained from the county extension office, or by writing the Bulletin Office, Iowa State College.

4-H GIRLS DONATE TO STATE CAMP

The Liberty Busy Bees made the first donation to the Hawkeye State 4-H camp from the Hancock County Girl's Clubs by sending $5.00 to the county extension office this week according to Elsie Mae VanWert, county extension home economist.

The leaders heard the plan of the state 4-H camping program and received reading material about the camp at their last leader's training school held in Garner. Forrest Kohrt, county youth assistant, told the ladies that every county in the state is contributing funds in this initial fund-raising program. The first funds will be used to acquire a site for the camping center by the time of the Iowa Girls' 4-H Convention and boys 4-H Short Course.

Several girls clubs voted at their meeting to send their contributions in so let's get 100 percent of the Hancock County Girls' 4-H contributions into the office by March 24th.

COUNTY AGENT URGES SUPPORT OF SET-ASIDE

Declaring that dairying is one of the great factors in soil conservation, county agent Paul Henderson today urged complete cooperation in the June Dairy month advertising set-aside for year around promotion of dairy foods.

Dairying helps stop soil erosion and builds soil fertility, the county agent declared. When land washes away and plant nutrients disappear from the soil, less food is produced and everybody loses. As goes livestock, so goes soil conservation. The better the markets for the dairy products the better it is for dairying.

He said a penny a pound of butter fat set aside at the dairy plants during the month of June is a wise investment for every dairyman. The American Dairy Association is all of us working together to conserve the soil and preserve the American way of life, he stated emphatically.

Let's make Hancock County a 100 per cent county in the ADA set aside this June, he asserted in his appeal to dairy plant operators and fieldman, milk haulers, D.H.I.A. tester and all who make their living from dairying to crusade for the advertising set aside.

EARLY SPRING IS TIME TO CHECK BEE COLONIES

Like all hard workers, bees get an early start in the spring. For that reason, colonies need an early spring check, says Floyd Paddock, extension bee specialist at Iowa State College.

He says there's bee flight earlier than many beekeepers realize. An early check to find and remove any dead colonies will keep these first bee flights from borrowing trouble.

The trouble, Paddock explains, comes from willingness of these first bees to rob and carry home honey left in a dead colony. If the colony died from disease, chances are the honey is infected and the disease will be spread to other colonies if it isn't removed.

Because the early flights are usually made by the most vigorous colonies, and the robbed honey will be placed where it can be used to rear a brood, Paddock thinks it's doubly important to get to any dead colonies before the bees do.

For Convenience, For Comfort, Put Your KITCHEN ON WHEELS

A movable lap table and a comfortable posture chair are inexpensive aids to lighten your kitchen work load. Kithcen tasks become much easier when you can sit down to do them.

When great Aunt Minnie sat down in her rocking chair to peel apples or potatoes, or even to snap the green beans, she was using good common sense.

Probably she sough refuge in that rocking chair because in her old-fashioned kitchen with its inconveniences, the chair rested her tired back and feet. Today's kitchen, modern though it may be in many respects, can be wearisome, too.

But, says Naomi Shank, extension housing and equipment specialist, Iowa State Colege, it's possible in any kitchen to have sit-down counters and working wheels.

Lap Table

A practical, inexpensive way to start making things easier for yourself, particularly if you are not ready to remodel your kitchen right now, is to build a lap table like the one in the picture. Directions for making it are available, free of charge, from your county extension office, or from the Bulletin Office at Iowa State College.

The lapboard table provides a comfortable stand-up work counter and also working surface at a reasonable height, so that you can sit down to prepare fruit or vegetables. It's handy to move about in your kitchen or workroom or out on the porch if you equip it with hard rubber swivel casters.

You can use it for added work space when you're baking—in fact you can sit down while stirring up a cake. Or let it be your canning center.

The lap table can be helpful on laundering days, too. Just move it close to your laundry center and sort clothes, take out stains and even mend clothes sitting down.

On cleaning days, the lap table can serve as the movable center for all your clean-up supplies. Use it to stack the dishes when you're cleaning cupboards, or as a place to pile books when you're wiping up the bookshelves, and save yourself endless steps by rolling your working equipment right along with you.

Kitchen Scooter

Rolling along on its own is the kitchen scooter, a handy device to help you move things. It's just right to transport a heavy sack of flour, or a pail of water, or a basket of wet clothes.

When you wax the floor or scrub, use the kitchen scooter to kneel on and push yourself around. You eliminate all the getting up and down - that's so fatiguing. Use a rubber sponge to cushion your knees while you work. It's the answer too when you're cleaning low cupboard shelves and low woodwork. Directions for making it at home are also available from your local extension office, or from the college.

Posture Chair

Keep a comfortable chair with casters in your kitchen for sit-down jobs. Then you can roll up to and away from work centers without marring your floors, and that with little effort. You can buy such chairs from office supply houses—they're the kind stenographers use. They're called posture chairs because they do help you to maintain good posture and reduce fatigue while at work. You might convert a kitchen chair by sawing off a few inches from the legs, screwing on casters and adding a rubber foam pad on chair seat and back. Put a chair like this in your kitchen and you'll soon be rolling it to the sink, ironing board and sewing machine.

FUNDS AVAILABLE TO PURCHASE RESEARCH EXPERIMENTAL FARM

At the recent Executive Board meeting of the Clarion-Webster Soil Area Experimental Assoc., the treasurer's report was reviewed and the committee felt that sufficient funds were available to purchase an experimental farm in this soil area. To date, twelve of the fourteen counties have turned in their funds and two counties still have their funds.

The Executive Committee is calling a meeting of all the members of the Association on Wednesday, March 8, 1:30 p. m., at the Warden Hotel in Fort Dodge for the purpose of electing directors and officers of the permanent organization. The temporary committee which has been carrying on the work of the Association are Art Sollie, Chairman; Melvin Thorson, Vice Chairman; Fred Farquhar, Secretary; and Hugh Black, Treasurer. A representation from every county participating is essential to conduct the necessary business of the Association.

It is not known where this research farm will be located but it is generally felt that it will be somewhat centrally located between the counties that have participated in raising the funds to purchase this farm. The Associaion hopes to purchase an 80 acre farm or a similar tract to carry on research on soil problems, mainly drainage, crop rotation, farming practices, the use of fertilizer, and other related subjects on which more information is needed in the Clarion-Webster soil area of the state. Other areas throughout Iowa have accomplished similar tasks by purchasing farms in their particular soil type to study the problems which they have. This farm will be the first one in this area to be used for the purpose stated by the Articles in Incorporation which have been filed with the state.

Iowa State College Experiment Station has agreed to carry on the experimental research on this farm. There will be no cost to the members of the Association. The only cost that they will have is the purchase of the farm so that the college will be able to conduct the research on this farm over a long period of time.

Many counties have reached their quota. Among them are Buena Vista, Sac, Clay, Winnebago, Humbolt, and Emmett counties. Other counties getting very close to their quota are Webster, Pocahontas, Kossuth, Hancock, Hamilton, Carroll, Calhoun, and Greene counties.

LUBRICANTS IN TRACTOR NEED SPRING CHANGING

The farm tractor is one item that gets by without a new spring outfit every year, but it needs the transmission and gear lubricant changed before it goes to the field for heavy spring work, says Dale Hull, extension agricultural engineer at Iowa State College.

Changing transmission lubricant cleans out metal chippings and abrasive materials that accumulate in the transmission and gear cases, he points out.

Gear and transmission lubricant changes are especially important for tractors that have been using diluted lubricants for winter work. Tractors with hydraulic systems that operate on oil from the transmission case are less likely to plug up valves in the hydraulic lift if the lubricant is changed regularly.

To make the change, Hull says to pull the drain plugs and drain out all the lubricant that will run out. Then put the drain plugs back in and jack up one of the rear wheels. Put kerosene or fuel oil in the gear case and run the tractor in gear with a wheel jacked up for five minutes, to flush out old lubricant and sludges. The transmission will be clean and the new lubricant will not become contaminated by residues which cling to the interior of the gear case.

Following that operation, the drain plugs can be put back, and the manufacturer's recommended grade of lubricant put in. Now the tractor transmission is ready for the long hours that go with spring field work.

Cuban money is printed in the United States.

USE GOOD ROUGHAGE AS BASIS OF DAIRY RATION

On many Iowa farms as much as 50 percent of the grain fed to dairy cows could be saved for other classes of livestock if the farmer grew an abundance of high-quality roughage, according to Floyd Arnold, extension dairyman at Iowa State College.

The rule of thumb used in feeding cows is to feed 1 pound of grain to every 3½ to 4 lbs. of milk. Experience shows this to be twice as much as would be needed if cows were getting plenty of good-quality roughage.

Not only will good forages decrease the amount of grain that must be fed, but also in some cases it could mean producing more total digestible nutrients per acre, Arnold points out.

For instance, shifting 100 acres of grain crops as grown on typical farms (40 acres of corn, 20 acres of corn for silage, 30 acres of oats, and 10 acres of barley) to 100 acres of alfalfa would actually increase the total digestible nutriants from an average of 1,915 pounds for grain to 2,223 pounds for the alfalfa hay. This is and increase of 16 percent.

Of course. obtaining maximum total digestible nutrients from forages requires increased skill in growing pastures and handling hay, corn silage and grass silage.

Icebergs are always formed of fresh water.

OLD WINDMILL MAY BE IDEAL FOR TV ANTENNA

That old windmill tower that seems to have outlived its usefulness may stage a comeback on Iowa farms.

If it is close enough to the house it probably will make an ideal place for a television antenna, engineers say.

The tower ought to be so located that it will require only a short lead-in to reach the television receiver. A long lead-in of several hundred feet will mean difficulty. The farther you are from the television station the shorter your lead-in must be if best results are to be obtained.

Better have a lower antenna located on the house or some other structure than to gain the height of your windmill tower and lose the signal because of a long lead-in.

Installation of a television antenna and initial adjustment of a receiver is a job for a good serviceman or technician. Problems are much more difficult than in the installation of an ordinary radio receiver.

Yet nearly every Iowa community and most Iowa farms are now within range of a television station. WOI-TV, the television station of Iowa State College, began sending out programs February 21, and has had reports of reception from more than 75 counties in the state. WOC-TV in Davenport, WOW-TV in Omaha, Neb., and stations in Kansas City, St, Louis, Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul can be received in certain sections of Iowa.

DEAD-LINE SET ON FARM SIGN-UP SET

The Hancock County Production and Marketing Administration township committeemen are now contacting farmers for a sign-up of conservation practices in 1950 farm plans which will qualify for government payments. These farm plans must be signed by April 1, 1950.

Some of the township committeemen are holding meetings at school houses and other places to find out farmers' intentions. Landlords and tenants are urged to get together and work out what conservation practices they plan to carry out before they attend one of the meetings.

The conservation-payment program has no direct tie-in this year with the crop control program in which farmers are being asked to plant corn, wheat and potatoes within acreage allotments set for individual farms.

A farmer who does not comply with the crop control program will not be eligible for support price protection on corn, wheat or potatoes he produces, but he still will be eligible to receive a conservation payment.

Payments are made to farmers for Contouring, Establishing sod waterways, spreading agricultural limestone, spreading fertilizer, plowing under green manure crops, legume seedings beyond the normal acreage and tiling.

The present sign-up is the first step in the conservation program. The next is totaling the amount of payments involved if all intended practices were carried out. The third is a check-up in late summer on practices actually carried out. Payment will be made a year from now.

Corn allotment notices were mailed out to all farmers in Hancock County Wednesday, March 8th and farmers dissatisfied with their allotment have 15 days in which to file appeal with the county committee.

Iodine is obtained chiefly from kelp or ashes of burnt seaweed.

GIVE WILDLIFE A BREAK

The heaviest loss of wildlife occurs during the latter part of March and the first of April. At this time of year cover is at its lowest effectiveness. Last season's vegetation, flattened by wind, snow and rain, no longer provides a satisfactory hiding place in much of the normal game area, and many species of wildlife are forced to the dangerous protection of the sheltered roadside ditches. Spring food supplies are low. Weed seeds and waste grain are at a minimum in the fields. Consequently, the grain sifted onto the road in the farm-to-market movement forms a tempting and often deadly invitation to game birds and other forms of wildlife. The mating season is in full swing and results in wide traveling by some species and a total loss of fear and caution in others.

Spring on the highway is truly a dangerous season for the animals of field and forest. Give wildlife a break. Sound your horn and drive slowly when you see wildlife species on the road.

IOWA CAN PRODUCE BEEF AT LOW COST

Can Be Done At As Low Cost As In West If Herd Is Managed Right

Iowa beef cow owners who manage well do a good job of competing with western range cattlemen, according to Rex Beresford, extension beef cattle specialist at Iowa State College.

He says Iowa herds share with range cattle the advantage of relatively low feed and production costs. However, it's very easy for Iowa cattlemen with plenty of grain on hand to feed beef herds too well and too expensively.

Beresford agrees that a beef cow must be fed well through the winter to produce and care for a vigorous calf in the spring, but he thinks Iowa beef growers are wise to copy range cattlemen on winter feeding.

Dry Cow Should Gain

The range man tries to have his cows in good shape in the fall, but he winters them on dry range with some prairie hay and protein cake during stormy weather and close to calving time.

The dry beef cow needs enough winter feed to gain about the weight of the new calf, the beef specialist explains. This calls for 1,300 to 1,500 lbs. of total digestable feed in five months. Of this, about 8 percent needs to be digestible protein.

For example, a fairly cheap winter ration of 1,200 pounds of clover hay, 500 pounds of oat straw and 1,500 pounds of corn stover would meet a beef cow's feed requirements.

About 3,200 pounds of average mixed clover and grass hay would be another way of supplying the beef cow with ample winter feed.

Many Too Well Fed

With straight high-quality clover or average alfalfa, 3,000 lbs. would furnish the needed digestible feed, but the proetin level would be higher than necessary, Beresford says. As a rule, he doesn't think it pays to feed legume hay for more than half of the beef cows' winter ration, unless legumes are plentiful and cheap. He says they can be replaced by cheaper feeds for the cows and used to better advantage by young stock.

Three years of cost studies from southern Iowa farms show that the state's beef cows generally are winter fed on levels that are higher than necessary. They are especially apt to get more grain than they need. Winter feed costs can be doubled by feeding high-value feeds when cheaper ones will do Beresford points out.

He has written up the results of recent studies on Iowa beef cattle production in a new bulletin, "Raising Beef Cattle in Iowa." The new bulletin number is P102, and it can now be obtained at county extension directors' offices or from the Bulletin Office at Iowa State College, Ames.

SOME ADAMS SOYBEANS SEED STILL OBTAINABLE

Adams soybean seed is still available in nine counties, and farmers may find out names of growers to contact by writing to the county extension directors in the following counties:

Adair County, Greenfield; Adams County, Corning; Des Moines County, Burlington; East Pottawattamie, Oakland; Henry Co. Mt. Pleasant; Jefferson County Fairfield; Lee County, Donnellson; Mills County, Malvern; and Decatur County, Leon.

Adams is a high-producing bean, well adapted to central and southern Iowa. Four of the top yields in the 1949 soybean growers' contest were made with fields of Adams beans.

Since Adams has not been released outside of Iowa, this seed cannot be sold to out-of-state buyers. The seed produced under an agreement that no seed would be sold for more than the following maximum prices: completely certified seed, $3.67 per bushel; uncertified seed, $2.92 per bushel. Do not pay more than these prices for Adams soybeans.

ELL TIP TOPPERS MET AT GERARDI HOME

Learning to take off old finish and apply new to wood was the center of interest at the March meeting of the Ell Tip Toppers at the home of Gracka Gerardi, Saturday afternoon. Roll call was answered by 14 girls each showing an article they had made to be used either as a gift or in their own rooms. Some of the articles were pillow slips, vanity trays, dresser scarfs, dolls, laundry bags, shoe bags and sackets. A demonstration on "Removing Old Finish" was given by Lois Ann Christians. Evelyn Streyle followed by a talk on "Applying Filler." Then Delores Thieman gave a demonstration on "Applying Varnish and Paint." LaVohn Josten gave a demonstration on "A Mitered Corner," which was very well illustrated on a dresser scarf she had made. Picture study was led by Doreen Lackore on the picture "Flower Vendor." The club voted to send $5 to be used for a new 4-H camp site. The meeting adjourned to meet again in April at the home of Sharleen Swanson.

LIGHT TRAPS FOR BORERS ON TRIAL

They Can't Be Approved For Control On Basis Of Tests In 1949

On the basis of experimental work done to date light traps are not recommended for corn borer control by Iowa State college.

In a progress report issued this week on experimental work being done at the Iowa Agricultural Experiment Station, J. H. Lilly and Harold Beaty, in charge of the project, said that light traps have not proved effective in corn borer control.

Controlling borers with light traps is based on the assumption that corn borer moths will be attracted by the lights to an electric grid where they are electrocuted, or killed by some other device. However, in the Iowa tests to date the light traps attracted some of the moths but were not fully effective in killing them.

Need More Research

A summary in the report states: "Light traps have not proved effective in controlling corn borers and are not recommended for use on Iowa farms. More research is needed to bring out whatever practical possibilities they may possess. One of the most immediate and perhaps most difficult problems is getting a killing device that will effectively destroy moths that are attracted by the lights."

Experimental work on light traps was started in Iowa last year as a cooperative project by the departments of Zoology and Entomology and Agricultural Engineering at Iowa State College, the Division of Rural Electrification of the BPISAE, and the Minnesota Valey Canning Company. Various other agencies cooperated.

Traps were ineffective much of the time during heavy flights of both first and second brood moths because the grids became clogged and went "dead," according to Lilly and Beaty. The egg county near the traps in the early yield remained low early in the season but built up when the heavy flight started. In the late corn, which was coming into tassel when the traps were placed, the moths showed a marked tendency to come near the traps in the taller corn, but to light on the plants instead of moving into the "hot" grids. The result was a tremendous concentration of corn borer eggs close to the traps.

Other States Agree

A special conference to discuss the present status of insect light traps was held in Washington, D C. in January and was attended by Lilly. There, results of light trap experiments in Indiana, Iowa, North Carolina and California were reported. Although the general trend was encouraging, all of the investigations stressed the need for further information before considering traps for commercial use, Lilly reports. No state or federal worker is recommending light traps for commercial corn borer control on forms this year.

This work is relatively new and yet to be solved, according to Lilly and Beaty. For example, the killing grids used have clogged up and gone "dead" during the flight peaks when they were needed most. Neither do researchers know the best place to locate traps in a field for greatest killing effect, how far from the traps moths are attracted, nor the number of eggs the moths lay before being killed by traps.

Plan Tests In 1950

Further research on light traps is planned at the Iowa Station in 1950 to find out answers to these and other still unsolved questions. The same agencies which cooperated last year will participate in the work. However, light traps won't be recommended until research definitely indicates that they are effective. They still are in the experimental stage.

What to Seal in Cornerstone? Gold Piece, Balloon, G-String

By BILLY ROSE

If anyone is going to lay a cornerstone in 1950, I would suggest he seal up the following items for the benefit of the folks in 2050.

1. A COPY of The Congressional Record. It will make dullish reading, I grant you, but it will prove that our legislators could get up on their hind legs and sound off on anything from the price of asparagus to the plight of the Zuni Indians. And if what's happening in Europe or Asia is the shape of things to come, it will undoubtedly interest our descendants to know that there once was a time when a legally elected representative could shoot off his face without being shot an hour later.

2. A $20 GOLD PIECE. At the rate we're going, by 2050 a pound of butter may be worth more than a pound of printed money, and there's no telling how much the lucky finder may be able to buy with 20 bucks worth of the yellow stuff.

Billy Rose

3. A PAY CHECK, complete with stub showing all tax deductions. It's my hunch that it will amaze the folks of the future to realize that back in 1950 a guy did have a few bucks left after the government was through with him.

4. A COPY of the New York classified telephone directory to show how enterprising 8,000,000 people used to be when their enterprise was really free and frolicsome.

5. A G-string and a length of cord used in a lynching—two examples of what the 20th Century was capable of doing when given enough rope.

6. A PHONOGRAPH record of "Mule Train," with Frankie Laine's whip alongside it. The song won't make much sense, but I'll bet a cup of uranium it'll whistle better than the Concertos to Collectivist Agrarianism which future Shostakoviches will compose.

7. A COPY of James Thurber's "Is Sex Necessary?" to show the kinds of questions we are asking ourselves. And a copy of the Kinsey Report to show the kinds of answers we are getting.

8. A TOY BALLOON filled with hydrogen to prove that this destructive gas was once used in the public interest.

9. A PRINT by Picasso. This cultural left-over may amuse our 21st century friends, and if it doesn't it will at least teach them that there once were countries where even a Communist could paint as he pleased.

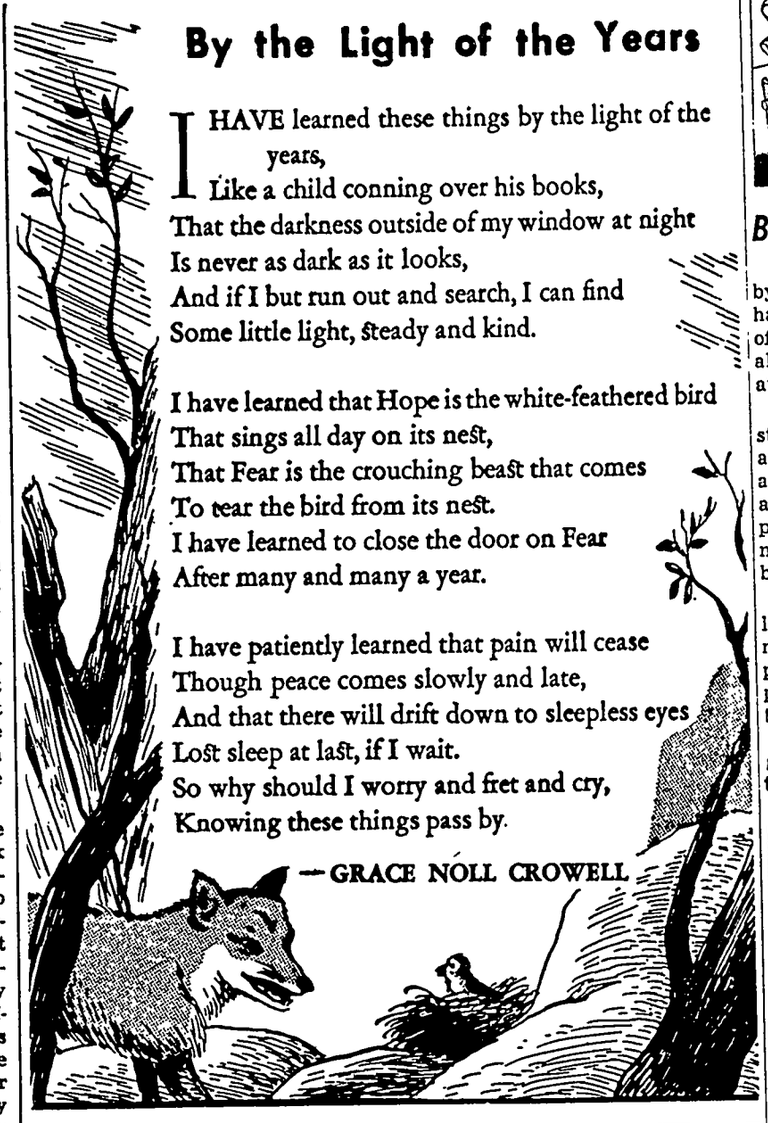
10. A COVER of Time magazine —the one with the picture of Mark III, the electronic computing machine developed at Harvard. Also the accompanying article suggesting, on the basis of Prof. Norbert Wiener's new science of cybernetics, that the world may eventually be ruled by this machine's offspring, since the machine's brains are getting larger and larger while man's brains are getting smaller and smaller. It will probably startle the cellar-dwellers of 2050 to learn that there was a time when people were only thinking of the machines taking over.

11. A SNAPSHOT of the immigration buildings on Ellis Island. Generations hence, people may be curious to know what the island was used for, because by then it will probably be a launching platform for robot missiles, and similar knick-knacks. Next to the snapshot, an 8-by-10 glossy of the new U. N. building on First avenue, wrapped in a copy of the song hit, "But I Can Dream, Can't I?"

12. An architect's model of a voting booth. And with it, instructions on how you can pull a lever and vote a straight ticket, or flip off any candidate you don't like and flip on the one you favor for a particular office.

I'd take it kindly if the man laying the cornerstone were to make certain that the curtain is on the model — that bit of cloth which makes it possible for one to vote without a cop peeking over his shoulder. This little curtain, I suspect, is darn near the most important piece of equipment we have in 1950, and judging from what's happening to it elsewhere in the world, it may be as rare as the dodo by the time another cybernetic century rolls around.

By the Light of the Years



I HAVE learned these things by the light of the years,
Like a child conning over his books,
That the darkness outside of my window at night
Is never as dark as it looks,
And if I but run out and search, I can find
Some little light, steady and kind.

I have learned that Hope is the white-feathered bird
That sings all day on its nest,
That Fear is the crouching beast that comes
To tear the bird from its nest.
I have learned to close the door on Fear
After many and many a year.

I have patiently learned that pain will cease
Though peace comes slowly and late,
And that there will drift down to sleepless eyes
Lost sleep at last, if I wait.
So why should I worry and fret and cry,
Knowing these things pass by.

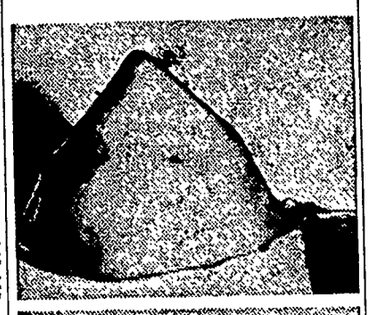
Ballistic Discovery

Modern ballistics scientists, aided by ultra high speed photography, have disproved the age-old belief of the average hunter and expert alike, that maximum shock occurs at the instant of a bullet's impact.

By photographing bullets as they struck blocks of gelatin resembling animal tissue in consistency, and again after they passed through, ammunition experts have now proved that shock reaches its peak not on impact but only after the bullet has cleared its target.

This important discovery was the lucky by-product of a simple experiment to show the relative shocking power of solid-point and hollow-point 22 caliber bullets. These pictures accompany this article.

In the experiment still photographs were made at three millionths of a second, first, before the bullets struck the specially prepared gelatin blocks, then immediately after the bullets had penetrated and finally after they were approximately a foot distant.



These two photographs made at three millionths of a second of blocks of gelatin, show the relative shocking power of solid-point and hollow point 22 caliber bullets. The greater shocking power is exerted by the 37-grain bullet with a hollow point, (upper photo) the lesser with a 40-grain solid point bullet.

Because hollow - point bullets mushroom on impact, the pictures of the hollow-point bullet reveals the relatively greater shocking power shown in the photographs which appear herewith.

It was only when ballisticians in the research laboratories of the Western Cartridge company division of Olin Industries, Inc., studied their pictures that they realized the full significance of their chance discovery.

To make their photographs the ballisticians used an ordinary press camera and a photolight which produces a flash of three millionths of a second duration. The bullet broke a fine wire in its path. This actuated the light. The ammunition used was a Super-X 22 caliber long rifle 40-grain solid-point lubricated bullet with a velocity of 1,375 feet per second, and a Super-X 22 caliber long rifle 37-grain hollow point bullet with a velocity of 1,400 feet per second.

Bunny Can Take It

A 16-year study to determine the recuperative powers of rabbit populations under intensive hunting has been completed by Dr. Miles D. Pirnie, professor of zoology and conservation of Michigan State college, the wildlife management institute reports.

The object of the test, conducted on a 500-acre plot of the college's Kellog station was to determine the effectiveness of shooting as a method of controlling crop damage on agricultural lands.

The average yield from hunts was 103 rabbits from each of the 16 years with a high of 172 in a single year. Shooting was confined to the month of December but 1,649 rabbits were removed during the 16-year period. In spite of this relatively heavy take, no reduction in rabbit numbers was evident at the end of the test period.

The results show conclusively that shooting during the hunting season is a poor method of controlling rabbits, but they also show that the recuperative powers of rabbits in good habitat is great enough to offset very heavy hunting pressure.

Fastest Gunners

Who are the nation's fastest scattergun shooters?

The answer: Skeet shooters between 13 and 19 years of age. That's what Hunting & Fishing magazine reports, along with these other facts:

These youngsters are faster than older skeet shooters, trap shooters, duck, goose, quail and pheasant shooters—and rabbit hunters.

The reason is that youngsters' reactions are swifter.

The Fiction Corner

ALMOST A MISTAKE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

AARON JORDAN had a swell job writing advertising for a Chicago agency. The night he came home and told Sally, his wife, that he was going to quit because he wanted to write movie scenarios, she thought he'd been drinking.

"Either that," she said, "or you're crazy."

"Correct," said Aaron. "Just crazy enough to be able to write good scenarios. You've got to be crazy to get by in Hollywood. Joe Neal told me."

3-Minute Fiction

"Are we going to live in Hollywood?" Sally asked.

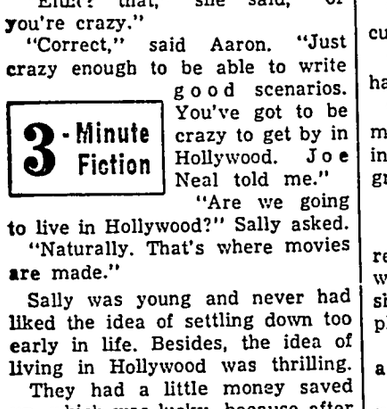
"Naturally. That's where movies are made."

Sally was young and never had liked the idea of settling down too early in life. Besides, the idea of living in Hollywood was thrilling.

They had a little money saved up, which was lucky, because after living three months in the cinema city they hadn't made a dime. Aaron had written four scripts, which had almost sold. Almost. That one word had become the bane of their existence. It was the one word in Hollywood that drove people crazier than they were at the start.

Two months passed and the Jordans had almost made a pile of money. The money that they had saved was almost gone. They began to wonder about the future a little.

Another fortnight passed and Aaron and Sally decided they couldn't evade facts any longer. Almost selling something didn't buy bread. Aaron's latest story,



"But your finger isn't seriously cut."

now in the hands of Pacific coast studios, would, they felt, be returned like all the others. Almost good enough would be the comment. They held a council of war. As soon as Pacific Coast returned the story they'd have to quit and go home.

It gave them a sinking, frustrated feeling.

The day after the council of war, Aaron cut his finger while examining a typewriter ribbon in a nearby stationery store. The store manager gave first aid, made a report, took down his name and address and told him an adjuster would be up the next day.

When Aaron got home he told Sally about it. "It's a chain store. They're insured against accidents. I'll collect at least $100."

"But your finger isn't seriously cut."

"So what? Insurance companies have plenty of dough."

The adjuster came early the next morning. They knew him to be an insurance man by the benign, ingratiating look on his face.

"Cut your finger?" he asked.

"And pretty badly, too," Aaron replied. He glanced at Sally. She was eyeing him severely. He knew she didn't approve of what he planned to do.

"How'd it happen?" Aaron gave a detailed account of the accident.

"Too bad. Bother you about working?"

AARON HESITATED. This was the crucial moment. He could say the wound practically incapacitated him. He could make it strong, and perhaps collect $50.

Sally was regarding him steadily. He didn't like the look in her eyes. It made him feel small and cheap.

He shrugged. "No. I can work all right. It isn't anything serious. Let's forget it."

Their visitor looked relieved. "Good. I have a proposition to make. We didn't like your latest story especially."

"Eh?" said Aaron.

"Too farcical. But Jackson, he's our story man. Sent me up here to ask if you'd consider going to work for us. You see, we think you write pretty good dialogue. We need a dialogue writer."

Aaron gulped. "Then—you're not —I mean—"

"At what salary?" Sally asked practically.

"Well, I'm authorized to offer $250 to start."

"Why," Sally exclaimed, "that's almost $300."

"Almost!" yelled Aaron. "Don't mention that word again. We'll take the job. Wow! I'm almost crazy!"

"Me, too," Sally agreed.

Star Dust STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

BY INEZ GERHARD

WENDELL COREY, "hotter than a two-dollar pistol" at the moment, can have just about anything he wants in Hollywood, but is so experienced an actor and so wise a young man that he knows how to take only what's best for him. Currently seen in Paramount's "Thelma Jordan," he was lent out for "No Sad Songs for Me," soon to be released. He was lent again for the coveted role opposite Lana Turner in her comeback, "A Life of Her Own," but turned it down. After his recent visit to New York he and Mrs. Corey planned going home via New Orleans. "But I hear my son asked, 'When's Daddy coming home?' he said. "So I guess I'll skip it."

WENDELL COREY

Ray Milland inherits the role Corey turned down in M-G-M's "A Life of Her Own," right back where he made "Payment Deferred" 19 years ago and was fired immediately afterward. He says it took him six days to make scenes he should have done in two. His new Paramount deal calls for six pictures in six years, giving him time to make outside films like this one.

"Father of the Bride" was finished at Metro a few weeks ago and work on a sequel, "Now I'm a Grandfather" was begun immediately. "Father," in which Elizabeth Taylor stars, will be released soon after her marriage.

"Operation, Good Samaritan," a series of programs produced by Church World Service, Inc., is being aired by radio stations throughout the country. The programs dramatically describe the work of this religious overseas relief agency in aiding those in other countries who are still hungry, hopeless or homeless in the wake of war. They are well worth hearing.

When Cary Grant starred as "Mr. Blandings," who built a house with such difficulty, he little knew that this year he would be re-building one of his own. His bride, Betsy Drake, is letting him supervise everything, including re-decorating; she claims that all the experience he gained while making the picture qualifies him for this real job.

WOMAN'S WORLD

Bed Covering Choice Reveals Ingenuity

By Ertta Haley

"I LIKE TO SEW, but I can't crochet," says Mrs. Jones. "That disturbs me because I won't ever be able to have a lovely bedspread like my neighbor has on her bed."

As long as she can sew, no woman need feel that she cannot put her imagination to work in creating a lovely cover for her bed. There are so many types possible, that lack of one skill, such as crocheting, need never stand in the way of providing a beautiful piece of decorative work.

Imagination, rather than skill, is the answer to this woman's problem, as it is to many another woman's. If you feel you lack that, then just open wide your eyes and start thinking. You'll be surprised at what can be done with a little investigation.

There seems to be no lack of variety in bed coverings, for almost any type of work can be used to create something beautiful and effective. Some like to use a crocheted piece on top of a solid color with a flounce of the solid colored material at the sides.

Other beds are covered with quilted work of many varieties and look just as effective in their settings, while others have lace and ruffling predominant in their decor.

Some women seem to have a way of picking out a piece of material which seems ordinary in every respect, and then draping it to make an exceedingly effective cover that sets off the bed just right.

Vary bedroom decor . . .

Study the room, first, and decide what would be suitable. If your ways are simple and casual, then this is the key to the bedspread.

If your personality has a flair for the dramatic or tailored room, then your answer would come from something in a solid color or print with texture interest.

Casual Types of Spreads Are Easy to Sew

If your bedroom is furnished in one of the informal styles such as early American or Colonial, the problem of making a spread for a bed is very easy since these types require little skill. Measurements should be accurate so that the spread will be sufficiently large to be luxurious appearing.

Quilts are very common, and the patterns in many of these are lovely. You may have one already and are wondering just how it can be used as a most effective setting. If large enough, use it alone as a covering

If the quilt is not large enough, there are several ways to use it best. On three sides, those falling on either side of the bed as well as at the base, more material can be added to make the quilt large enough to fall gracefully. Select a color that is predominant in the quilt and work it in.

A simpler way of making a quilt look larger is to make a flounce of a color selected as above to cover the three sides of the bed. If the flounce is attached to a muslin that covers the bed, either above or directly underneath the mattress with your own bedspreads.

(so it will not have to be removed when the bed is unmade every time), the bed will have an attractive appearance.

The flounce treatment is popular with all casual types of bed coverings. Use them with chintz, organdie, ginghams, and other informal prints. If desired, add a one or two inch ruffle to the top of the spread just below the top.

If you have a canopy over a four poster bed, decorate this with a ruffle or flounce of material matching the bedspread.

Tailored Spreads Offer Great Variety

Depending upon how tailored you like the bedroom, you have a great variety which will carry out a more formal theme. If the room is done in one of the formal periods, you might choose an elegantly quilted taffeta, satin or another rich fabric for the top of the bed and then add a flounce of the same material for the sides.

This quilting may be done at home on your own machine, if you have the sewing machine attachment, or it might even be purchased already quilted. It may also be done by hand if you have a design which you particularly like.

Another idea which is practical for semi-tailored rooms is a simple spread which falls in box fashion on the bed. To give tailored corners at the base of the bed, the corners are slit and finished. The only design which this uses is a geometric border at the top of the spread extending down to the bottom of the spread.

Bolero Topping

One of the most popular colors of the season, red, is used in a bengaline bolero to top this navy blue and white print dress in a cupid and heart print. This junior fashion from New York has an inset cummerbund waist and short sleeves.

Be Smart!

Be ready to wear your white collar early and enjoy it while the vogue is young, for it's destined to be one of the most popular fashions of the season. Wonderful for first-of-the-season wear, especially for business, are the sheer wools of navy with crisp white collars. A touch of practicality that is being used more and more frequently is the permanent stiffness which so delighted French designers when they discovered it, recently that it gave new impetus to the fashion for white collars in Paris. The wool dresses can be smartly simple as to line, since the white touch gives them ample drama. You'll like several sets of collars and cuffs per dress.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Mother Torn Between Mate, Kids

"MINE IS A SAD problem," writes a woman from a city in north-western New York state. "My husband is coming home in June after almost three years in prison. I have never felt that he was to blame for anything he did; the man he trusted was to blame for the ruin of all of us. But David was the one who paid.

"When this terrible blow fell I rented my home and came with my girls to live with my mother. They were then 11 and 15, old enough to be consulted, and we decided to stay right in our own home town, and face the music. Our friends stood by magnificently, and while I went to see David regularly, he didn't wish the girls ever to go to the prison, and they never did.

Girls Dread His Coming

"David is a sensitive, scholarly man, and he dreads coming home. On the other hand, the girls dread his coming. Miriam, the older, has many social engagements and a good job. Sharon is at the age when any criticism from her friends is insufferable. They try to be loyal, but I can see the nervous tension beginning.

"David would like to accept an offer he has had from a California firm, 3,000 miles away. He makes no demands. He takes it for granted that he shall go to this city and start over, so heavily handicapped, alone. I know what my accompanying him would mean to him; it might well make the difference between his failing or his succeeding, but I am housekeeper here, confident of both daughters and Mother, and I feel I owe Mother much, for her companionship of us when we so needed it.

". . . went to see David . . ."

"At the time of our tragedy she once pressed me to divorce David, and even to make another marriage, but she has never worried me since with that suggestion. We four, despite the bitter circumstances, have formed a happy and harmonious household here; my going would place new burdens on the others. And David would be generous and understanding. So the decision is entirely in my hands.

He Might Be Lonely

"What shall I do? David is 41; I am 37. His work is so highly specialized, and he has been so successful in it, that I have no fears for his future in that line, but the loneliness of a boarding house or hotel room might easily reduce him to a condition of despair.

"On the other hand, there are Mother and the girls. They are just reaching such fascinating years, needing frocks and advice, a mother's sympathy and help. And there is Mother, whose only child I am. At 60 she cannot give the girls the same superintendence that I could, although they really love her. What shall I do? June will bring David home. By that time I must be definite about our future."

In answer to Roxanne Wilsen I say, go with your man. You have an opportunity that is not often given to a wife, the chance to help, if not actually save, a human soul in desperate need.

To have you beside him, especially as he will know that you are sacrificing the comfortable home you have made for yourself, and leaving the three persons you love best, will do more for his pride than any other possible cure could work. Traveling again with him, house hunting again with him, setting up your own kitchen again, will renew the old feeling of confidence and courage in starting afresh.

It may not always be easy for you. For even though you say he is gentle and understanding, he will have many difficult moments. You will feel that in beginning new friendships your whole story must be told, you musn't for one moment sail under false colors. It will be much simpler in the end if you have everything understood from the first.

But I believe you will achieve a success that will make all your years ahead serene and proud. When you go back to your old town for a visit, you will find no difficulties, and the girls will only be friendly and natural with the father who has won his way back to restoration without complicating their young affairs.

One word of further advice. When you make your decision, and I hope it will be in David's favor, stick to it.

Rolling Car Gathers Damages

By Will Bernard, LL.B.

Is It Your Fault If Your Parked Car Rolls Down a Hill?

A woman drove to a beauty parlor and parked her car in front of the shop. As it happened, the street had a sharp slope. The woman had no sooner stepped inside the shop than her car began to roll. It careened over the curb and finally came to rest halfway through a cafe window! When the cafe owner sued for damages, the woman solemnly swore that she had set the brakes tightly and left the car in gear. But the court held her responsible anyhow. The judge commented drily that the car's actions spoke louder than the woman's words!

A druggist received a shipment of perfume, but refused to pay for the merchandise. When the dealer sued for his money, the druggist insisted that the perfume was delivered in unsalable condition. The dealer thereupon told of a telephone conversation in which the druggist had said that "everything came in OK." The latter objected to this testimony, saying that telephone conversations are "too unreliable" as legal evidence. However, the court disagreed and accepted the dealer's story.

A woman paid a high price for an Oriental rug, after the dealer assured her that it was a valuable antique. It wasn't long before the woman realized that the rug was neither antique nor valuable—in other words, that she had been "stung." Nevertheless, she continued to use the rug for two years. At last she decided to take legal action against the dealer, and she filed suit to get her money back. But the court ruled that she was too late. The judge said that, by waiting she couldn't complain.

May One State "Dump" Its Criminals into Other States?

A man was tried and convicted on a charge of violating the state liquor laws. The judge imposed a $500 fine—and "exiled" him from the state for five years. Promptly the man appealed the case to the supreme court, claiming that the banishment order was unconstitutional. And the Supreme Court agreed. The judges said it would be poor policy "to let one state dump its criminals into other states." Such a practice, added the court, "might well provoke retaliation by states that are on the receiving end!"

Customs Court Endless Quiz

Sums Involved Greater Than Radio Give-Aways

NEW YORK.—On the 11th floor of an office building in downtown New York, Uncle Sam sponsors an endless quiz program involving sums greater than even radio's open handed quizmasters give out.

There you will find judicial answers to such brainbusters as: Is rhubarb a vegetable or a fruit? When does an infant become a child? Is whale meat fish, or is it meat? Is a slide fastener a machine? What is a doll? When is a rug not a rug?

These questions are not trivial. They—and other similar ones—actually have been presented to the nine judges of the United States customs court.

This unique court handles cases dealing with commercial imports from all countries in the world. In some instances the questions have involved millions of dollars in tariff duties and have set important precedents on how the twisting, confused United States tariff laws should be applied.

When it was decided that an infant becomes a child at 2 years, the entire clothing industry was affected, as well as the price parents pay for their offspring's clothing. Congress had provided for one rate of duty on children's clothing and a different rate on infant's wear.

The court is called up on to decide what was in the minds of the congressmen who write the nation's tariff laws. Often its tasks are routine and technical. But just as often it runs across a real skullcracker. "Almost every case is a challenge" says the court's chief judge, Webster J. Oliver.

Take the case of the slide fasteners, decided early last year. The importer called them machines. Government agents called them articles made of metal. The importer put a college professor of mechanical engineering on the stand to testify that the slides were like children's tricycles.

THE HOME TOWN REPORTER IN WASHINGTON
WALTER SHEAD, WNU Correspondent.

New Slogan Needed

NORMAN THOMAS, who is the head of the Socialist party in this country and who has been its presidential candidate going back many, many years never would admit there is the slightest tinge of socialism in the fact that corporate dividends paid out this year to stockholders in cold cash amounted to a total of $6,495,800,000. That's the highest dividend return in the history of this nation. Figures were released by the department of commerce.

Neither would Thomas admit there was much socialism in the fact that United States Steel, despite strikes, despite increased labor costs and other vicissitudes, rolled up the biggest profits it has made in 20 years—about 166 million dollars. Nor would he admit to socialism in half a billion dollar profit reaped by the General Motors corporation in 1949.

Viewed from most any angle, it would appear according to economists, that these fantastic profit figures indicate a completely sound, vigorous free enterprise system of capitalism with a profit motif with a capital "P," and with some 60 million men and women working in industry.

At the other end of the telescope, neither would Thomas admit that there is anything socialistic in the fact that a laborer who retires at 65 draws down a rather small old age pension after he has paid 1 to 1½ per cent of his wages weekly into the old age pension fund for the past 15 years, over and above all his other taxes.

So the prediction is being made freely here that by the time the 1950 campaign gets going strong, the Republicans must of necessity come up with a more realistic slogan—one which more nearly meets the issues than "Liberty or Socialism." So far, no one has come up with a good slogan.

Tax Slash Seen

It appears that this congress will slash excise taxes which will take maybe more than a billion dollars off the consumers, which is OK by the President. He recommended these cuts, but he also recommended increased taxes somewhere else along the line to make up for the cuts.

Actually the President is asking for an overall increase in taxes. And that is paradoxical too. For you remember that the 80th congress cut taxes and went to the people largely on that issue in 1948 and lost. Now President Truman wants to boost taxes and go to the people in 1950 and win.

The difference is in cutting in the right places. The President would cut in the lower income brackets and add it on in the upper brackets. The 80th congress had a different formula.

House Reversal

As was predicted in this column, the house quickly reversed itself in the appropriation for Korea which Secretary of State Acheson had declared was a moral commitment of this nation. The bill made an appropriation of 60 million dollars for Korea and 103 million, out of funds previously granted China, for Formosa. The senate already had passed the measure.

There may be a shake-up in the federal trade commission. The house small business committee, after hearings, charged the FTC with "Rip Van Winkle somnolence" and that it is failing in its objective to curb and control monopoly. The committee said that military and other government buying agencies listed duPont and General Tire & Rubber as "small business" thus permitting contracts to go to these firms without giving the appearance of slighting smaller companies.

Seeks New Worlds

Fiery Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy of Wisconsin, ex-judge, ex-marine, seeks new worlds to conquer. Having been somewhat rebuffed and rebuked after calling Secretary of the Navy Matthews a "liar" in the Admiral Denfeld case, he now has taken on the state department. Senator McCarthy says the department is "riddled" with communists; says he can name 57 of 'em. "Name one" the state department challenges.

Vet Education Rapped

Veterans' Administrator Carl Gray says millions of dollars of tax payers' money is being wasted on veterans education.

He testified that 5,600 of the 8,800 schools approved below college level, which operate for profit, have been organized since the GI bill was enacted in 1944; that most of them were organized to get a slice of the 2.5 billion dollars paid out annually for schooling of vets.

Iowa Gets Television

Now we've started to get television in Iowa.

"Makes me think of the ruckus, years ago, when folks got their first phones", Grandma Edzel said the other night. "Some were agin' phones; wouldn't even try 'em."

But soon they found that anything like the telephone which brought people closer together, was good for all of us. It'll be the same with television.

The better we know other people, the better and broader-minded we are, ourselves. The more we appreciate the other fellow's point of view, the more likely he is to appreciate ours.

Some folks like to wear galoshes in winter; others prefer rubbers. Or, take my friend Ed who's hepped on the virtues of orange juice, while cousin Joe prefers a temperate glass of beer or ale. They recognize each other's right to his own taste, and that's the way it ought to be.

So, here's to television . . . and anything else that brings us all closer together in mutual understanding and tolerance.

GIVE BABY CHICKS PLENTY OF SPACE

Need To Watch Lightning And Make Sure Temperature Is Right Also

Too many chicks for the amount of floor space, poor light and temperature are things to look into, if chicks pile up and smother, says W. R. Whitfield, extension poultryman at Iowa State College.

Piling up is greatly encouraged by having more than two chicks to a square foot of floor space.

Crowding or piling up also may occur when all or most of the windows are on the south side of the house. Windows on one side just mean more daytime light and cooler nighttime temperatures on that side of the house. Whitfield says the chicks can see to feed late in the day near windows. Then when it becomes dark, they don't find their way back to the brooder and they pile up to keep warm.

Spread Windows

With windows in at least 3 walls of the house, temperature and light conditions remain more uniform over the brooder house floor. This prevents the chicks from crowding to one side of the house just before sundown, and they are able to sense the heat of the hover at dark, Whitfield points out.

He says that a window in the east and in the west wall as well as one in the south wall will reduce chick death loss caused from piling up and smothering. Extra windows in the south wall may be covered.

Other practical solutions to the piling up problem in young chicks include rounding off the corners of the house with cardboard or partitions and the use of an electric light at night, so the chicks can find their way back to the brooder.

Of the three main types of brooders for chicks—gas or oil, electric, and coal—the electric requires the least labor, says W. R. Whitfield.

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

More than 500 men and women from all parts of the state are in Des Moines today looking for work. They are prepared to accept jobs without pay, promotions or pats on the back.

Like to have a few of these people working for you under those conditions? That is being arranged. In fact, this entire group is in your service right now for this afternoon these private citizens are working at the closing session of the Iowa Safety Congress called by Gov. Beardsley.

But there is more to it. These men and women are attending the congress not only as individuals but as representatives of virtually every civic, service and business association in the state.

They have one purpose: "To save lives in Iowa this year," as Congress Chairman John Hattery has stated it. The work they are completing today is a plan of coordination by which the efforts of all groups can be directed into a single, continuous attack upon all types of accidents - accidents which last year in Iowa killed more than 1,800 person and injured tens of thousands.

Most of the persons attending this congress do not call themselves safety experts. Nor have they come to dictate how anyone should live his life. They are men and women of good intentions who have taken time from their own concerns to assume a duty where they see a need.

There must be no false impression drawn from this meeting. Talk alone - no matter how honestly made - cannot curtail the accident rate. But it can create a plan of action and today, that is being done.

HANCOCK PRE-SCHOOL HEALTH CONFERENCES

The spring pre-school program is again under way in Hancock County this year. Parents of all children who will start school next fall are invited to participate. Nurse-parent conferences with the county nurse will be held during the month of April at strategic centers in the county, at which time the medical history of the pre-school child will be recorded, any health problem will be discussed, and each child's vision will be checked. Please bring your child with you to the conference you attend.

Conferences will be held in the school buildings of these 9 towns:

Kanawha ---- April 6, 9 a. m.
Corwith ---- April 6, 1 p. m.
Britt ------- April 11, 1 p. m.
Goodell ---- April 12, 1 p. m.
Woden ------ April 13, 1 p. m.
Klemme ---- April 14, 1 p. m.
Crystal Lake - April 18, 1 p. m.
Hayfield --- April 20, 1 p. m.
Garner ---- April 27, 1 p. m.

A survey of the county is now being conducted to find all preschool children. Since it is virtually impossible to expect to discover every parent in the county who has a child who will be a beginner in school next fall, no doubt a few will be missed. Invitations to the conference will be sent to the parents whose names are reported during the survey, but if you are one of the few that may be missed in this survey, you are cordially invited to attend the conference in your area. Please contact the county nurse for added information.

This program is for the benefit of your child; your participation will make it a success.

It Worked

A burglar was one night engaged in stowing a good haul of plunder in his bag when he was startled by a touch on the shoulder, and, turning his head, he beheld a venerable, mild-eyed clergyman gazing sadly at him.

"Oh, my brother," groaned the reverend gentleman, "wouldst thou rob me? Turn, I beseech thee—turn from thy evil ways. Return those stolen goods and depart in peace, for I am merciful and forgive. Begone!"

And the burglar, only too thankful at not being given into custody of the police, obeyed and slunk swiftly off.

Then the good old man carefully and quietly packed the plunder into another bag and walked softly (so as not to disturb the slumber of the inmates) out of the house and away into the silent night.

DON'T WASTE ANYTHING

Said the mountain guide: "Don't go too near the edge of that precipice; it's dangerous. But if you do fall, remember to look to the left, you'll get a wonderful view!"

Did Him Up Fine

"Is this a healthy place?" asked a stranger of a native of a certain region of the West.

"It sure is," replied the native. "When I came here I couldn't utter a word I had scarcely a hair on my head I hadn't the strength to walk across the room, and I had to be lifted from my bed."

"That is wonderful," exclaimed the stranger. "How long have you been here?"

"I was born here."

Low Inventory

An advertising salesman boarded the train and took a roomette. He carried with him only a small grip, and the porter inquired of his other luggage.

"I have none," said the man.

"Why, I understood you were a salesman," said the porter.

"That's right, I am. But I don't need a lot of luggage, I sell brains."

The porter scratched his head and finally said, "Well, you are the first traveling salesman that rode this train without samples."

One Way to Put It

"Do you know why I am going to punish you, Arthur?"

"No, dad; why?"

"Because you hit a boy smaller than yourself."

"Oh, I thought perhaps it was because I'm smaller than you."

Exactly!

"So you run a duck farm. Business picking up?"

"No; picking down."

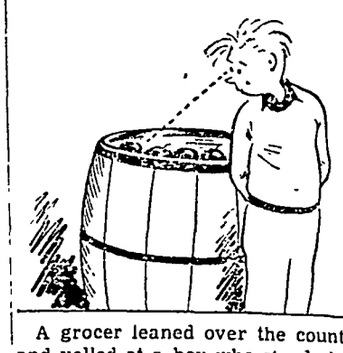
Costly Refuge

"I'm worried—it's raining and my wife is down-town."

"Oh, she'll probably step inside some store."

"That's just it."

COMMENDABLE RESTRAINT



A grocer leaned over the counter and yelled at a boy who stood close to an apple barrel:

"Are you tryin' to steal them apples, boy?"

"No—no, sir," the boy faltered.

"I'm tryin' not to!"

HARD AT WORK

"What is your occupation?" asked the magistrate.

"I'm a locksmith, sir," replied the prisoner.

"Then what were you doing in that gambling house when the police raided it?"

"I was making a bolt for the door."

Big Income

During an intense love scene in the movies, when the hero was doing the Charles Boyer stuff, wifey nudged hubby and whispered, "Why is it that you never make love to me like that?"

"Say," he replied, "do you happen to know that guy gets $10,000 a week for doing that?"

Never Can Tell

"Now," said the teacher, impressively, "why should we endeavor to rise by our own efforts?"

"Because," replied Tommy, "there's no knowing when the alarm-clock will go wrong."

Selection of Good Blankets Will Assure Lasting Beau

By Marion Atkins

A favorite gift for brides is a soft, deep-napped blanket. It is important for all women to select blankets carefully, because, wisely chosen, they give a lifetime of service and add enduring beauty to the home. Here are some hints to aid you in making your selection.

A good blanket is made of 100 per cent virgin wool, so watch for labels stating that quality. But more than that, the finest wool is from the best part of the animal—from the back. Wool from any other part is coarse, short and dirty. Labels do not indicate this quality, but good fibers produce a soft, resilient texture with deep nap, so insist upon those characteristics.

To give proper warmth, the weave must be firm and close. Despite machines, weaving is still a question of human skill at the loom. A woven blanket has substance, hold it up to the light, and note even the weave is.

A billowy blanket with fluffy is the best buy. They are obviously more attractive but, above all, are warmer. Napping creates in the blanket which improves the sulating quality, and thus makes warmer. Before it is napped, a ket is simply a piece of woven material. Here's the Press your fingers into the to see how deep it is—the the better the blanket.

Sugar Cookies
(Makes 90)

1 cup butter
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 eggs, well beaten
4 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon salt

Cream together butter and sugar. Add remaining ingredients and blend thoroughly. Roll and cut in fancy shapes with floured cutters. Sprinkle with sugar, if desired. Bake in a hot (400°) oven for 8-10 minutes or until golden brown.

Peanut Butter Cookies
(Makes about 150)

2 eggs, well beaten
1 cup moist peanut butter
2 teaspoons soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons boiling water
3 cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream together butter, granulated and brown sugar. Add eggs and blend well. Mix in peanut butter. Dissolve soda in hot water and add to mixture. Sift salt with flour and add to first mixture. Put through cookie press or drop by spoonfuls on greased baking sheet and press with fork. Bake in a hot (400°) oven for 8-12 minutes.

3 cups sifted cake flour
1 cup raisins
1 cup currants
½ cup nuts, chopped
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon grated orange rind

Cream butter until fluffy, then work in sugar. Add milk and well beaten eggs. Sift soda with half the flour and add to creamed mixture. Add remaining flour to fruits, nuts and spices and work into first mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheet. Bake in a moderately hot (375°) oven for 12-15 minutes. These will keep nicely for a long time.

When broiling chops, serve them with this fruit combination: top pineapple slices with apricot halves and brush with bacon fat before broiling.

Tiny biscuits make a good snack for evenings when they're spread while still warm with cream cheese and deviled ham.

When using canned baked beans, add some extra flavor by mixing in 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 3 tablespoons chili sauce, a dash of worcestershire sauce and a bit of chopped green pepper.

SERVICE IN PEACE AND WAR

Disaster Relief Work by American Red Cross Swiftly Brings Nationwide Resources to Aid Of Areas Stricken by Fire, Flood or Winds

By General George C. Marshall

I BELIEVE the disaster relief work of the Red Cross is more appreciated and better understood than any other service it renders.

Its resources, nationwide, can be quickly brought to the aid of stricken communities. These resources are not solely in funds and trained workers but also in the organization's facility for mobilizing the sympathy of the nation when situations require it and converting that sympathy into material help.

MARSHALL

The ability to rush aid wherever needed is one of the greatest assets of the American National Red Cross. The instant a disaster occurs the Red Cross gets into action—not only from outside the disaster area, but also within the community affected where the local chapter disaster preparedness plan functions instantly.

The impulse to help someone in distress is a very human reaction. It inspires the staff personnel and the thousands of volunteers who give their time and talents to the Red Cross. Their effectiveness lies in providing prompt relief and results from the organization's network of 3,745 chapters and 4,668 branches in the United States, its territories and insular possessions.

There are only a few county seats in the United States without an active chapter. There is scarcely a town in the country which does not have an active branch.

There are three distinct phases of every Red Cross disaster operation. They are preparedness for the disaster; emergency relief for the victims in the form of food, clothing, shelter and medical care; and rehabilitation afterwards for those who cannot finance their own recovery. This last is the least understood and frequently the most important.

Preparedness means that the local chapter has a disaster committee which has planned for fast action whenever and wherever trouble hits.

It means that the local chapter has understandings with the police, fire and health departments, with

NEWS TICKER . . . The Red Cross telecommunications system plays an especially important role during disasters when messages must be received quickly from stricken areas. veterans' organizations and other groups as to the roles each will play. It means that the committee knows where it can get critically needed supplies in a hurry. It means that the disaster committee has arranged with local radio operators to swing into action if the regular lines of communication are wiped out. In most sizeable disasters, these "hams" have proved invaluable.

One reason for the effectiveness of the Red Cross work is that it can provide without delay funds to carry out relief and rehabilitation. That is why in its current budget there is earmarked $5,000,000 for these purposes, in addition to a reserve fund of $7,000,000 kept on hand.

In the event of a minor disaster, that is, involving a few families, the disaster chairman of the chapter and his committee handle the situation with local funds or, if necessary, with a supplementary grant from the national disaster relief appropriation.

But when a chapter finds itself confronted by a major disaster, a countrywide concentration of resources is the order of the day. First the local officials notify one of the four area administrative headquarters in Alexandria, Va., Atlanta, Ga., St. Louis, Mo., and San Francisco, Calif.

If the area office finds that the problem is beyond its facilities, it calls upon national headquarters, which brings to bear the resources of the other areas.

There are three resources that must quickly be put into action. First, if the chapter in the disaster region lacks funds, the word is flashed to national headquarters which authorizes an immediate grant or allotment so the chapter can carry on without delay.

SOLICITUDE . . . Red Cross disaster worker Carl Meyers has mealtime chat with Kenneth, Billie Jean and Judy Ann Lunceford of Hornersville, Mo., who were among the scores of children with their families who sought shelter during the threatened flooding of the Birds Point New Madrid floodway last January.

Or perhaps the chapter is small and needs experienced help. The area office will send workers from its regular staff and if more are needed it will recruit and assign trained workers from its list of disaster resources.

Then there is the matter of supplies. Drugs, whole blood plasma and the like are brought in from the closest sources. Food, clothing, and essential furniture are procured, locally if possible. And when additional shelter is needed, tents and cots are borrowed from the national guard or the United States military establishment.

A good example of disaster relief was demonstrated recently when a typhoon struck Guam. The chapter there, headed by Gov. Carlton Skinner, had $38,000 which could be used for emergency. The committee moved in fast, securing food, clothing, and medical care for the victims.

Because the crops were destroyed, supplies of food were shipped or flown into the island. Rehabilitation started as soon as the high winds permitted.

This is just one of the numerous disasters that the Red Cross has dealt with during the brief period of my association with the organization. More recently, the organization has been called upon for help in relieving Midwest flood sufferers and the victims of winter storms in the Far West.

In the finest sense, this service exemplifies the time-honored American tradition of neighbor helping neighbor. The Red Cross merely promotes and implements the neighborly spirit.

A Free-Moving Group

Many duties of the Red Cross involve emergency operations, often on a very large scale. In addition to local service by the chapters, Red Cross activities are both national and international. You can see that the Red Cross must always be free to mobilize and expand its services to meet situations as they arise. It must be able to concentrate its whole strength on the relief of a stricken community or meet the huge demands of a national emergency. No one can foresee exactly what burdens the Red Cross may be called upon to assume each year.

It therefore should be apparent that the organization cannot well delegate its fund raising responsibility to another agency. Nor can it commit itself to an alliance which might hinder its freedom or capacity to meet its national and international responsibility.

Red Cross Depends on the People

"Fundamentally the Red Cross is a membership organization. It receives no financial support from the government and desires none. It depends upon the support of the American people and upon the work of thousands of volunteers who outnumber the regular staff by 100 to 1. The Board of Governors believes that the interest of these essential volunteers and contributors must be maintained. Then too, each person must be given the privilege of participating in the organization's work to whatever extent he himself decides."

Aga Kahn Sees U.S. Strength as Hope For World

NEW DELHI, INDIA.—The Aga Khan raised his vast bulk in bed—to which he had retired with a slight cold—laid aside London and New York newspapers received by air mail and delivered an impressive half hour of opinion on the hydrogen bomb, the world political situation, begum Aly Khan (Rita Hayworth), his personal wealth and the matching of his weight in platinum in 1954 by his religious followers, which will bring in several million dollars.

The hereditary imam (leader) of the Ismaili sect of Moslems said that he tipped the scales at 225 pounds the last time he was weighed and estimated that when his body was balanced against platinum four years from now in his jubilee ceremonies at Bombay, Karachi, and either Dar es Salaam or Nairobi, he will gain the equivalent of about a million dollars in each place.

He declared that he would contribute the entire amount to various foundations for the betterment of his people in countries where the contributions were made. His weight was matched in diamonds in 1945 on his 60th birthday anniversary.

Aga Khan, who among many other activities of his busy and colorful life has been an international statesman, sees the United States as the present world's "only hope" and he thinks Americans should build hydrogen bombs and arm to the teeth at once lest some other nation use the superbomb first and start a war that destroys civilization.

"If the United States is suddenly submerged by a war for which it is not prepared the whole world will go down," he declared. Urging that America readopt Theodore Roosevelt's maxim, "Walk softly but carry a big stick," he added: "I beg with my small voice for what it may be worth, America be strong—have a big stick, the biggest stick of all."

The potentate said that a strong United States would "keep all other nations in order" and restore free trade.

Members of the Co-op, customers of the Hog Company and farmers in the community took part in the discussion concerning the workings of Farmers Hybrids. J. S. Van Wert spoke about Farmers Hybrid Hogs and V. B. Hamilton offered timely thoughts regarding the Brannan Plan and concluded a discussion on that subject. Marion Balkema acted as Chairman. About 100 attended the meeting at Hampton.

Nazis' 'Process of Selectivity' Outsmarted by Polish Scientist

By BILLY ROSE

Whenever I'm in the mood for gargantuan gab, I hie myself over to a Russian tea room near Carnegie hall where refugees of a dozen nations sit around and give out with tall talk about the old days behind them and the new days coming up.

To give you a fitting for-instance, the other midnight I heard a macabre yarn from a gent who used to teach science in Warsaw, and while I don't know whether it's history or hokum, it strikes me as being worth my allotment of white space today. . . .

During the last year of the war, there was a small concentration camp in east Germany which had been set up for two purposes: (a) to build an underground machine shop, and (b) to make available the required number of human guinea pigs for certain experiments being conducted by distinguished Nazi scientists.

Billy Rose

By SS STANDARDS, the method of selecting these guinea pigs was scrupulously fair. Each morning before breakfast, the 50 men in each of the wooden barracks would stand at attention until the commandant appeared with a list of their names. He would read off the top name on the list and the prisoner whose name was called would step forward.

The commandant would then hand two small leather disks, one marked with a white circle and the other with a black, to the "trustee" of the barrack for examination. Then the commandant would drop the disks into his hat, and the prisoner would draw one of them.

If he picked the one with the white circle he was safe until his name came up again 50 days later; if he drew the black one, he would be shipped out that Saturday night.

In December of 1944, my tearoom friend—the scientist from Warsaw—was cattle-carred to this concentration camp and assigned to a barrack occupied almost exclusively by captured Russian soldiers. He was asked the usual questions, and when the Russians found the newcomer was a Pole, they quickly let him know that the fraternity of races as preached by Moscow was confined to Kremlin publicity handouts.

And when he further admitted he had never joined the Party—not for any big ideological reason, but simply because he was a scientist and had no interest in politics—the Red army men decided he was an enemy of the state and began to plot against him.

THE POLE, however, was more worried about the disks in the hat than the whisperings going on about him. Under the lottery system, it would be almost two months before his name was called, and since news had filtered into camp that the Russian forces were only a few weeks away, he kept telling himself that liberation might come before the date for the drawing. But as the days turned into weeks, and still no sound of far-away cannon, he resigned himself to taking his 50-50 chances with the hat.

The night before the fateful morning, the scientist was lying awake in his bunk when he felt a tug at his blanket. It was a young Czech who had been badly mistreated by the "trustee," and who had often mumbled about getting even.

According to the kid, the comrades had figured out a plot to make certain the Pole would be shipped off to the Nazi experimenters. The "trustee" had cut a leather disk from his shoe and made a black circle on it, and when the commandant asked him to examine the disk, his plan was to palm the one with the white circle and substitute his own, so that either would mean death to the non-Party man.

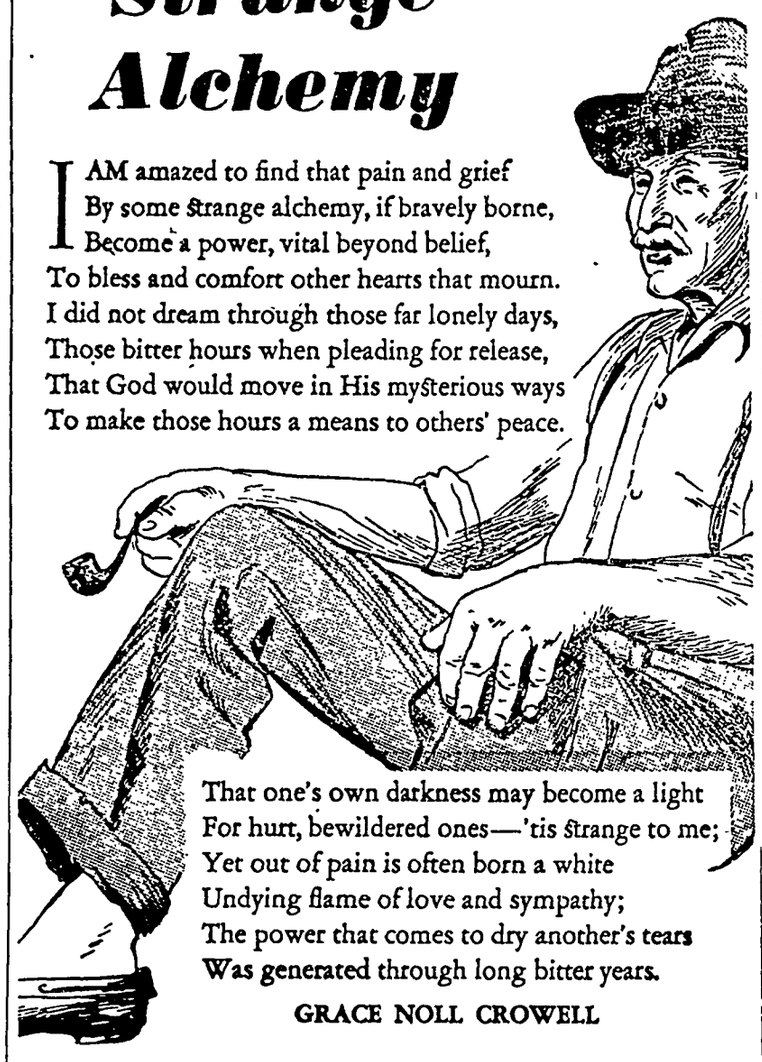
For a long moment, the scientist looked up at the slat ceiling of the bunk above him. "Thank you," he finally said to his friend. "I think I'll be able to manage."

Next morning when his name was called, he saw the "trustee" palm the white-circled disk and substitute another. But he pretended not to notice, and when the commandant held out his hat he smiled and selected a disk. "White or black," he said, "I'm going to have one good meal in this miserable camp." And before the officer could stop him, he popped the bit of leather into his mouth and swallowed.

The SS man frowned. "Crazy Pole," he said, "what good will that do? There is still a disk left in the hat. If it is black, you picked the white; if it is white, you picked the black."

"That is quite correct, Sir," said the scientist.

Strange Alchemy



I AM amazed to find that pain and grief
By some strange alchemy, if bravely borne,
Become a power, vital beyond belief,
To bless and comfort other hearts that mourn.
I did not dream through those far lonely days,
Those bitter hours when pleading for release,
That God would move in His mysterious ways
To make those hours a means to others' peace.

That one's own darkness may become a light
For hurt, bewildered ones—'tis strange to me;
Yet out of pain is often born a white
Undying flame of love and sympathy;
The power that comes to dry another's tears
Was generated through long bitter years.

KNOLTON'S CASE

By Richard H. Wilkinson

KNOLTON'S ACT was the result of two year's of planning. There was little chance that anything would go wrong. He had served as clerk at the lumber camp for two long years. And from the moment he first saw the payroll left unguarded in the office while the bank guard went out and a camp paymaster came in—from that moment Knolton knew that some day he'd steal that payroll and make a get-away.

The day that Knolton had chosen for the robbery was not unlike a thousand others. At exactly noon the payroll car drove up. A guard stepped into the office and deposited the heavy bag by Knolton's chair. Knolton greeted him carelessly, nodded at the bag and bent to his work. The guard went out.

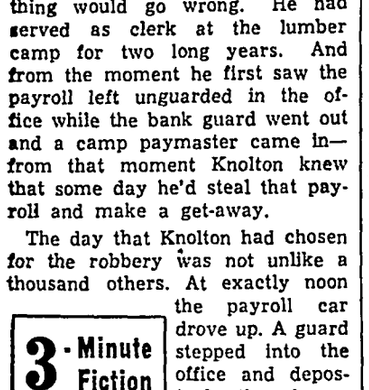
3-Minute Fiction

The moment the door closed Knolton's head came up. He listened intently. Outside he could hear the bank guard in conversation with Raymond, the camp paymaster. There wasn't a moment to lose.

Quickly Knolton lifted up the cover of his desk, removed from inside a bag almost identical to the one on the floor and equally as heavy. He made the transfer deftly, unhurriedly.

The door opened and Raymond came inside. He nodded briefly to Knolton, picked up the decoy bag and went out again.

Knolton stepped outside and walked leisurely toward the river. Unobserved he climbed into the



By now he had grown a beard.

canoe which was hidden there, and pushed off.

By mid-afternoon Knolton reached a tributary and turned off the main stream. He paddled up this smaller waterway for more than a mile.

He set the canoe adrift and headed inland, swinging southward. By dusk he had come to a virgin stand of timber, mighty monarchs of the forest as yet unscathed by the lumberman's axe. His steps led him to a huge pine, larger than the rest with thick undergrowth at the base. He parted the growth, pulled at a tuft of dirt. The tuft came away, revealing a shallow hole. Knolton had dug the hole months before, allowed the undergrowth to grow over it so that no trace of his recent visit would be in evidence.

He deposited the bag in the hole and carefully replaced the dirt.

IT WAS A MONTH before Knolton reached his destination; a tiny village hundreds of miles south of the lumber camp. Here he paused to rest with a friend. By now he had grown a beard. The friend provided dye, and Knolton changed the color of his hair from light brown to black.

Six months later Knolton, now known as Carl Hedman, with no trace of the one-time clerk showing beneath his perfect disguise, rode leisurely back toward the scene of his crime.

The lumbermen gave him no more than a passing glance.

Satisfied that he had not been recognized, Knolton followed the river to the mouth of the tributary.

With pounding heart he mounted the ridge and paused to look. It was as if a hand had suddenly reached out and was squeezing him in a powerful grip. He stood rooted, mouth ajar, staring in stupified incredulity at the country below. With a sense of horror he realized what had happened. The entire area had been logged by the lumber company, swept bare of every standing tree and piece of timber.

Every tree stump looked alike; none was larger or different from its neighbor. He surmounted great piles of slash, tearing at them frantically, hunting for the stump, the stump of the great pine tree.

Thus unmindful of his direction he came again to the river bank. And when at length he reached the top of another hill he paused to rest, overcome by fatigue. Too late he felt the slash pile beneath him slipping away. Too late he realized that the slash had been thrown on the brink of a precipice overhanging the river.

Knolton, with a pitiful cry on his lips, went over the brink. Far, far below he lay, a broken human body on the jagged rocks.

Star Dust STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

IDA LUPINO, currently seen in "Woman in Hiding", is the first motion picture actress to shatter the calm of James Hilton, English author associated with Hallmark Playhouse. Recently she was to play an Italian role on a Playhouse broadcast. A perfectionist in the pictures she produces as well as those she acts in, she hired a voice coach and worked so hard that her doctor told her to let up. Finally, less than 24 hours before air time, she threw over the whole idea—said she couldn't master those Italian intonations. A new script was hastily prepared for her, and Hilton was a candidate for the Shangri-La which he invented years ago.

Ralph Edwards has a large staff for getting details of the lives of people used on his NBC "This Is Your Life", but anyone may suggest a candidate. Need not be a well-known name, either. To be a talent scout for the program, you need only write a note to Ralph Edwards in Hollywood, outlining the reasons why your friend or neighbor's life would make an interesting story.

Bing Crosby, who has no love for appearing at big shindigs, will attend the dedication of a new athletic field, "Bing Crosby stadium", at Front Royal, Va., this spring. A poll of the 7,000 citizens chose him as "The Most Popular Entertainer of the Half Century" and he accepted. Crosby will appear for good causes, not for mere advertising or publicity.

Louis Calhern is growing younger. In "Nancy Goes to Rio" he appears as Jane Powell's grandfather, but in "The Tender Hours" he will be seen as her father. Ann Harding returns to the screen as Jane's mother.

Bob Hope fought to record hi shows, but lost out. Then Charle Luckman, his sponsor's president, resigned. So Hope, hoping again, tried again, and again lost out with the new executives. His show will be taped only when necessary.

International Uniform Sunday School Lessons

Trial and Triumph

Lesson for April 2, 1950

IF YOU HAD BEEN on the top of the city wall on that first Palm Sunday, watching the crowds roaring into Jerusalem, and some one had told you that all the shouting was for Jesus of Nazareth, you would certainly have thought that his success was assured. Here, surely, was a King who had arrived!

Dr. Foreman

But before the week was out you would have seen this same Jesus on trial for his life, and not a voice raised in his defense. The same dusty-throated mob on that Sunday shouted "Hosanna! Blessed is He!" was shrieking on Friday morning, "Crucify him!"

Flowery Beds or Bloody Seas?

There is a popular notion floating around to the effect that God gives good people an easy time. It is not always put just that way. But when a man who has been good (or thinks he has, or has tried to be), runs into trouble, he asks right away, "Why must this happen to Me?" The truth of the matter is better expressed in the lines of an old hymn:

"Must I be carried to the skies
On flowery beds of ease,
While others fought to win the prize,
Or sailed through bloody seas?"

Jesus was incomparably the best who ever lived; yet his moments of popularity were short, and he was finally tortured and killed by the leaders of church and state, amid the jeering approval of masses of the people.

He himself said that any follower of his must be willing to take up his own cross. "In the world you will have tribulation," he said to his disciples.

All Tyrants Hate the Church

THE MORE GENUINELY Christian the church is, the more it is likely to run into opposition. There are several reasons for this. For one thing, the church stands for love, and the generosity and unselfishness, the sympathy and even the sacrifice that go with love and are produced by it. But "what makes the world go 'round," —the world of the politician, the money-maker, the social climber, the war-maker, the world of the power-thirsty in every sphere—what makes that world go 'round is pride, selfishness, shoving-ahead, Me-firstness. The selfish and the proud do not take kindly to love of the Christian sort, indeed they despise it as a weakness.

But the church, when it is a true church, stands up for Humanity even when it has to stand against Profits; and the man for whom Profit is the first law of life never understands the attitude of the church. Then the church (when it is a real one) always stands for the people against the Tyrant, whoever and wherever he may be, even when he is in some church himself.

And consequently all tyrants hate the church. The Roman emperors hated it and persecuted it till they found they could use it (which, by the way, was a bad day for the church). Mohammed, a tyrant of sorts, hated the Christian church and would have totally destroyed it if he could.

Victory—When?

"IF WE SUFFER with him we shall also reign with him," said St. Paul. But when and how? The end of the church's struggles could come in either of two ways. One way would be for the church to give up struggling against the world. Let the church become a club for the sociable, let the church raise no voice of protest against injustice in society, against untruth, violence and greed; let the church give in to the world, in short, and she will have no further trouble from the world.

But in that case she would be dead. Another way is for the church finally to overcome the world. The triumph of the true church is the same as the triumph of divine Love.

That is the future to which the Bible bids us look. When? We do not know. But the Kingdom comes "one heart at a time," and with every soul the church wins from the world-way to the Christ-way, the victory of Love draws nearer.

MIRROR Of Your MIND

Relaxation Aids Memory

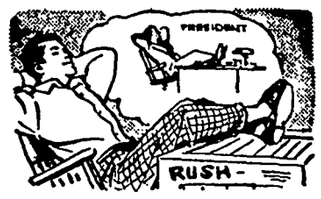
By Lawrence Gould

Is your memory better when you are "relaxed"?

Answer: Yes—even for nonsense—writes psychologist Gerald R. Pascal in the American Journal of Psychology. The subjects of an experiment were tested for their ability to recall meaningless syllables, first seated in a chair, then lying on a couch after instruction in the art of relaxation. They remembered "significantly better" in the relaxed state. Psychiatrists long ago discovered that their patients recall seemingly forgotten feelings and events more easily when physically relaxed, and use "the couch" partly for this reason.

Is it true that "wealth won't make you happy"?

Answer: Only in the sense that the capacity for happiness is in your mind, and that if it is paralyzed by inner conflicts, you will find pleasure in nothing. If a wealthy person is unhappy—as is often the case—it may be because he amassed his wealth for neurotic reasons such as the need to make up to himself for feeling that nobody loves him. To an even relatively normal person, money can be the source of much pleasure and it is as unrealistic to despise it as to feel your value as a person depends on how much you are "worth."



Are ambitious people the best workers?

Answer: That depends on whether they are realists or daydreamers. What you think is great ambition may be no more than a childish picture of the power and importance which you feel ought to be coming to you because you want them so badly. The test lies in whether you feel that routine tasks are beneath you or you can recognize them as the necessary step toward your goal. It's all right to "hitch your wagon to a star" if you recognize that hard work is the tow-rope. Otherwise, the unambitious chap may be a better worker.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Emotions and High Blood Pressure

By Dr. James W. Barton

NOW THAT MOST men and women know that high blood pressure is the commonest cause of heart strokes (coronary thrombosis), and brain stroke (apoplexy), blood pressure is the health subject most frequently discussed when old friends meet one another. One who claims his blood pressure is 200 or more thinks he is a "sicker" individual than one whose blood pressure is only 190.

While high blood pressure is a serious matter if due to organic disease, what physicians are trying to teach their patients is that a high blood pressure at a given time may be down to normal an hour from that time.

A boxer, whom I had examined before his bouts for several years, was driven to a city 250 miles away for a special bout. On the way, the car, in trying to avoid an accident, went into the ditch and rolled completely over. While the boxer was unhurt, his blood pressure was so high that the examining physician, refused to pass him.

He pleaded with the physician that he had boxed in large cities, including New York, and had always been allowed to box. The physician, against his better judgement, allowed him to box. When I examined him the following day his blood pressure was, as usual, normal. The point here is that emotional or exciting circumstances, even the fear of having the blood pressure tested, may send it up 50 or more points.

In "The Journal of the American Medical Association," Dr. David Ayman, Boston, states that all patients with either mild or severe hypertension (high blood pressure) have constant variations of blood pressure levels. The "upward" tendencies, or rises, in blood pressure are usually due to emotional reactions either pleasant or unpleasant, and the drops in blood pressure are caused by relaxation and calmness.

It is because of the effects of the emotions on the blood pressure that your physician doesn't always take your blood pressure when you consult him regularly.

HEALTH NOTES

Drug fever is rarely serious if recognized and the drug discontinued.

Attacks of epilepsy may be greatly lessened and even prevented by more attention to diet.

It is unfortunate that slight hearing defects are not discovered earlier in children.

One of the findings in World War I which was of great help in the following war was in treatment of what was called shell shock and nervous cases.

One cause of vertigo is irritation of the hearing nerve.

Insulin is only a part of "anxiety" treatment.

Stars in Tomorrow's Skies

AS ANOTHER SPRING is about to break open with new blizzards in the North and warmer suns in the South, the time seems to be about ripe for naming in advance the baseball stars who will be crowned next fall and winter.

Grantland Rice

This is a simple enough job if you wait until October or November. It has many more tangles if you try it with 16 clubs just heading for the sun.

Here were some of the leaders of 1949: National league—Jackie Robinson, Brooklyn; Don Newcombe, Brooklyn; Ralph Kiner, Pittsburgh; Stan Musial, Cardinals. American league—Ted Williams, Red Sox; George Kell, Tigers; Phil Rizzuto and Joe Page, Yankees; Ellis Kinder and Mel Parnell, Red Sox; Roy Sievers, Browns.

In 1949 the American league, apparently, had more stars than the National league carried. The all-star game and the world series helped to prove this. So did the year's set of averages. The American league had no home-run hitter to match young Kiner. The National league had no all-around hitter to match Ted Williams. The National league had no pair of pitchers to match Kinder and Parnell, no shortstops to match Rizzuto and no relief pitcher to match Page.

But 1950 is another year. A new spring has arrived and some 500 big-league ballplayers are all itching to start from scratch, as you might or might not say.

Who will be the two most valuable players, the two leading pitchers, the leading home-run hitter, the best all-around hitter and the two best rookies of the new season? Here are some of the candidates reporting to southern and western turf—

American league: Most valuable player—Ted Williams, Mel Parnell, Red Sox; Joe DiMaggio, Tommy Henrich, Joe Page, Phil Rizzuto, Yankees; Dale Mitchell, Lou Boudreau, Indians; Johnny Groth, Tigers.

Leading home-run hitter — Ted Williams, Boston; Joe DiMaggio, Yankees; Luke Easter, Indians; Sam Chapman, Athletics.

Leading Pitcher — Mel Parnell, Ellis Kinder, Red Sox; Vic Raschi, Allie Reynolds, Yankees; Bob Lemon, Ed Garcia, Indians; Art Houteman, Tigers.

National league: Most valuable player—Jackie Robinson, Pee Wee Reese, Roy Campanella, Dodgers; Stan Musial, Enos Slaughter, Red Schoendienst, Cardinals; Ralph Kiner, Pirates; Whitey Lockman, Giants; Richie Asburn, Phillies; Sid Gordon, Braves.

Leading pitchers — Don Newcombe, Preacher Roe, Dodgers; Howie Pollet, Harry Brecheen, Cardinals; Ken Heintzleman, Robin Roberts, Phillies; Jansen, Giants.

A Few Stabs in the Dark

Here are a few wavering stabs, delivered through the spring darkness, as far as 1950's awards are concerned.

American league:

Most valuable player—Joe DiMaggio, now in perfect health. Leading challenger, Ted Williams.

Leading all-around hitter—Ted Williams.

Leading pitcher — Mel Parnell. Leading challenger — Allie Reynolds.

Leading home-run hitter—Luke Easter, Indians (if his doctored knee holds up.)

Leading rookie — Luke Easter, Indians.

National league:

Most valuable player—Stan Musial, Cardinals; leading challengers, Roy Campanella, Bob Morgan, Jackie Robinson, Dodgers.

Leading all-around hitter—Stan Musial.

Leading pitcher — Don Newcombe.

Leading power hitter — Ralph Kiner, Pirates.

Leading rookie — Sam Jethroe, Braves; leading challenger, Bob Morgan, Dodgers.

Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio should put on a brilliant American league batting duel.

Football's Spring Fever

Out of the shuffling and reshuffling of football coaches since the last season closed, we have a faint idea that Tom Hamilton and Pittsburgh captured one of the best of them all in the person of Len Casanova, the ex-head coach at Santa Clara.

For one reason or another more than a dozen well-known colleges suddenly found themselves without a head coach shortly after the last pass was thrown in 1949.

NEED GOOD SOIL SAMPLE FOR TEST

Only One Pound Must Represent 10 Acres

Make sure your soil sample is a good representative of the area from which it's taken, advises J. W. Fitts, head of the soil testing laboratory at Iowa State College.

He points out that the one-pound sample that's taken from a 10-acre plot has to represent 20 million pounds of topsoil.

Ten to fifteen borings about 6 inches deep should be mixed thoroughly to make up the one-pound sample. The size of the area that can be sampled with this number of borings depends on the way the land lies, Fitts says.

Difficult If Frozen

If the land is level and the soil very nearly all the same type, a little larger area can be sampled. The head of the soil testing laboratory says it's difficult to collect a sample if the ground is still frozen because of the number of borings and the depth required.

The sample should be air-dried. Special sample cartons and addressed mailing cartons may be obtained without cost at any county extension directors' offices. Cost of the actual testing is $1 per sample.

Detailed instructions on the proper way to take soil samples are provided on the sides of the cartons and on an information sheet that is furnished. The information sheet is also used by the farmer to describe the land from which the sample is taken.

CATFISH SEASON OPENS APRIL 15TH

The first of the major fishing seasons begins at 12:01 a. m., April 15, when catfishing becomes legal in all of the state's inland waters. Daily catch limit on catfish is 8, and possession limit is 8. The minimum length requirement has been removed this year, and every catfish legally caught will be a 'keeper."

Commission officials remind anglers to be sure to purchase a 1950 fishing licence before trying their luck. Frogs may not be taken for bait until May 12th. Catfishing experts believe angleworms and nightcrawlers will be the best catfish appetizer until the weather warms up.

the Highway Story

IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

Retired and prosperous, he was, probably, the town's most respected man. People came to him for advice. They knew he never made hasty or uninformed judgements.

It came as quite a shock to the town when this man of good judgement went out along an Iowa highway, jumped a four strand barbed wire fence and died in a plowed field.

He had left the small town one spring morning on a trip to the eastern part of the state. About 100 miles from his home he entered a highway that was unfamiliar to him.

But it was fine weather. The day was clear and traffic light. He let his speed creep up.

It is believed he was traveling more than 75 miles an hour when he topped a small, rolling hill and dropped immediately into a short, sharp curve. Apparently he missed the warning sign.

Centrifugal force slammed against his car like a giant hand. It threw the car straight out of the curve and head-on into an inclined embankment. The car climbed the bank and hurtled into the air.

That's when the man of "good judgement" jumped the four-strand barbed wire fence at the top of the bank. That's when he died in the plowed field.

He is well remembered in his town for he was a generous man. And particularly do people remember his favorite phrase whenever anyone came to him for advice: "Let's talk this over until we can see the road ahead," he would say, "then we will know how to drive it."

ANNUAL FUN NIGHT HELD AT GARNER

Hancock County's 4-H boys and girls held their annual Fun Night at the Garner High School gym on Saturday night, April 1st. There were 300 4-H members, parents and friends present.

A movie was shown on the 4-H Club Congress held in Chicago in conjunction with the International Livestock Show.

Nancy Bradwell gave a solo tap dance and Sharon Newell, Judy Juhl and Carolyn Hoeft also tap danced as a threesome. They were accompanied by Mrs. Chet Stille.

Games were played and the group called Kanawha totaled 797 points to be the high group for the evening. The county 4-H leaders were in charge of the games and Rural Young People acted as leaders of the various groups.

Twenty-six of the 4-H clubs of the county were represented by one or more members.

At the conclusion of the program pop, cupcakes and ice cream were served as lunch.

FRANK SCHOUN IS CANDIDATE FOR SUPERVISOR TERM

Frank J. Schoun, incumbent, is this week announcing that he will be a candidate to succeed himself as Supervisor for the term beginning January 1, 1951.

Mr. Schoun has served the county for a number of years and his work has been very satisfactory. He has always received a large vote for the office, a good indication of his popularity with the taxpayers.

Hats Off To KHS Band ! !

BAND CONCERT WEDNESDAY NIGHT TOPPED ALL PERFORMANCES

The band concert presented by the Klemme School Band, under the direction of Stanley Bulka, was without doubt the best concert ever given by a school band in Klemme.

An hour's program of a variety of band music was heard by a crowd that packed the auditorium to capacity. Every number on the program was "tops" and the boys and girls played each number like professionals.

At the close of the concert Mr. Bulka and his band were given a tremendous ovation. The crowd was still applauding after two curtain calls, which was a big compliment to the band and Mr. Bulka.

After the concert the Music Mothers served hot coffee, cake, pie and ice cream and did a land-office business. The ice cream was donated by the Corner Store.

In all, the concert was very successful and the entire committee would like to hear more fine concerts by the band.

MORE MISUNDERSTANDING ABOUT COUNTY ASSESSOR LAW

Knoxville Journal—In spite of all the discussion about the state assessor law since it was passed by the state legislature two years ago, there still seems to be misunderstanding as to what the assessor law is intended to do and that misunderstanding crops up in the strangest places.

For example, the usually intelligent editor of an outstanding newspaper in a very intelligent community in west central Iowa takes a rap at the county assessor plan because of his misunderstanding, and then puts this question: "Will (the assessor law) diminish taxes or will it result in continued increases? We shall see!"

Of course, neither the assessor nor his deputies have anything to do with levying taxes. The assessors merely determine what property values shall be for the purpose of rasing taxes.

It is the job of tax levying bodies—boards of supervisors, boards of education, city councils, township trustees—to determine how much money they need to operate the government under their administration, and what the tax levy must be to raise that money.

The county assessor's task is to make a fair valuation and an equitable valuation within the county—equitable to every property owner. That and nothing more.

The tax levy rate is determined by these other officials.

The assessors are not to be blamed for what they do not do about levying taxes or for fixing tax rates.

If valuations are higher, then the taxpayer must look to the tax levying bodies to keep rates down accordingly.

The great purpose of the county assessor plan is to set up valuations that are fair to every property owner, whether he lives in one community within the county or another, whether he happens to be this man or that man.

Assessors are to be held responsible for such a valuation. If levies are too high, then the tax levy bodies must be held responsible.

URGES LOCAL PEOPLE TO JOIN IN IOWA SPRING CLEAN-UP WEEK

County Extension Director Paul Henderson this week urged Hancock County folks to join in on the statewide Spring Clean-up Week, April 16-22.

The special week is set aside to focus attention on making our farmsteads, farm homes, and business places and residences in towns safer places in which to work and to live as well as to improve the appearance of our surroundings. Henderson points out that "eye sores" of trash and various objects that accumlate along paths, on stairways, in yards and along walkways in buildings mar the appearance of a neighborhood and have a lot to do with causing accidents. He feels that getting rid of such objects which may cause tripping and falls should be the No. 1 consideration during the week of clean-up activities.

Spring clean-up week is being sponsored by the Iowa Farm Safety Committee which is made up of 102 private and public service groups.

Fixing up as well as cleaning up should be part of the week's activities, Henderson said. He mentioned such things as repair of sidewalks, driveways, porches, stairways, ladders and painting of buildings.

Special emphasis is being placed on Clean-up week activities on farms. Safety specialists have reason to believe that rural families with well ordered and well constructed farmsteads have fewer accidents. An Iowa State College study of 210 farmsteads selected for their neatness and order showed that their annual farm accident rate was one mishap every two farms. In contrast, a study in which farms of all types were included showed an accident rate of one farm per year.

Henderson suggests that safety hazards spotted during clean-up activities be tagged. Tags will serve as reminders that the hazards are there. They can be removed at some later date. For example, Henderson points out that farmers may want to tag machinery defects until they can be repaired.

INSTALLED HIGH PRESSURE STEAM CLEANING MACHINE

Fred J. Arnold has added a time-saving piece of equipment to his shop which is the very latest for cleaning tractor, engines and machinery with live steam and chemical under high pressure.

The new outfit just installed at the Arnold Shop is a Jenny high pressure steam generotor. With this new machine all the grease, dirt and oil can be cleaned off a tractor in about 20 minutes, a job which formerly took about a day. The steam does not injure metal or electrical wiring. It does a very good job of cleaning every part of a machine or motor.

CASE BEGINS IN DISTRICT COURT AT GARNER

The case of Paul Goslin, administrator of the Robert Goslin estate vs. Algona Creamery company and James Dean got underway in the Hancock County district court last week and jurors were impaneled. Hearing of testimony began Wednesday morning.

The case is the result of an automobile accident in which Robert Goslin was fatally injured when his car collided with a truck driven by James Dean and owned by the Algona Creamery Co., on the early morning of September 25, 1949, on a highway 2½ miles northwest of Hutchins.

Primary Grades Need Kindness

By Lawrence Gould

Do small children need picked teachers?

Answer: Yes. Teachers of preschool and primary grades should be chosen more carefully than any others, not so much for formal training as for kindly attitudes and well-adjusted personalities To be separated from his mother for the first time is a real emotional shock for the small child, and if along with this he finds himself faced with an exacting, unsympathetic teacher, he may be too frightened to learn or make friends with other children and become what the uncomprehending teacher will call mischevious and lazy.

Does strict discipline help soldiers' morale?

Answer: No, says Dr. Joost A. M. Meerloo, Dutch psychiatrist with wide war experience, in his fascinating "Patterns of Panic." "Too strong discipline weakens morale," as witness the collapse of German resistance in the Tunisian campaign. "Rigid saluting, a too rigid drill, lack of humor, lack of understanding from commanders do NOT prepare the soldiers for their fearful future task." Discipline based on fear masks mutual hostility between leaders and men, and tensions resulting from this tend to produce mutiny or panic.

Is shock treatment useful in depression?

Answer: Yes, writes Dr. William P. Beckman, Director of Mental Hygiene at the South Carolina State Hospital. The type of severe mental depression once called "melancholia" — especially when associated with the menopause in women or with involution in men—responds better to this treatment than to any other. It should be used in all such cases, with the patient staying in the hospital, unless there are complications like delusions or arteriosclerosis. Perhaps the shock satisfies the "need to suffer" that is characteristic of this illness.

KEEPING HEALTHY

Movements Assist Body Processes

By Dr. James W. Barton

NOW THAT PATIENTS who have undergone operation are allowed up on their feet the same day or a few days afterwards, we are all getting used to the idea of early rising after operation or illness.

The idea behind early rising and moving about the room within such a short time is to keep all the organs of the body—heart, lungs, organs of digestion and movement of wastes from the body—active. Not only do all the organs and body processes work better when we are up and around but we feel better mentally when we are a part of our surroundings instead of remaining motionless in bed.

As there are a number of cases in which it would be unwise, even unsafe, to have the patient up and around, a means was sought by which the patient could receive the benefit of motion or movement of his body without danger. Thus, in "The Journal of Medicine," New York, Drs. G. D. Whedon, J. E. Deitrick, and E. Short report their investigation as to the favorable influence of a specially designed oscillating bed on the body processes of individuals who had to remain in bed for long periods of time.

Three healthy young men were studied on a constant food intake before, during and after a five-week period lying motionless in plaster casts in oscillating beds. These three young men had all taken part in the immobilization experiment (on standard hospital or fixed beds) previously reported Data on nitrogen, calcium, phosphorus, total sulfur, sodium and potassium balances, together with other measurements of interest, carried out under rigidly controlled conditions, are given in detail.

The results show that the oscillating bed may be useful in the management of disorders in which the individual has to lie motionless.

Research workers on sleep state that a healthy individual moves his body from 30 to 50 times during a normal night's sleep. We can see that any movement of the body, whether we move ourselves or are moved, stimulates safe and healthful action of all the body processes.

Accused

Dorothy Kenyon, named by U.S. Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) as first on his list of alleged "fellow-travelers," or Communists, in the state department, was listed as a $12,000-a-year- member of the economic and social council of the U.S. commission to the United Nations.

ACHESON:

Rapped Again

Tall, debonair Dean Acheson, U.S. secretary of state, was under fire again. He was charged, among other accusations, with trying to "shift the blame" in defending the alleged loyalty-suspect cases Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) has been airing on capitol hill.

SINCE ACHESON made his now-famous remark that "I will not turn my back on Alger Hiss," following the latter's conviction of perjury in question with treason charges, Acheson has been more or less on the pan as accusers of the state department deliver their verbal blasts.

This time, McCarthy charged three key state department aides as having shown Communist sympathies and demanded investigation of a navy civilian scientist whom he described as working on "top-most defense secrets."

The charge that the state department harbors men and women of Communist leanings or sympathies is not a new one. It has been cropping up for the past several years, and on each occasion the department indignantly rushes forth with a denial.

THAT'S NOT SURPRISING for certainly neither Senator McCarthy nor anyone else expected the state department would admit such a condition existed, even if it did exist. To do so would admit either a lack of proper security efforts on the part of the department, or a willingness to wink at any employee's loyalty if that employee happened to "stand in right" with the proper officials.

ATTLEE:

Doing Okay

To the surprise of most observers, England's so-called "shaky" Labor government had survived two major tests of strength in parliament.

FOLLOWING the election, in which Prime Minister Attlee's Labor party won a bare majority of parilament seats, it was predicted that the victory margin was so slight that the government might crumple—that a new election was practically inevitable.

In the recent test—action on a Conservative motion to beat down the cabinet's housing program—Attlee made a considerably stronger showing than on a previous issue.

THE LABOR VICTORY was made possible by support from the Liberal faction, a development at odds with popular speculation as to where the Liberals would go in parliamentary tests. Many top political observers had predicted that the Liberals would stand with the Conservatives against Attlee's broad program of nationalization-of-industry-and-resources, but closer observers of the British political scene had pooh-poohed the idea that the Liberals would ever be found standing with the Conservatives. And, apparently, these prognosticators were correct.

While it had appeared that the Labor forces were to trim down their nationalization program because of the close election result, these new victories might reshape the pattern of intent. For example, following triumph on the housing issue, Health Minister Bevan, whose ministry administers the housing program, declared . . . "the government's program will be persisted in."

TRUMAN:

Costly Figure

Republicans, sniping at President Truman, declared that he, as a private citizen, "is one of the best, if not the best paid man in the world today."

Figures lending themselves to many artifices, the gentleman issuing that statement, Rep. Roy O. Woodruff of Michigan figured it out this way:

A PRIVATE CITIZEN to match the standard of living now enjoyed by the President would need an income of three to three and a half million dollars a year.

Mr. Truman has take-home pay of $110,000 a year out of his salary, $50,000 of which is tax-free.

He has 42 facilities for travel, including 35 automobiles, airplanes, his own yacht, the Williamsburg, a private Pullman car and "vacation retreats" in Key West, Fla., and Maryland.

He has an estimated staff of 665 persons at an annual cost of $1,491,540. He has a travel allowance of $33,000 to $40,000.

Then Representative Woodruff listed the costs of the yacht, the President's personal plane, his private railroad car, a destroyer escort for the yacht, secret service and White House guards, White House salary costs for a staff of 225.

THEN said Representative Woodruff: "By comparison, President Roosevelt in 1945 had a staff of 53 costing only $256,431 and President Hoover's staff totaled 37 at a salary bill of $127,200. Present White House salary costs, he said, amount to $998,254 annually.

That was an impressive list of conveniences and privileges and special help, certainly; rivaling in many instances the best that an Indian Potentate could boast. Yet, democracy comes high, and there was little likelihood that a resume of what the presidency costs the people would raise the blood pressure of many American taxpayers.

ELECTIONS:

Certainty & Doubt

A graphic contrast between choices by electorates in Communist and other countries was provided in the Russian and Belgian elections. In Russia, there was no choice.

Premier Stalin was the Number 1 candidate of the Soviets, and he had no opposition. As head of the Communist ticket, he was shooting for as nearly 100 per cent of the vote as possible—with no "No" votes to come.

Stalin and associates campaigned on a pledge of following a policy of peace. The Russians elected a new parliament of 1,302 members.

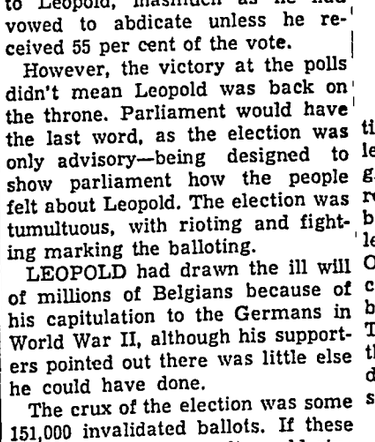
IN BELGIUM the situation was quite different. The issue was: Should King Leopold III be returned to the throne? Fifty-seven per cent of the voters said he should, a fact which must have been comforting to Leopold, inasmuch as he had vowed to abdicate unless he received 55 per cent of the vote.

However, the victory at the polls didn't mean Leopold was back on the throne. Parliament would have the last word, as the election was only advisory—being designed to show parliament how the people felt about Leopold. The election was tumultuous, with rioting and fighting marking the balloting.

LEOPOLD had drawn the ill will of millions of Belgians because of his capitulation to the Germans in World War II, although his supporters pointed out there was little else he could have done.

The crux of the election was some 151,000 invalidated ballots. If these were counted, the result would give Leopold only 54 per cent of the votes and he would have to act on his pledge of abdication if he failed to receive the 55 per cent he had mentioned.

Fights Tax



Fred N. Acker, Cleveland, Ohio, attorney, is testing the validity of present federal income tax schedules which he declares are "confiscatory." Acker admitted he has not filed any return or paid any direct taxes for several years, and "invited the government charge."

CURVES:

In or Out?

The matter of whether milady's curves were to be played down or accentuated in this spring's fashions was a subject of no little controversy among designers.

One school of thought wanted curves concealed—The other would have them displayed to the best advantage. The subject was important to the American male who, in the end, would be most concerned because he would pay for most of it.

Unbandaged Yanks Ready to Win

By GRANTLAND RICE

PEERING into the palms and pines, the Casey Stengel of 1950 is an entirely different person from the Casey Stengel of 1949.

A year ago at this time, we found a bewildered, baffled, uncertain Yankee manager who admitted that he knew few answers to any questions involving his team. This is now a new Casey. The sun is brighter, the palms are greener, the birds sing sweeter songs and even the pelicans look more intelligent.

Grantland Rice

For Casey's 1950 answer is — "Bring 'em along. Red Sox and all the rest. The Yankees will be set and ready.

"We are far better off than we were a year ago," Casey said.

"How do you figure that one out," I asked. "You haven't added a single player."

"I figure it this way," Casey said. "Joe DiMaggio reports in the best condition in many years. I never saw Henrich or Rizzuto look better. Joe Page is all set. In addition to Allie Reynolds, Vic Raschi, Tommy Byrne, Ed Lopat and others, we have Bob Porterfield and Frank Shea, two of our 1949 wounded, back in harness with their bandages removed. Both expect to be ready.

"In my opinion," Casey continued, "Reynolds is going to be a leading star this year. I mean a great pitcher. He could also be a relief pitcher close to Page. The big fellow is a fine all-around athlete. He was a backfield star at Oklahoma or one of those Oklahoma colleges. Raschi will be among the best again. And I have an idea Tommy Byrne will soon find where that plate is planted—and when he does, look out. He's got amazing stuff.

"Here's another thing. We've found out we could suffer over 60 wounds and still win. We've discovered we could have most of our team on crutches and still win. Did you know that DiMaggio, Henrich and Berra, three of our top hitters, were only in 19—or maybe it was 17-games together all season?

"We are bound to have better breaks than we drew last year. Lightning can't hit the same spot 60 times in a season. This means we should have our best men in action far oftener than we had them a year ago. That could make a big difference."

The 1950 Casey may have a few inner twinges but outwardly he fairly exudes confidence. He's the only manager I know of who is willing to admit openly that he expects to win.

* * *

The Yankee Bench

At that moment an ancient-looking pelican lighted for a few minutes not so far away.

"I only wish I was half as smart as that bird looks to be," Casey said. "No one could be that smart."

In the course of punching the bag I asked Casey what he thought was the strongest feature of the Yankees last year.

"That's easy," he said. "It was our bench. We always had a good man ready for any gap. No other team had a bench that matched ours. Outside of first base, we had Coleman, Stirnweiss, Rizzuto, Brown and Johnson ready for our infield. Outside of DiMaggio and Henrich, we had Bauer, Woodling, Mapes and Lindell for any vacant spot in our outfield The bench was ready to give us anything we needed—all good men, too. It makes a big difference what sort of reserves you have. We had good ones, all the time—Bauer, Mapes, Woodling, Brown, etc. Anything happened to Berra—there was Silvera in 58 games, batting .318.

Our pitching — anything happened to Reynolds—there was Page. Anything happened to Raschi—there was Page. Anything happened to Byrne or Lopat or Sanford—there was Page.

"I guess that's our weakest spot," Casey finally said. "Our pitchers had to be relieved too often. No one pitcher should be yanked out of the bull pen 60 or more times in a season. That's almost half our games. Too many. We've got to do something about that. Raschi wasn't bad that way. But I think you'll find Reynolds and Byrne will need less help.

"Porterfield is sure he is O.K. and that his arm ligament has healed. Shea says he feels fine, with all his soreness gone. You can't ask a pitcher to show you everything the first day of the spring season.

"All in all," Casey concluded, "We have no alibis and no excuses for what happens. I think we'll be better than we were a year ago. Don't forget to mention those two words—Yankee spirit. That's what won for us a year ago. I think it can win again. It will be a much tougher league this time."

Iowa Farmers To Cut Corn Acreage 13 Percent

Des Moines,—Iowa farmers indicated as of March 1st they planned to decrease their 1950 corn acreage 13 percent from last year to a total of 9,854,000 acres, the state-federal crop reporting service said Monday.

The service said the reduction was due mainly to the corn acreage control program.

Intended plantings of all crops total 21,997,000 acres compared to 22,588,000 last year.

SECOND GRADE NEWS

We are proud of the fact that more of us are getting A's every week in spelling even though we are learning twelve words instead of ten.

Now that we have mastered, (we hope) both the short and long sounds of all the vowels we are learning the hard and soft sounds of G and C. We have also also been studying compound words.

We learned a song about a frog that went courting, which had sixteen verses. Then we illustrated each verse in drawings.

In phonics we are learning the difference between suffixes and prefixes and what many of them are.

We learned two new songs, "Springtime Is Here," and "The Rainbow Fairies."

We have nearly completed our science books and are now going to make booklets about what we learned. So far we have written and drawn or found pictures about the weather; or how the wind affects it and us.

POISON 1080 IS GREAT RAT KILLER

But It Is Safe Only If Handled Carefully

One of the world's most dangerous poisons, called 1080 is now being used effectively in Iowa for rat control, according to Harold Gunderson, extension entomologist at Iowa State College. However, only commercial operators are allowed to use the poison due to the hazard involved.

Gunderson says most operators are using the poison properly. A few commercial operators, however, are ignoring vital precautions. Their customers do not realize this since they have no knowledge of the precautions needed. As a result, extreme hazards due to careless use of 1080 have been found in food manufacturing, food handling, and food processing establishments.

The Iowa Pest Control Operators Association has gone on record as approving and following recommendations on the handling of 1080 as given by the U. S. Public Health Service, the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the National Pest Control Association, according to Gunderson.

Recommendations

He outlines their recommendations as follows (1) the pest control operator must never release 1080 in any form to any customer; (2) 1080 must not be used in any dwelling or apartment house; and (3) the operator must distribute and pick up all the 1080 himself.

Other rules include: (4) 1080 bait stations and cups must be plainly marked "POISON"; (5) bait stations and cups must be placed so that there is no chance of food contamination in case of accidental spillage; and (6) permanent bait stations should be made of metal, permanently fastened to the wall or floor, kept locked, and with the only key in the possession of the operator.

The last three of the nine rules are: (7) customers using permanent bait stations must be warned to pick up and burn dead rodents every day; (8) temporary bait cups should be special, widebase paper cups plainly marked "POISON"; (9) in once-over baiting with 1080, bait cups must be put out by the operator himself after working hours, and cups and dead rodents must be picked up, removed and burned, before the establishment opens in the morning.

No Antidote For 1080

There is no antidote for 1080 and it must be handled with respect. Gunderson says that by following the recommended procedures, it has been possible to use this poison safely and effectively.

Food processors will do well to bear in mind that the U. S. Food and Drug Administration has the power to seize, condemn and destroy any or all food and feed products in any establishment where 1080 has been used carelessly, Gunderson says. He defines careless use as any deviation from the rules and regulations.

TELLS OF BORER CONTROL MEASURES TO TAKE BEFORE PLANTING

In a letter that went to every Hancock farms this week, Paul Henderson, Couny Extension Director, suggested corn borer control measures that can be used from now through corn planting time. Henderson urged all farmers in the county to fight borers now with all the weapons available. "Cultural practices will kill borers—and the only good borer is a dead one" he stated in the letter.

Henderson pointed out that the oldest corn borer control measure involves the destruction of corn crop residues. Tests have shown that the disk alone will kill from 30 to 85 percent of the borers in field tests, depending on a number of variable factors. Clean plowing so that all trash is covered, will destroy the greatest number of borers of all these cultural practices.

He recommends plowing all sloping fields on the contour to help prevent soil erosion. Burning stalks is not recommended under any circumstances, according to Henderson. The practices doesn't kill enough borers and it helps set the stage for soil erosion.

The use of high-yielding, adapted corn varieties having strong stalks and strong shanks will help avoid some of the loss from broken stalks and dropped ears. But, Henderson pointed out that there is no commercial variety known that won't be attacked by borers—and borer attack lowers yield to some extent. Avoiding extremely early planting may help reduce heavy infestation by first-brood borers. It is generally believed that corn planted between May 15 and May 25 in an average year will give best yields. However, past history of the soil, type and quantity of fertilizer used, and perhaps the hybrid you plant will also influence the degree of borer attack, Henderson has stated.

While all of these practices including cultural practices outlined in the latter will help, none will do the whole job of borer control alone. Even though you do the best possible job of killing borers before the growing season, use high-yielding, adapted corn varieties having strong stalks and shanks, and avoid early planting, there still is a threat of serious damage from borers, Henderson said.

Feature Fish For It's—

VARIETY IN ANY MEAL

These are the days when menu making becames a rather dreary task—when all the foods seem to need a dash of springtime sparkle. If that's the case, say food specialists, a good way to tempt the family appetite is to feature fish with all its tangy accompaniments.

When summertime comes and Dad and the boys take off for a fishing trip, there's no need to sell them on the idea of how good fish can be.

But tempting fish are also in order about this time of year, when you're at your wits' end to think of new foods to serve or news ways to serve them.

For example, have you ever tried serving heated red salmon in flakes cushioned in heaping nests of rich, hot mashed potatoes? It's a combination that's good to look at and wonderful to taste. Add buttered green string beans and succulent browned mushrooms to the menu.

Good Purchases

Fish found most commonly in Iowa markets are perch, bass, pike, haddock, halibut, rosefish and whitefish.

Fresh and frozen fish are usually sold in fillets (slices of fish cut lengthwise away from the backbone) and steaks (crosswise pieces). They have no waste and need no extra preparation before cooking.

How you prepare fish depends on their fat content, says Jewel Graham, extension nutritionist Iowa State College. Fat fish such as salmon, shad, mackerel, lake trout and whitefish can be baked or broiled.

Lean fish, which include cod, flounder, haddock, pike, rosefish, sea bass, striped bass, perch and carp, are usually cooked in water because they are firmer after cooking. They may be baked or broiled if basted with melted fat.

Both types of fish are fine when pan-fried. The most important point to remember about fish cookery is to avoid overcooking. Cook the fish just until the flesh can easily be flaked.

Steaks In Mustard Sauce

Here's a different way to fix fish steaks. For four steaks use 1 tablespoon melted fat, 1 tablespoon flour, salt and pepper to taste, ½ teaspoon dry mustard, three-quarters cup of milk and ¼ cup crumbs mixed with fat.

Place the steaks in a greased shallow pan. In a saucepan, blend fat and flour, add seasonings and milk. Cook, stirring, until thickened. Pour this sauce over the fish and sprinkle with crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees F. (moderate oven) for 30 to 35 minutes. This will serve four people.

Savory Fish Loaf

Use 2 cups flaked cooked fish or a 14-ounce can, 1½ cup soft bread crumbs, three-quarters cup cooked or canned tomatoes, 1 egg beaten, 2 tablespoons melted fat, 1 tablespoon minced onion, ¼ teaspoon savory seasoning, and salt and pepper to taste.

Combine the ingredients, pack into a greased pan, and bake at 350 degrees F. about 45 minutes or until firm. This makes 6 servings.

Oven-Dried Fish

For 4 servings use 1 pound of fish fillets or steaks, ½ cup milk, ½ tablespoon salt, ½ cup fine bread crumbs, 2 tablespoons melted fat. Cut the fish into serving pieces. Dip it in milk, with salt added, and roll in crumbs. Place fish in a greased baking pan and pour the fat over it. Bake at 500 degrees F. for about 10 minutes or until fish is tender and brown.

THE HIGHWAY STORY

"I looked up in the rear vision mirror and saw this little girl rolling in the street." A stunned and weeping driver made that statement to police moments after a five-year-old girl died on the curbing before her home.

Only ten minutes before, the motorist had been driving in the mid-morning quiet of a residential section of an Iowa town. Yes, perhaps he had been driving a little faster than the speed limit allowed but still, he had been cautious, normally watchful.

Then something struck his right front fender. It was such a light blow that he drove on, glancing into his rear vision mirror to see what he had brushed his car. He saw a child "rolling in the street" behind him.

The little girl had skipped out from between two parked autos and into the side of the moving car.

There followed moments of dream-like helplessness. The child was carried to the curbing but she never regained consciousness. The neighbor women gathered, the ambulance came and the police. The driver became sick. He leaned against the car and weakly beat the fender with his fist.

There was nothing anyone could do. The child was dead when the ambulance pulled away. The driver had to be taken away in his own car because he was incapable of taking the wheel again. All he could see was that stark scene reflected in the rear vision mirror.

While this specific story is true, it is one of the oldest in the history of traffic accidents. One or more similar accidents happen every spring and summer in Iowa when the small children come out to play When a child is near a street or highway, "rear vision" is not enough to protect him.

NEED TO CHOOSE RIGHT TREES FOR LAND, USE

This week will be a good time to convert your ideas about new windbreaks, erosion control and wildlife conservation into terms of actual trees to be planted, says R. B. Campbell, extension forester at Iowa State College.

He says it's wise to do some planning on the kinds of trees you want and their exact location. Different kinds of trees grow better in certain locations and soils, and the tree will need to fit the site that's picked. Young trees also need to be planted where they can be protected from livestock.

Trees for erosion control and wildlife conservation may be ordered from the State Forest Nursery through county extension directors, conservation officers and soil conservation personnel.

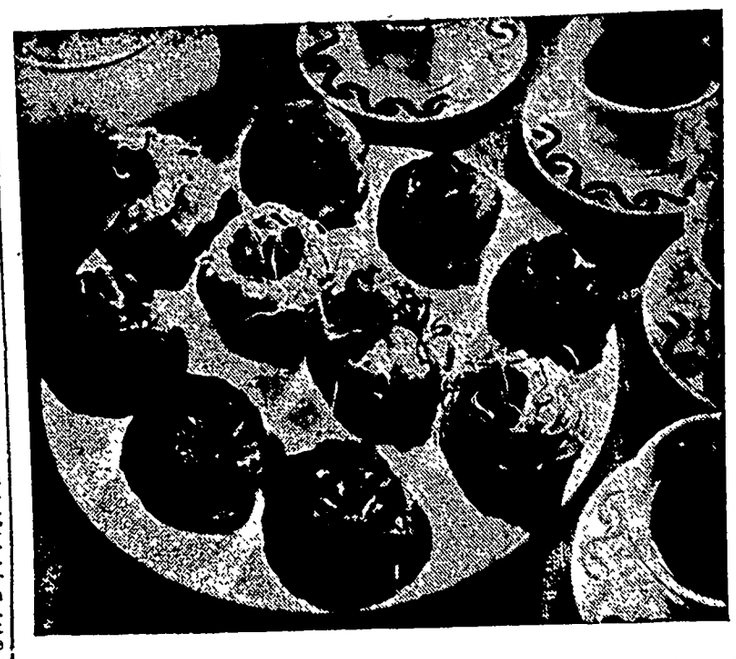
On areas that haven't been cropped and where erosion is a hazard, Campbell says to plow a furrow on the contour and then plant the trees by digging holes along the furrow.

On cropped areas trees may be planted by first plowing the entire area and then putting the trees out wherever they're wanted.

Where land can't be plowed at all, Campbell says to scalp off the sod and plant the tree in the center of the area where the sod has been removed. Trees won't compete with sod cover and also need to be spaced 6 feet to 8 feet apart on all sides, he explains. Campbell has prepared a new bulletin, "Tree Planting on the farm," which may be obtained at county extension director's offices.

Plan Now For That—

GLADSOME FARE FOR EASTER



Easter morn is a gladsome time; a time to know the beauty and wonder of renewed life, and to reflect that feeling in everything we do—even to planning that spcial breakfast.

Tradition has it that hot cross buns and other tempting hot rolls in our Easter menus.

Sweet and spicy rolls give an extra touch to any meal, and for that special Easter festivity, they have even more place, according to nutrition specialists, Iowa State College.

Hot cross buns, with their symbolic cross, are said to have long been associated with Good Friday meals, and to have originated centuries before the Christian era.

The myths and legends that have come down to us say that the Greeks offered a sacred cake or "boun" to their moon goddess. These cakes are even depicted in early Grecian art and sculpture. The stylized cross is said to have been an allusion to the four phases of the moon. Another thought is that the cake was broken into four parts as a matter of convenience when making a sacrifice.

The custom of hot cross buns is particularly bound up with Christianity, and with new significance attached to the symbol of the cross. In England, as far back as 1252, bakeries engaged in the forbidden practice of competing with the church by selling buns and cakes stamped with a cross.

It was believed that the buns would never mold if made just right and at the right time. Perhaps the lavish use of spices had something to do with the preservation of the little cakes. Many families kept them as a good luck sign from one season to the next.

Early English settlers brought the custom of hot cross buns to the United States, and here they have always been especially popular.

But so have many other tasty sweet rolls. In fact, breakfast often wouldn't seem breakfast to many people without a sweet bun to munch on. High on the list of favorites are caramel pecan puffs, and a tasty little package called apricot puffs.

Carmel Pecan Puffs

Use 1 package yeast, compressed or dry ¼ cup lukewarm water, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup sugar, 1 tsp. salt, ½ cup melted shortening, 2 eggs, 3¼ cups sifted enriched flour, ½ tsp. vanilla extract, butter or margarine, brown sugar, water, pecan halves.

Soften the yeast in lukewarm water. Scald milk. Add sugar, salt and shortening. Cool to lukewarm. Add 1 cup flour and beat well. Add eggs. Beat well. Add softened yeast. Mix well. Add more flour to make a stiff batter. Add vanilla. Beat until smooth. Cover and let rise until bubbly. Prepare muffin pans by putting ½ tsp melted butter or margarine in each. Cover with two tsps. brown sugar. Add few drops water. Put few pecan halves in each pan. When batter is light, stir down. Drop by spoonfuls in prepared muffin pans. Let rise until light (about 20 min.) Bake in moderate oven (376 F.) 20 to 25 minutes.

Apricot Puffs

Use 1 package yeast, compressed or dry, ¼ cup lukewarm water, 1 cup milk, ¼ cup sugar, 1 tsp salt, ½ cup melted shortening, 2 eggs, 3¼ cups flour sifted, ½ tsp. vanilla, 1 cup raisins, 18 cooked apricot halves, confectioners sugar icing, coconut.

Follow the same procedure as for caramel pecan recipe in preparing batter. Let rise until bubbly. Then add raisins. Drop batter into greased muffin pans. Put apricot on top of each. Let rise until light (20 min.). Bake at 375 degrees F., 20 to 25 min. Brush with icing and sprinkle with cocoanut.

Comparatively Speaking Eggs Now Cheaper

Egg are now cheaper than they used to be if they are compared to other foods, says Francis Kutish, extension farm economist at Iowa State College The biggest difference can be noticed in the winter months.

The reason, Kutish says, is that the poultry industry has greatly increased its production efficiency. Hens have been bred and managed to work a full shift in winter as well as in summer.

Kutish says it costs more now to be in the egg business, because of the better stock, improved housing, and higher feeds that are needed. However, costs per dozen eggs produced are less, if you figure the same general price level. That's the reason eggs are cheaper now than they used to be on a year-around basis compared with other foods.

And we haven't reached the end in lowering the cost of eggs, according to the economist. He says poultry production experts expect the rate of lay to increase for some years to come.

It's true we haven't made much progress toward reducing the cost of marketing eggs, Kutish states. In 1925, the farmer got 72 cents out of the consumer's dollar spent for eggs and it's still about the same now. That's the United States average on a year-around basis.

An Old St. Christopher Medal And a Bashed-in Pullman Car

By BILLY ROSE

Ordinarily, knowing what editors expect of me, I don't devote much space in this column to stories of faith, devotion and other such unhep subjects. However, I bumped into a yarn the other night that did nice things to my spine, and here 'tis, even though it's as corny as a chorus of "Hearts and Flowers. . . ."

Some years ago, a dancer named Jean Armstrong (note to Ed.— that's her square monicker and she's given me permission to use it) came down with a ruptured appendix, and by the time they got her to the hospital, peritonitis had set in and the doctors didn't give her much chance.

The following day, the nurse handed her a string of rosary beads. "A little girl tried to get in to see you this morning," she said. "Her name was Sylvia, and she said her mother was a friend of yours. When I told her you couldn't be disturbed, she asked me to give you this. It has a St. Christopher medal on it, and the kid thought it might bring you luck."

Billy Rose

The dancer wasn't a Catholic, but she was touched by the present anyhow. And six weeks later, thanks to faith or the new sulfa drugs, she was out of the hospital.

FROM THEN ON, she kept the rosary in her make-up box, but a couple of years later, after a succession of cheap variety houses and even cheaper hotels, the beads no longer seemed very important. And one day, when one of the girls in her vaudeville unit asked about the St. Christopher medal, Jean said, "It's nothing at all. Just a piece of old junk. I don't know why I keep on carrying it."

That Sunday, when the troupe checked into a Baltimore hotel, Jean put the make-up case on top of her valise and signed the register, but when she reached for her luggage the case was gone. She notified the desk and, when that didn't produce results, reported the loss to the police. But when the unit pulled out of Baltimore on Saturday night, neither case nor beads had been found.

In Pittsburgh the next week, the show got bad notices and folded, and as if that weren't enough, the manager skipped with the salaries. A few days later, down to her last three bucks, Jean considered herself plenty lucky when a local agent offered her a job in a Miami nightclub. She was given a ticket—car 16, berth No. 1—on the 7.22 out of Pittsburgh.

At 7 o'clock the dancer left the hotel, but a couple of blocks from the depot she noticed something on the sidewalk and picked it up. It was a string of rosary beads and, attached to it, a medallion of St. Christopher.

JEAN DIDN'T KNOW then, and she doesn't know now, whether it was the same rosary. She did know, however, that it looked exactly like the one the little girl had sent her, except for one thing—the chain had been broken. As she continued on to the station, she got to thinking of the beads—how sick she had been when she first got them, and how her troupe had been stranded when she had referred to the medallion as a piece of old junk. And suddenly it seemed important to get the chain fixed.

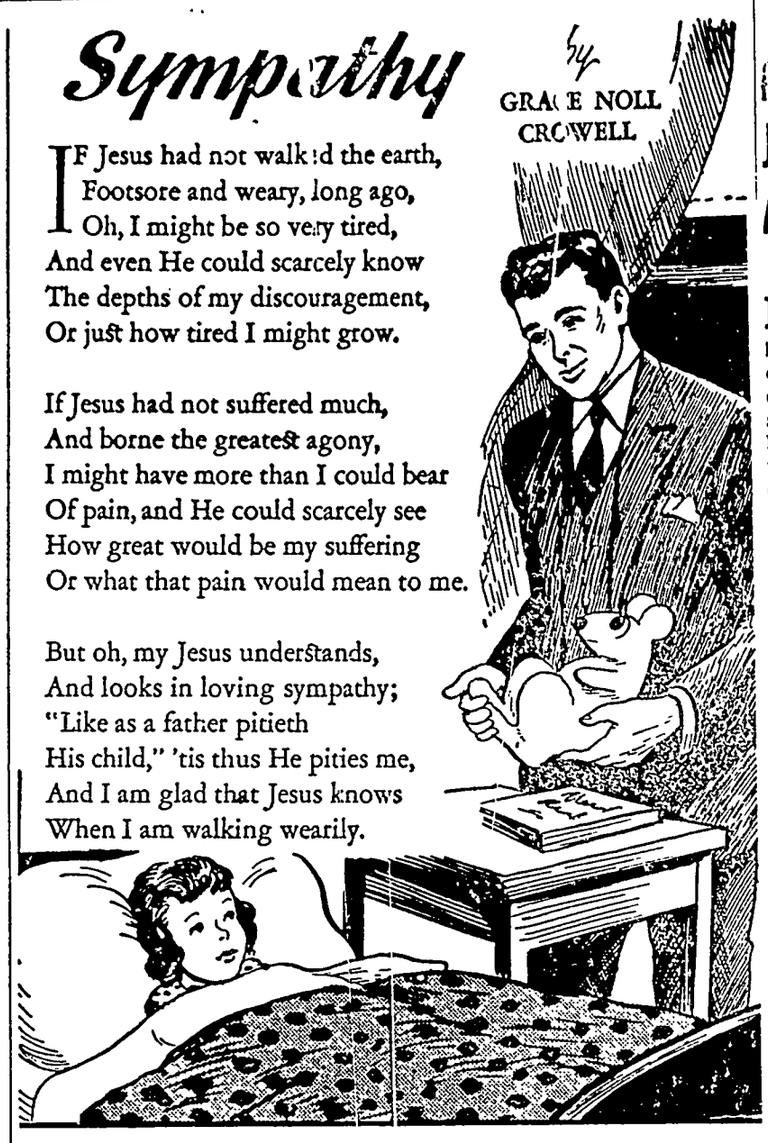
Up the street there was a combination hock shop-jewelry store and, forgetting the 7:22, she walked in. The jeweler worked as fast as he could, but when he handed the rosary back to her the clock said 7:30, and the dancer knew she was out of a job again.

With less than a dollar in her purse, she went back to the hotel, and a few minutes later the phone rang. It was the stage manager of "The Student Prince" which, for the umpteenth time, was playing the Nixon theater. "Heard your troupe was stranded," he said. "One of our dancers is getting married tomorrow, and if you want to fill in for a few weeks—"

And now for as corny a finish as ever found its way into a so-called hep column. When Jean picked up a newspaper the next morning, she read that the 7:22 out of Pittsburgh had been side-swiped by a freight car. It wasn't much of a wreck—nobody had been hurt because the two berths which were bashed in happened to be empty. One of them, of course, was berth No. 1, car 16.

Sympathy

By GRACE NOLL CROWELL



If Jesus had not walked the earth,
Footsore and weary, long ago,
Oh, I might be so very tired,
And even He could scarcely know
The depths of my discouragement,
Or just how tired I might grow.

If Jesus had not suffered much,
And borne the greatest agony,
I might have more than I could bear
Of pain, and He could scarcely see
How great would be my suffering
Or what that pain would mean to me.

But oh, my Jesus understands,
And looks in loving sympathy;
"Like as a father pitieth
His child," 'tis thus He pities me,
And I am glad that Jesus knows
When I am walking wearily.

SERVICE IN PEACE AND WAR

Red Cross 'National Blood Program' Called Just as Important Now in Defense, Security As It Was as a Survival Factor in Wartime

By General George C. Marshall

MILLIONS of Americans are familiar with the nation-wide blood donor service of the American Red Cross during the war because most of them made a personal contribution of their own blood. They knew that their donations saved the lives of many soldiers and sailors.

Few however, are aware that wartime service has been revived and expanded by the Red Cross. Now it is called the "national blood program." It is probably just as important today for our defense and security as it was during the war when it was a major factor in the survival of more than 97 per cent of all wounded American servicemen.

MARSHALL

Since taking up my new responsibilities with Red Cross in October, I have visited a large number of cities from coast to coast conferring with Red Cross leaders. I found in most regions the blood program of the Red Cross aroused greater interest and made a greater appeal to the Red Cross workers than any other activity at this time.

They felt that they were making a very important contribution to the health of the people and were establishing the organized framework to meet any great disaster instantly and effectively in this phase of relief.

A national military emergency might possibly require more blood in one week than all our requirements during one year of the late war. In a great emergency, volunteer donors would come forward in the desired numbers, but without the framework of the system now being progressively established, the contributions of these volunteers could not be processed and made immediately available to save the lives of the injured.

To help speed his recovery, a small patient is given a transfusion with blood made available through the national blood program.

There is only one known source from which this blood can be obtained, and that is from the veins of living, healthy people.

I found that there were 30 regional centers of the national blood program in operation. Blood was being made available through these centers to 1,550 hospitals located in areas embracing more than 40 million people. Mobile units had visited some 1,100 smaller communities, and about 640 Red Cross chapters were participating in the work of these regional centers. All this had been accomplished in less than two years' time.

In times of peace, vast quantities of blood are needed for people undergoing major surgery, for accident victims, for childbirths, for people suffering from anemia or other blood diseases. Research has already uncovered the fact that one pint of blood which formerly helped only one person can now be broken down into fractions which may provide treatment for a dozen or more cases.

While the whole country is not yet covered by the network of Red Cross blood centers, every community now receives benefits from the program through the blood fractions, or derivatives, which it provides.

I have learned that one of these fractions, has been distributed to every state of the union to prevent or modify measles. I am told that it lessens the dangers of complications which sometimes follow measles, such as pneumonia, some types of sleeping sickness, middle-ear infection, and heart impairment.

Last year, 688,532 vials of this serum were supplied by Red Cross to the nation's physicians.

Immune serum globulin, a blood derivative used to modify or prevent measles, is being used here on a two-year-old girl following her exposure to the disease. More than two million vials of serum have been distributed since 1944 by Red Cross to physicians throughout the nation.

Another blood derivative is said to be invaluable in treatment of shock, burns, and certain kidney and liver ailments, and there still are others now in use or being clinically tested for future availability.

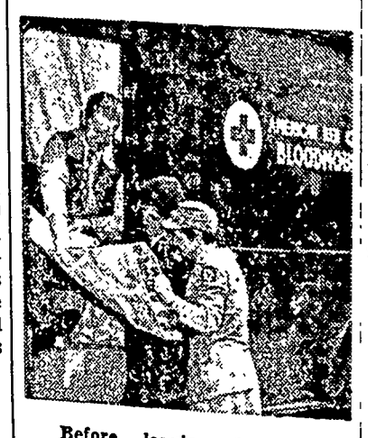
Most of this fractionation to date has been done with surplus war plasma returned to the Red Cross by the army and navy. In one case, a ship that had been sunk in Manila Bay was raised and the plasma aboard was found to be in satisfactory condition for this fractionation.

But today this supply is about exhausted. Therefore, the national blood program is being stepped up to meet this special need.

It is estimated that a donation of one pint of blood from one out of every 25 American adults will be required each year to meet the nation's normal demands for whole blood and blood fractions.

People have asked me why the Red Cross does not require pint-for-pint replacement by the recipient's friends or family. To demand replacement in kind, rather than replenishment, or to make any charge whatever for blood which has been donated voluntarily would be a departure from the basic Red Cross principle of helping people solely on the basis of need.

Some people ask why the program must operate on a nation-wide basis. The answer is simple. A major disaster would require the instant shipment of large quantities of blood from one section of the country to another. Only a national hookup, to use a radio term, would facilitate this service to the injured.



Before leaving Rochester, N. Y., to set up blood center in Hornell, the driver of a Blood-mobile confers on the route to be taken with a Red Cross nurse and volunteer Motor Service driver.

A frequent question is whether this program is not a form of socialized medicine. Socialized medicine implies compulsion. It also implies governmental control. There is neither in the Red Cross program which is based on an entirely volunteer procedure and is not subject under the law to government control.

Up to the present time the major control and financing is centered at American Red Cross national headquarters, but this procedure has only been followed as necessary to get the program under way.

A gradual decentralization is now being initiated which will transfer the major burden of direction and financing to local chapters.

'I Was Tremendously Impressed'

"I was tremendously impressed with the progress of the Red Cross blood program. I am intensely interested in this program. It is one of the most important of the Red Cross' modern efforts and it is of vital importance in the event of major disasters. I am certain that its national importance is not yet fully understood.

"It is inspiring to see so much intensity of effort in a purely voluntary way and at the same time surprising to find such a small degree of public appreciation of what the Red Cross volunteers are doing."

FIVE HOURS DEAD

By Richard H. Wilkinson

3-Minute Fiction

OBADIAH LITTLE was dead. There were plenty who would be glad to hear that news There were a great majority of others who didn't care a rap.

Obadiah was a mean old man who lived alone on a farm 10 miles west of Fairview. Everyone hated him because he drove a sharp bargain and foreclosed mortgages on the minute.

That was the situation that confronted Owen and me when we drove up to investigate.

Preliminary investigation revealed the following facts: Obadiah had been killed by a rock thrown through a window near which he was sitting, reading. We knew he had been sitting there reading because Moses Morris, a neighbor had passed by in the early evening and noticed the light in Obadiah's window, and noticed Obadiah sitting beside it. Moses had gone up the road looking for a cow that had strayed. He found the cow and started back and noticed that Obadiah had shifted his position.

Something about the way the old man looked aroused Moses' curiosity, and he went up close and saw blood on Obadiah's temple. Moses went on home and called the police.

We corrobrated this by talking to neighbors who had heard Moses calling the cow, and by discovering footprints and hoofprints outside the window, and by the fact that That looked bad, or good, depending on what side of the fence you were on. I sent Owen to hunt up Roscoe, and returned to Obadiah's farm.

Quite a crowd had gathererd outside. Lights from automobiles illuminated the house and grounds. Among the cars I noticed Doc Orion's little coupe.

He was inside, and had already begun his investigation.

"How's it look?" I asked him.

"Let you know in about an hour." He glanced up and returned to his work. I scowled. Doc was usually more confident.

I went back into the bedroom. Doc was stuffing things back into his bag.

"Been dead about five hours," he said.

"How?"

"Some blunt instrument."

"The rock, eh?"

"Could have been."

Just then Owen came in. He had a tall, rawboned individual with him. "This is Roscoe," he said.

Owen came in again with Moses. Moses looked important.

"Moses," I said, "you're a first class liar. You murdered Obadiah!"

Moses' jaw went slack. "How do you figure that, Shurruf?"

"Easy as pie," I said. "You started out after your cow and stopped by to talk to Obadiah—about renewing a mortgage, perhaps, or something else. Anyway, you got mad and slugged him with the stove poker. Then you propped him up by the window, lighted the lamp and put the book in his hand.

"Then you went outside and heaved a rock through the window. Later, when you came back with your cow you saw that Obadiah had slumped, and you went up to look, which is when Oscar Jones came by."

There was, of course, blood on the poker to prove that part of it, but it was what the doc said that gave me the real lead. Dead five hours. Well, five hours ago the sun was shining, and a mean old man like Obadiah wouldn't burn oil when the sun was out.

Obadiah was a mean old man . . . everybody hated him.

Oscar Jones, another neighbor, had come by while Moses was looking in the window.

So we discounted Moses as a possible suspect, and went to work on the others who had hated Obadiah. There was, for example, Roscoe Norbert, who lived a mile away, and who had been helping Obadiah with his haying. A neighbor had heard Obadiah and Roscoe quarreling over wages that very day.

SO WE CALLED at Roscoe's house, and struck a snag. Roscoe hadn't been home all night.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By INEZ GERHARD

BERRY KROEGER, typed on a recent Hollywood trip as a young Charles Laughton, is currently heard as "Sam Williams" on "Young Dr. Malone". He got his first radio contract when the narrator of Louella Parsons' show collapsed in the middle of his impersonation of Ronald Colman, back in 1940. Berry picked up the script and carried on. He had broken into radio in 1930, when versatility was a "must"; in one local half-hour show he had carried 11 parts, for which he received $2.50!

BERRY KROEGER

When Charles Laughton was being interviewed at luncheon in New York's Algonquin the other day, complete silence reigned at neighboring tables; his voice was so beautiful that everybody within range wanted to listen to it.

"Stromboli", which quickly leaped from first to second-run movie houses, is getting bad word-of-mouth publicity. People report that it just seemed so dull and tiresome that they walked out before the picture was half over.

Walt Disney discovered while doing research for his "Cinderella" that the famous glass slipper wasn't glass at all, but fur. Charles Perrault, when he wrote the famous story more than 300 years ago, said the slipper was "pantouffle en vair" (fur slipper). The translator mistook the last two words for "en verre", or glass. So there goes another legend!

Debbie Reynolds made her screen debut in Warners' "The Daughter of Rosie O'Grady" recently, did "Three Little Words" at M-G-M with Fred Astaire and Vera-Ellen, and now has been signed by that studio to a term contract. Next she'll do "The Tender Hours". Debby is top Girl Scout of her district, has 42 merit badges, including one for cooking and one for baking.

Appeal to Appetites With Novel Methods Of Food Preparation

IT ISN'T ALWAYS the elaborate meal that tastes the best, nor the most expensive food that makes the family call for more. When the food, no matter what it may be, is cooked perfectly and served attractively, it's bound to please.

Certain foods should not be allowed to overcook, as they will lose their appetite appeal because texture is destroyed. This is true of both fish and cheese, so popular in menus right now.

Fish is delicate and tender. To have it reach perfection, time its cooking to the minute. Then you'll have fish anyone can enjoy!

Cheese becomes stringy when cooked at too high temperatures. Cooked slowly and carefully, it's mouth-watering, creamy texture is preserved.

• • •

ADD A DELIGHTFUL garnish to foods if you find they aren't going over too well with the family and serve them as beautifully as you possibly can. You'll be surprised how much of a difference in their acceptance this little but thoughtful touch can make.

Pan-Baked Perch

Cover the fillets with the butter-crumb mixture. Sprinkle with chopped parsley, if desired. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate (350°) oven or until fish is done and the crumbs browned. Serve with pickled onions and beets.

You Can Make Laundering Speedier and Easier

If you can't get to all the ironing after it's dampened, store in plastic cloth or cellophane bags in refrigerator to prevent mildew.

Lace tablecloths and bedspreads need no ironing if they are placed on a curtain stretcher for drying. They shape beautifully.

Never dry blankets in harsh sunlight. Shade is best for keeping their color as well as their texture as new as possible.

Turkish towels will shrink slightly when they are washed the first few times as their knit is drawn closer together. They will reach maximum absorbency after four or five washings.

A bit of glycerine added to the last rinse for woolen things will make them softer and smoother. Do not dry any woolens near heat.

Truth About Easter

Lesson for April 9, 1950

"UP THIS WAY," writes a friend in a great city, "the hats and the bunny-rabbits have run away with Easter." The fact is, the world has stolen Easter and made something silly out of it. The world will not believe the truth about Easter, yet the world wants a holiday.

Dr. Foreman

The Man from Mars, visiting our planet at Easter time, would have a hard time guessing what the festival means. Rabbits? New clothes? A day off? The return of spring? Not at all, nothing of the sort. Bunnies and hats are gay; but the right word for Easter is not Gaiety, it is Glory.

God's Victory

EVEN IN churches you will not always hear the whole truth about Easter. You may hear that it is the festival of Returning Hope, or that it symbolizes new life, or that it stands for the triumph of faith over despair, or that it expresses our belief in immortality. In a way, all these ideas about Easter are true, but if that is all, then we have not yet got down to the truth about Easter.

The fact is—the fact which gives a solid ground for all these other facts—the first Easter was the day when God raised Jesus Christ from the dead. It was the day of God's victory over death, when the gates of death swung backward and the bars of death were broken.

The truth about Easter is that something happened on that day that never happened before and never will happen again. Because never before had the Son of God risen in personal triumph from the grave, and never will that have to be done over again.

If it were not for that fact, Jesus might have been remembered as a long-dead Jewish teacher, a hopeful but mistaken and defeated teacher, a name to be found only in encyclopaedias. But the truth about Easter is that Jesus is not dead, his hopes were not mistaken, he was not defeated, his Name is above every man! He is the Christian's living Lord.

His Power in Us

THAT STRANGELY TWISTED man Kierkegaard called Christianity "God's attack on man." You could not get that idea from the New Testament.

Marvelous as it is, Christianity is God offering to man the power to rise out of our dead selves, to do for us what we could never have done for ourselves. What has this to do with Easter? Just this: That when the Apostle Paul wants to explain what the power is which God sets at our disposal, what it is like and what it will do, he tells us it is the same power with which God raised Christ from the dead." (See 1 Cor. 6:14; Eph. 1:19,20; 2:6; Phil. 3:10.

You see the truth about Easter is that it is the day when the Christians celebrate the most tremendous act God ever performed on this planet, or rather that day when God brought to a climax the whole mighty action of the coming and the life and death of Christ. And that is the power which is available for the Christian.

A Christian Is Supernatural

IF ALL YOU WANT of God is to have him do something for you, then you are rather like a baby who keeps crying for some one to bring him more toys . . . but he stays a baby. If your want of God is to have him do something with you, in you and through you, then you are like a child who really wants to grow up.

The Christian is a supernatural being. As C. S. Lewis puts it, we are not God's little toy soldiers, we are intended to be his sons and daughters.

But if the Christ is the "first-born among many brethren" then here in this life those who accept him have access to the same power that wrought in him. And at the end of life we shall not be afraid, knowing that we belong to the same God who raised our Lord from the dead.

The glory of Easter is not something merely to be remembered or sung about; it is something to be experienced. The same God who conquered death "giveth us victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

the Highway Story
IOWA DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY

BY BOB HULLIHAN

A group of good friends got together on an Iowa highway some years ago and the story of that meeting is still told by patrolmen who attended.

There were four young men in the group, all part owners in a gas station located about two miles out of town at the bottom of a long hill. The men lived in town and each morning two of them would drive out to work at the station until late afternoon when the other two would drive out to take the night shift.

Business was good but, of course, it was seven-day-a-week grind. Perhaps the young men became bored with the routine. In any case, they developed a trick that gave the work day a stimulating twist.

When the two men who took the night shift were ready to leave town they would call the station. The partners on duty would then wait a few minutes, jump into their car and speed up the hill toward town.

The trick was one of timing. The two cars were supposed to meet half way up the hill. Then, at the last second, each driver would cut to his left across the center line and the cars would pass on the wrong side of the highway. Done at high speed, it was a neat, delicate trick - for a few weeks.

But there came an afternoon when one of the drivers was one second too late in cutting across the line. That's when the group of good friends got together - head-on, in the middle of the highway.

The old partnership of four is now a survivorship of two. This accident actually happened in Iowa.

SLEET STORM AND WIND CAUSED GREAT DAMAGE IN NORTH IOWA

Roof Caved In At Northern Lumber Co By Large Tree Falling

A heavy sleet storm struck over Iowa late Saturday night and Sunday, accompanied by a high wind which caused a great deal of damage to telephone, power lines and trees.

Nearly all North Iowa towns were isolated on long distance telephone service. Hundreds of rural lines were down and many power lines were out of commission, breaking under the heavy load of ice and swayed by the strong winds.

Damage In Klemme

The worst damage caused by the ice and wind in Klemme was at the Northern Lumber Company. A large cottonwood tree just east of the Lumber Company's building and back of Dr. D. P. Anderson's office, toppled over Sunday noon and fell onto the roof of the Lumber Company, crashing through the roof and breaking roof rafters over a large area.

Water from the rain and sleet then poured into the office, causing a great deal of damage and practically put the office out of business for a couple of days while repairs were made. Manager Sherwood stated the interior of the office would have to be re-finished, a new ceiling put in and perhaps a new floor which was water logged also.

The entire crew of carpenters at the Northern had torn out the damaged section of the roof Monday and replaced the new rafters so that further rains could do no damage.

Carpenter Injured

"Boots" Brinkman, a carpenter, suffered a broken nose while working on the roof. While the carpenters were prying up a broken rafter, it suddenly let go, striking Brinkman in the face, fracturing his nose.

Other Damage Caused By Ice

Bert Jones, manager of the Central Iowa Telephone Co., said that many rural telephone lines were down. Besides the heavy ice breaking the lines, many lines were broken by falling trees and heavy branches. A few power lines were down in Klemme but service was rapidly restored. A large tree near the Reformed Church toppled over but did not cause any damage. Many large branches were broken off under the heavy weight of ice and wind in the community.

Hancock County Treasurer Reports Collections For '50

TREASURER'S COLLECTIONS FOR FIRST QUARTER OVER ONE MILLION

Report Of Roy L. McMillin, County Treasurer For The Year 1950

Total tax to collect for Hancock County, year 1949 collectable in 1950 ------ $1,272,411.80

Amount of tax collected Jan, Feb and March ---- $656,217.00

Amount of Drainage collected 1st quarter ----- $105,037.89

This gives 51.60 per cent of the tax of total collected first quarter.

The following exemptions were paid into the tax account and this is taken off before the tax is paid by the individual.

Homestead exemptions for 1st half, check for ------ $65,899.98

Military exemption—repaid for soldiers exemptions, $5,802.54.

Value of Homesteads was increased to that you would get more as it is figured 25 mills on value up to $2500.00 or $62.50 being the maximum you can receive.

We have received the following checks for refund on the Agriculture Land credit for the following years:

1945 Payable in 1946

Total amount received $7,162.75

1946 Payable in 1947

Total amount received 20,562.45

Thus the refund for land credit did not mean much to any land owner for with the first refund we figured about 17 per cent of what would be due. This is all that will be allowed on the refund for the legislature did not appropriate enough to pay more.

On the 1946 tax we paid out 38.88 per cent of amount that would have been due each land owner. This refund is paid back to every owner of land where the school tax was above 15 mills and then we paid the per cent as far as the money would go. These checks will go in the mail in a short time. The owner of the land at that time gets the refund.

More work was done on the drainage districts during last year than usual and this years collections do run very high. A number of new district were established.

The Auto Department has collected for the year as follows:

Total license for 1950 up to April 1 amounted to $149,347.30. Of the above amount the county received as their share of the fees, $3,948.00. This amount goes to help pay the cost of operation of the County Treasurers office. We have issued license on cars before April 1st to over 4900, this is a record for this time of year.

Hancock County received from the gas tax for the year as follows: called gas and use tax, $58,705.00. This amount is sent from the State Department on tax collected. It is paid out according to area miles of road in the county.

While the total tax in Hancock County is near to $200,000 more than last year, yet the amount paid by each individual in many cases is lower. This being made possible by more assessments being made, and more personal property on the farm.

Many of the tax accounts are paid in full, especially on personal property, we try to collect this in full in the spring. Hancock County is free from debt and does not have any out-standing indebtiness.

The report for tax collections has been very good. People were very patient about the delay in being able to pay their tax. The tax lists were not turned in the County Treasurer as completed until nearly March first. Thus all collections had to be made in one third the time we have had before.

Under the new assessor law there were many changes in valuation and we did have a number of complaints to straighten out, yet most of the tax payers were satisfied that we tried to do a good job.

The total collections in the Treasurers office for the first quarter was up near one million dollars. Hancock County people always have been very good about paying their tax on time.

—Roy L. McMillin
Co. Treasurer.

DEFENDANTS WIN IN CIVIL ACTION

Goslin representing the estate of Robert Dale Goslin, deceased, vs. Algona Co-operative Creamery company and James Dean, which had been in progress in Hancock County district court for the past week, the petit jury found for the defendants at Garner early last Tuesday morning. The case grew out of a fatal accident in which the car driven by Robert Dale Goslin collided with a truck driven by James Dean on a gravel road northwest of Hutchins early last fall.

As perhaps you know, Hancock County has a new nurse, who began her duties January 1st. Miss Oxley remained in Hancock County the first week in January to assist the new nurse in getting acquainted with the county and the work. Several key people in the country were contacted in an effort to introduce her to some of the people in the county who would be helpful in assisting her with her work. This week of orientation did a great deal toward familiarizing her with her future duties.

Much interest has been shown in the Hancock County Dental Parade and several counties have written to ask if they might borrow our dental parade films to assist them in planning a dental parade in their own county. The fame of our Dental Parade must have traveled far and wide, the Nursing Service has recently received a letter from the county nurse in West Coxsackie, New York asking to borrow the films.

A series of four meetings was held at the Britt High School during February for the purpose of counceling the high school students on choosing a career. Various fields of endeavor were represented in this program, and a large percentage of the high school girls indicated an interest in nursing. The county nurse conducted the counceling of this field, and various phases of nursing and different types of positions that are open to a nurse were discussed. Two movies portraying the life of a student nurse were shown, in an effort to help the students formulate a mental picture of the type of life a student nurse leads and what she does day by day. The Counceling program was very successful and the students felt that they were helped to feel more familiar with the fields in which they were interested.

Plans are under way for the annual county pre-school program. Conferences with parents will be held during the month of April in nine towns in the county, and at these conferences arrangements will be made for a complete physical examination by the family doctor for each child. Each child beginning school needs to be in the best possible health so he will be better able to adjust to this new experience.

Hoover Report

EVERYONE who knows anything about the recommendations of the President's committee for the reorganization of the executive branch of the federal government thinks they are a good thing for the country and will save the taxpayers a lot of money if put into effect and the taxpayers are for that.

The trouble is, 68 per cent of the taxpayers or the people know nothing about this report or its recommendations and congress seldom, if ever, takes any action on any subject about which more than two-thirds of the people are ignorant.

The Gallup poll says this is true, that of the 31 per cent who do know something about the report, 25 per cent favor the main suggestions, 2 per cent were unopposed and four per cent had no opinion

But what's wrong when thousands of dollars have been spent and millions of words used in newspapers, magazines, phamplets, etc., and on the radio and television to tell the people about this report . . . better known as the Hoover report?

Several months ago it was reported in this column that some organizations were seeking to play politics and make the Hoover report an issue in this congressional campaign They still are Although as a matter of fact the people who comprise the Hoover committee itself have leaned over backward in attempting to avoid politics and approach the entire program objectively.

Axes to Grind

But what has happened in this: Several large organizations supporting the program have certain axes to grind Newspaper releases almost invariably read like an indictment of the Truman administration with such phrases as "sinful waste and extravagance of the vast army of bureaucrats" . . . or "despite recent improvements in many agencies of government, the 1951 budget still covers up much of the waste, duplication, payroll padding and inefficiencies exposed by the Hoover commission."

Now "payroll padding" is a felony. Congressman J. Parnell Thomas recently went to prison for payroll padding in his office. But the publicists for the Hoover report do not spare the adjectives, nor the inuendoes, nor outright libel such as was pointed out above

The United States chamber of commerce, through its president, engages in a dog fight with the powerful American Legion over recommendations on veterans expenditures . . . other organizations castigate the department of agriculture when the big farm organizations like the department.

Mr. Hoover, the only living former president, is featured throughout the publicity when most American remember his unfortunate administration. He is even featured before congressional committees as a governmental expert, although many Americans will never admit to his experience in governmental affairs.

Despite what many of these organizations may believe, the average American does not take kindly to attempts to make his government leaders look stupid, dishonest, nor his government the unholy mess the publicists have attempted to picture as a result of the Hoover report. And this is not to say that there are many instances of duplication, of waste, and even of inefficiency in some branches of the government

But this is to say that if brickbats are to be thrown in connection with the Hoover report or any other report, then they should be aimed at the source of all waste, extravagance, employment and government money, namely the congress

The executive branch of the government cannot spend what congress does not appropriate, nor can it initiate spending activities which congress does not authorize, nor can it hire personnel, unless congress gives its approval and furnishes the money.

Congress appropriates the money for the executive branch of the government to spend. Congress creates all these boards and commissions and agencies, says how much money they shall have, prescribes their duties and services and how many people they shall employ, governed strictly by the appropriation given.

Need People's Support

What the Hoover people should attempt to do to get the American people interested in this important problem is (1) to get Mr. Hoover out of the limelight; (2) immediately disclaim and stamp out the patent attempts to play politics by certain organizations; (3) try and get the big groups and organizations together before coming into a newspaper battle on various phases of the program; (4) make the publicity entirely objective.

Non-Itching Wool Underwear May Be Developed

Science may be on the verge of taking the itch out of woolen underwear.

That's not a promise yet. But the wool advisory committee of the agriculture department holds it out as a "possibility."

Getting rid of that itchy sensation will help American sheep growers—mainly Westerners—sell more of their product, the committee said. It cited this as one of the many reasons why there should be more extensive research into ing and marketing practic

"The new or modified imparted by these trea clude shrink-proofing, spot resistance and wate qualities," the committee

The committee asserted number of stock sheep in try is now at the lowe 1867, and that an increas occur until there is greate in the industry.

Formation of Child's Food Habits Is Among Mother's Major D

By HELEN BARTLETT

Teaching a child to eat balanced diets is among the major tasks of a mother, no matter how tired or overworked she may be.

During his first five years, the little child is passing through his formative years.

His food preferences, made now, will influence his health all of his life. Therefore, it is a mother's solemn duty to do all in her power to avoid finnickiness in her child. She really must not neglect to offer him all the new foods on the diet list suitable to his age so that he will accept new dishes with a spirit of cooperation and to assure him the variety of foods needed by his rapidly-growing young body.

Among the absolutely vital foods are the fresh, leafy green vegetables eaten raw, other vegetables eaten raw or cooked and raw fresh fruits. From these delicious and nutritious ingredients, a mother may de ticing small salads, only to small fry sniffing disdainfully culinary works of art.

She should not be disc discouraged, but should cling ciously to the knowledge that perseveres tactfully and pa enough that her child eventu learn to like these important

Frequently, too, a child will food purely as an unfavora action to clumsy mother who nags, forces, threatens, sc otherwise shows concern.

Does a psychoanalyst give advice?

Answer: Not if he adheres to the strict psychoanalytic technique. For the object of this technique is not to remodel you according to somebody else's pattern but to help you find out what you are and make up your own mind what you want to do about it. A person who told you that you should—or should not—get a divorce, for example, would be untrue to the psychoanalytic method. By the time that you have recognized the unconscious reasons why you've been unhappy in your marriage you'll know what you want and ask advice from no one.

The result of treating 534 consecutive cases of cancer of the lip by radium showed that the overall survival of life was 89.5 per cent (about nine in every 10 cases) for five years after treatment.

Dr. Burkell from his review of these cases states:

1. Cancer of the lip can be cured by radium treatment in a very high percentage of cases provided treatment is given early.

2. The choice of method in use of radium is not important provided careful care and planning are used.

3. Radium is not the treatment of choice where neighboring glands are involved.
